FIVE FEET FROST IN DRIVING PILES

BRIDGE BUILDERS USE STEAM POINTS TO THAW GROUND FOR FOUNDATIONS

(By Associated Press.)
SEWARD, Alaska, May 6. — The Alaskan engineering commission is preparing to push work this summer on the government railroad from this port to the coal fields of Matanuska River.

The work of this summer will be divided into three sections; the first to be the reconstruction of the old Alaskan Northern line from Seward to Mile 71 on Kern Creek. The second section will be the new work on Turnagain Arm from Mile 71 to Anchorage, and the third will be the completion of the line from Anchorage to Chickaloon Creek, in the mid-section of the Matanuska coal deposits, which has been found best for naval purposes.

In addition to this work, the commission will extend the main line of the Seward-Fairbanks railroad, which in reality is a separate project from the canal road, in the Talkeetna Forks of the Susitna River.

Active work on the Alaskan Northern reconstruction has already commenced, nearly a month ahead of the season, so urgent is the emergency under which this project is being rushed to completion. Five feet of frost is in the ground and at Resurrection River the bridge-builders are thawing down with steam points, after the manner of placer miners, to drive piling for the bridge.

BIMETALLISM MAY BE THE OUTCOME

POSSIBILITY NOT SO VAGUE AS SOME PEOPLE IN AUTHORITY IMAGINE

The San Francisco Chronicle says editorially:

"There is reasonable ground for the expectation that the money question which so many supposed was permanently settled by the United States adopting the gold standard, will again be reopened. The rapid rise in the price of silver is directing attention to the possibility, and evidence is accumulating which points to the advance being, in part at least, influenced by the belief that the demand for a great quantity of basic money cannot be met by the present or prospective output of gold, and that a resort to bimetalism will become necessary.

"If this opinion gains ground the attitude of the classes with divergent interests will become a subject for speculation. It is not impossible that the former opponents of bimetalism, the so-called creditor class, may be arrayed on the side or remonetization of silver, in which event it is not likely that the contest, if precipitated, would be a prolonged one.

"Under ordinary circumstances the creditor could be counted upon to antagonize any movement which had for its purpose the depreciation of the value of the accepted legal tender metal, or legislation tending to prevent the troubles resulting from an inadequate or contracting currency. But the circumstances are no longer ordinary. They have become abnormal, and threaten the creation of a condition which will be full of menace to creditors, who may be glad to accept a compromise which would promise to avert a greater evil than that threatened by an increase of the volume of metallic money available for the payment of debts.

"Obviously the annual production of four hundred millions, even if it can be maintained indefinitely, will not come near to meeting requirements, and a struggle for gold will follow which must inevitably result in driving many nations into the financial straits of an irredeemable paper currency, or perhaps something worse.

"It is this latter possibility that contains the real menace to the creditor class and makes those who belong to it see the advisability of broadening the base on which the paper circulation must rest, unless 'flatism' is frankly resorted to by governments. The hope or the prospect of averting such a contingency may make the financial world accept with complacency a proposition to adopt international bimetalism on some ratio which would comport with the changed conditions of production and the enlarged commerce of mankind."

Gold is now a contraband of war. This isn't because it can be worked up into munitions, but because the fellow who can seize it needs it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AVERILL SUSTAINED BY SUPREME COURT

DECISION IN A CASE THAT RAN THE GAMUT FROM JUSTICE TO HIGHEST COURT

The supreme court yesterday handed down a decision in the case of McLeod vs. Averill defining the rights of litigants to certain costs accruing in the case of a bill for collection for professional services. The case was taken to the appellate court on a writ of certiorari. The application grew out of the suit of McLeod vs. Bertram which was decided in favor of Bertram in the justice court. This verdict was appealed to the district court where a jury found for McLeod for the full amount of his bill with costs aggregating $117. A motion was made by the defendant to disallow the costs and the court struck out all costs except the clerk's fees amounting to $17. Plaintiff claimed that he was entitled to the fees and sued out a writ of certiorari which brought the finding before the supreme court for review. The upper court sustained Judge Averill's ruling. P. M. Bowler and Wm. Forman were attorneys for the plaintiff and J. K. Chambers for defendant.

AMUSEMENTS

BUTLER THEATER

A double bill will be presented on the Butler program this evening, consisting of two features in place of one. The first is a Charlie Chaplin Essanay two-reel production, "A Night in the Show," which is conceded by all to be the best production ever presented by the celebrated comedian. This picture has been shown at the Butler before, but many requests received for its return is the reason for its appearance on today's program. The Chaplin releases have been exhausted and there will be no more shown until the four-reel "Carmen," or the new Chaplin Mutuals which has not as yet been released, can be secured.

The other feature on the program tonight will be a Blue Ribbon production entitled "A Night Out," featuring May Robson, a famous Broadway stage star whose name is known wherever the name theatrical is known. She has a following all over the world and is considered one of the foremost American actresses. No better vehicle could have been obtained for this talented actress and in her character portrayal of a young spirit in an elderly body, she further endears herself to the many who loved and admired her on the legitimate stage. The program is made up of two A-No. 1 comedies and it can well be called a day of mirth at the Butler, for everyone who is present can promise themselves many a good laugh. Tomorrow, the eminent dramatic star, John Mason, one of the greatest actors of the modern stage and Hazel Dawn, the captivating young star, will be seen in "The Fatal Card," the great dramatic success which has been adapted to the screen. It is the first time in the history of motion pictures that two stage stars of such individual importance as the two named in this production have been jointly presented in a photoplay. Included also in the program tomorrow is a Paramount-Biary cartoon comedy, "Col. Heeza Liar and the Pirates," which is absolutely guaranteed to please everyone, it being the greatest work in this line of pictures the world has ever seen. On Monday and Tuesday, Miss Whiting, the clever little entertainer, will endeavor to please you with an entire change of songs.
