THE WAR COMES HOME.

THE world war has been brought at last to the door of every American household. The sinking of the Tuscania last night by the lurking, lusty Hun was a horrible tragedy. It was not as though our boys perished on the battlefield, where they could see the white of the enemy's eyes and give blow for blow. It was not a thrust by a courageous host, but was more cowardly than—but where can a comparison be found?

No one, except the executives of the war department, knows who were the boys who perished. One of them may be a lad that we sent away with a smile but a few weeks ago. He may have been the son of the white-haired woman who sews every day at the Red Cross, mingling tears and prayers with the plying of her needle. "Could it have been —?" gasps the proud father who so recently said: "Go, son, and bravely battle for the freedom of the world."

Like a thief in the night, the Hun stealthily approached, not doing battle as would a civilized creature, but in cowardly fashion emerged from the waves, hurled his missile and submerged. Oh, it must give a thrill of intense joy to the gunner who fires at a periscope and notes the oil that comes up to coat the sea, realizing that he has put an end to the existence of a crew of pestilential rats, who boast of medals won by the slaughter of women and babies. A rattlesnake sounds its warning. The Kaiser's hirelings are like the copperhead that lurks in the grass.

Yes, the war has come home to all of us, and the alien enemy may well keep his mouth shut in America. And not only the alien enemy, but the more dangerous of all foes, the citizen who is disloyal, who does not arise to the situation and fight by word if not by deed for his country, his flag and for the sorrowing, suffering people of the allied nations. Let us spur on the administration to speed, accuracy and results. Let us give until it hurts, denying nothing that is of need, so that peace will come to the world and damnation to those who have trampled on the Holy Cross itself and set back civilization for centuries.

TALKING ABOUT THE WEATHER.

THIS morning when you peeped out of the window you discovered that the clouds had at last busied themselves and that there was a slight covering of snow on the landscape. It may have spelled discomfort to you, the donning of goloshes, for instance, and perhaps the sweeping off of your sidewalk, but that is more than counterbalanced by the benefit that will accrue.

Do you realize that Manager Burnham of the Water Company of Tonopah has already put his vacuum pump to work at Rye Patch? That is a reserve equipment that usually is only used in summertime when the subterranean flow has dropped to its lowest ebb. Usually at this season there is a plentiful supply, but the hills are bare of snow and there has been no rainfall, while more than half the winter season has departed.

Happily Tonopah is not an agricultural community, or its plight would be worse. Still, we need water, even for chasers, and it will be very agreeable to us if the weather man, who, though new at the job here, seems very competent and painstaking, will give us a couple of feet of the beautiful, either in one chunk or in installments, before we begin to wonder if the red tanks on the shin of Mt. Brougher can be kept filled this season.

TAKEN FROM THE TELEGRAPH.

Wonder if any of "our" boys—our home boys—went down with the Tuscania. If you don't grit your teeth, fellows, you're not human.

Speed up, Washington! The Bonanza, whether its sphere is great or small, will be camping on your trail from now on, and for no political reason. Give 'em hell, Mr. President!

Our wires yesterday said that Baker did not approve of Gardner having a cruiser named for him. He was a patriot. He left his desk in congress to don khaki, and died in the uniform. Be careful, Baker, or you won't get a monument such as Gardner will have, a monolith erected by American citizens.

A war saving stamp book now costs $4.13. Here is your chance to make "13" a lucky number.

Whether the coming bond issue is to be on a basis of 4 or 4 1/2 per cent interest, it will be popular. It is the general interest in the object of the loan that will make it go.

In spite of all the blizzards and other drawbacks, Uncle Sam has demonstrated that when it comes to handling railroads he is not exactly what you would call a slouch.

Those Mexicans seems to think they'll be regarded as out of the game if they do not fire on the United States patrol every now and then.

It is really amusing the way England chortles over mashed potatoes and boasts of the dish as a discovery.

Boston objects to a proposed surtax on motor vehicles. Indeed, Boston has consistently opposed almost every kind of tax from time of the famous "Tea Party" clear on down.

A laying hen was accidentally killed when hit by a piece of tiling blown from a roof. If that isn't tragedy, how do you spell it?

What with drills and hikes and guard duty and camp chores, the soldiers really do have rather arduous times—but they have also their Smilge books.

"Map experts go to France." Europe needs them. It will take an entire regiment of them to straighten out the boundary lines when the war is over.

It's a great thing to know that in Germany and Austria, as well as in the free countries of the allies, organized labor is rallying to the cause of world liberty.

Bryan continues to imagine that the extermination of alcohol is of more importance than the extinction of the Kaiser.

"Packers Refuse to Open Vaults for the Government."

Headline. Are they keeping their meat in vaults now?

Now that it has been decided that an American woman married to an alien cannot vote, she might picket the federal court.

A wooden-legged man has been accepted for military service in Massachusetts. In Germany they accept wooden-headed men for the diplomatic service.

A woman is charged with stealing a Pekingese pup and carrying it away in her knitting bag. Maybe she mistook it for a ball of yarn.

If any further proof were needed that Germany is in desperate straits, the announcement that her breweries must close down clinches the argument. Fritz without his beer is certainly on the "friz."

