CANDIDATE OF WORTH AND POPULARITY

THERE is no question that the Republican ticket will be led by T. F. (Barney) Moran on the 7th of November. Reports from all over the state are to the effect that he will run in advance of any other candidate named on any ticket and it is forecasted that he will not lose a single county. This is because he is a man of worth and integrity. One who realizes that his position is a judicial one and he does not use partisan politics to bolster his cause, but stands on his record as a judge, a clean cut record, one without a stain or blemish. He is far and away the most capable man that could have been nominated for this position and the voters of Nevada who know him, and he is known to nearly all, realize this fact, and any opposition to his selection is not deemed in any way serious, although there might have been a contest if an opponent would have been selected who had the preliminary training on the district bench, or even in a justice court.

WHY IS THIS SMELTER IDLE?

THE copper industry in the United States never was so profitable as it is at present. The red metal is selling for a record price and the by-products are bringing splendid compensation. Yet there is a large and fully equipped smelter on the line of the Nevada-California railway at Thompson which has been idle for several years. There are mines in Mason valley that were hitherto worked at a profit but are now unmanned. Luning district, particularly New York canyon, is working under a slow bell because the ores must be shipped long distances for treatment.

Just why the Gunn-Thompson smelter is not operating, to make money for its owners and to develop the mineral empire in which it is located is a difficult question to answer. If it should go in blast again it would mean a wonderful revival in the copper industry in that portion of the state, particularly in Mineral county.

At the present time the matte of the United States is oversold and there are few deliveries contracted for under from six to twelve months. Orders are coming in for hundreds of millions of pounds, and there is assurance of preservation of present prices, with probability of further advancement.

AN IMPORTANT ADMISSION

FOLLOWING is an excerpt from a speech delivered by Hon. Charles Curtis of Kansas in the senate of the United States and is taken from the Congressional Record of August 22, 1916:

President Wilson admits the present tariff law was expected to injure the laborer and the farmer.

In his message to congress of September 14, 1914, urging what he calls "a war emergency tax," President Wilson made it clear that the very large increase in imports which the Underwood tariff bill would have certainly induced but for the war was being prevented by the war, and he asked that a new revenue measure be provided that should supply the loss in revenues resulting therefrom, which he estimated at $100,000,000. The average duty on all imports under the Underwood law was at that time nearly 15 per cent. To have raised this $100,000,000 from customs would have required, therefore, the importation of $700,000,000 additional merchandise. Add to this the average duty and we have $800,000,000 of imported merchandise which the president says he and his party intended the people of the United States should consume in lieu of an equal amount of domestic merchandise.

What would have become of our industries by this time had imported merchandise taken the place of domestic to the extent of $800,000,000 per annum? And what would have become of American workmen had they been deprived of the wages incident to the production of $800,000,000 worth of merchandise? And what would have become of the American farmers had they been deprived of the privilege of feeding these workmen? Remember that coal and other supplies, repairs and maintenance of plants, and even transportation are largely labor. The loss to labor, according to their own estimates, would have been at least $600,000,000 per annum. Truly the war, in thwarting the purposes of a Democratic president and a Democratic congress, has been kind to American labor and American agriculture.

CANDIDATES SHOULD PAY FOR NEWSPAPER SPACE

F. A. MERRIAM of the Mount Vernon (N. Y.) Daily Argus says that candidates for political offices should pay for the space they occupy in newspapers, and he will have the support of every independent newspaper which free publicity seekers try to drag on or cajole.

The American Press, which carries Mr. Merriam's statement, says that every candidate for every office in which the voters of Mount Vernon are interested has free access to the Argus columns at regular advertising rates, and every such article or advertisement is marked "Political Advertisement."

For many years, candidates for political office have been getting columns of free publicity in the pages of their party paper and not paying for it.

Mr. Merriam shut down on this practice five or six years ago. Now every fall his paper carries numbers of display advertisements, not only of the opposing candidates, but the candidates of his own party. He finds that it pays, that the candidates expect to pay and that as a rule they are excellent and prompt pay.

Many papers are following a similar rule and it will not be very long before all publicity given candidates for political office will be paid for except in those newspapers which are party subsidized or whose owners are running them solely for political purposes.

It is no more than right that a politician should pay for his advertising space just as a merchant pays for his space. The politician is seeking something he needs—the support of the people and the salary and to attain an end he desires. The business man is after customers to purchase his goods. Both must have publicity or fail. And both should pay for it.

But the political office seeker, while recognizing the value of newspaper publicity, too often is disinclined to pay for it. He resents being asked to pay for it, says the Reno Journal. One reason why the local Tammanyites spend so much time denouncing the Journal is because they cannot get a large part of the paper, free of cost, for advertising purposes and because some of them have been asked to pay bills that have been overdue for years.

IRISH ADMINISTRATION ATTACKED BY REDMOND

(By Associated Press.) LONDON, Oct. 19.—Parliament, after a set debate in the house of commons, decided by a majority of 197 that it was undesirable at present to discuss Irish controversial domestic politics.

The Irish question was brought up by John Redmond, the nationalist leader, who introduced a motion to the effect that "the system of government at present maintained in Ireland is inconsistent with the principle for which the allies are fighting in Europe, and is, or has been, mainly responsible for the recent unhappy events and for the present state of feeling in that country."

An amendment to this motion, introduced by John F. D. Rawlinson, representing Cambridge University, declared that "it is not desirable at the present time to discuss controversial matters of domestic politics."

This amendment was adopted by a vote of 303 to 106, thus eliminating the Redmond motion.

The debate reached a high level, notably the speech of Mr. Redmond, attacking the government administration of Ireland, especially with regard to questions of recruiting and the treatment of rebel prisoners, and that of David Lloyd George, secretary for war, who made a conciliatory speech which did much to remove the adverse impression created in the nationalist ranks by the speeches of Premier Asquith and the chief secretary.