NOTES ON SPORTING EVENTS

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Opinions among followers of eastern college athletics appear to indicate radical changes in intercollegiate contests after the war. Up to the present time there has been no concrete suggestion or plan offered, incorporating the ideas under discussion, but it is considered likely that there will be rapid progress in this direction once the agitation reaches a plane above idealistic propaganda. Notwithstanding the attitude of a certain faction to the contrary, it is generally conceded that intervarsity competition is the stimulus necessary to lift participation in exercise and sport above the level of daily college routine.

Just how to accomplish this, while giving opportunity for participation in these games to hundreds of students instead of a chosen few specialists of experts, is the problem which must be mastered by those who are advocating the change. That much of the unnecessary and unscholastic glamor will be stripped from such intercollegiate contests appears inevitable, but beyond this point suggested action merges into discussion. But one suggestion looking toward readjustment in a prominent eastern intercollegiate sport has been advanced to date.

This is the proposal to supercede the intercollegiate championship regatta with a series of short, dual boat races in which each college crew would meet each rival in turn during the spring rowing season. Just how this would increase, to any extent, the number of oarsmen now competing is not made clear. Providing that a given college crew was to row even a one-mile race against a rival eight each Saturday during May and June, as football eleven play contests in the autumn, it is likely that the coach, once he had seated a satisfactory and winning combination in the shell would send about the same eight to the line each week-end.

That there is need of greater participation in sport exercises and training by the average student is pointed out by no less an authority than Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, director of Hemenway gymnasium, Harvard university. Dr. Sargent, in a recent article in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin, states, in part:

"Presumably the students who enter Harvard come to prepare themselves physically as well as mentally and morally for life's great game. Recent examinations have shown that from 25 per cent to 50 per cent of our young men are physically unprepared for military service. History shows us that gymnastics and athletics were originally practiced for the purpose of preparing men for war. Gymnastics furnished the preliminary training; athletics afforded the opportunity for competition. "In view of the conditions confronting us as a people, would it not be a wiser plan so to conduct our athletics as not only to select the fit and eliminate the unfit from the major contests which are the basis of the present system—of which I approve as far as it goes—but so to modify, supplement and conduct these or other athletic contests as to encourage the unfit to continue their practice and try and make themselves more fit for the duties of a citizen and a possible soldier?"

The one great difficulty that is continuously operating against such a modification of our present-day method is the high standard demanded by the candidates of our major athletic sports. In my opinion, any game or sport that has become so highly organized as to require a special aptitude or ability on the part of every player who would engage in it has ceased to be of practical service in a democratic community, except as a source of occasional entertainment and amusement. "It is almost impossible to keep up any interest in a highly specialized game after leaving college, for the simple reason that not enough skilled players can be found to form a team. It is largely on account of the simplicity of the game, and the readiness with which one may find some of equal ability with whom to play that tennis and golf are proving so popular of late."

APPEAL IS MADE TO MEN WHO TOIL

(By Associated Press.) LONDON, Feb. 7.—G. N. Barnes, labor member of the war cabinet, in a message to his "fellow workers in the cause of labor," begs them to continue their steady support in the prosecution of the war for democracy.

"Democracy," he says, "is at one and the same time on its trial and in the crucible. If this war is lost by the allies the cause of democracy is under eclipse for generations to come, and we leave to our children a heritage of trouble. "Might I ask labor throughout the country to be steady for the final phases of the war? I ask it not to be confused by lying statements. It was said, for instance, that there had been meetings of financiers abroad while the government was refusing to allow labor to confer with enemy subjects workmen. The statement was absolutely false. Another equally false statement was that we had refused to define our aims with our allies and particularly with the revolutionary government of Russia."

BROTHERS THREE.

(By Associated Press.) LONDON, Feb. 7.—The appointment of Lord Hugh Cecil to a seat in the king's privy council brings about the unique situation of three brothers being members of that honorable body at the same time, the three being Lord Robert Cecil, Lord Hugh Cecil and the Marquis of Salisbury.

EVEN SCHOOLMARMs GETTING SCARCE

(By Associated Press.) CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Faced by prospects of an increasing demand for and diminishing supply of school teachers for 1918-19, the employment service of the federal department of labor is sending to every state superintendent of education in the country a questionnaire seeking accurate information as to the number of teachers available for next year and possible sources of supply for vacancies.

The Chicago branch of the service has let it be known that the greatest difficulty thus far has been in obtaining instructors for high schools, the greater part of whose teaching forces have hitherto been composed of young men. Numbers of these instructors have been called to the national army or have enlisted. The many special services which the government has been organizing have also drawn heavily on this class of teachers and on senior college students from among whom are usually recruited the annual additions to the school staffs.

Educational authorities have viewed with some concern the growing inroads on their profession which the war is making. They have, in many instances, started organized efforts to fill the gaps in their ranks and have emphasized the importance of maintaining high standards of instruction in the public schools. In this connection Mary C. C. Bradford of Denver, Colo., president of the National Education association, has addressed an appeal to the teachers of the country, in which she said, in part:

"The school teachers of the United States are hereby called to the colors of the American republic. The schools are the laboratory of good citizenship. The children are little citizens and must be guided in such present experiences as will make certain their future dedication to the welfare of the republic. The junior membership of the Red Cross, through the school auxiliary, offers an unsurpassable medium through which the patriotic activities of the children can make themselves felt. Beginning with Lincoln's birthday and lasting until Washington's birthday, a nation-wide effort is to be made in behalf of increasing the junior membership. "The National Education association offers every teacher in the land the high privilege of participation in this great campaign. The school organization of each state needs your help in this form of character education."

DEPUTY IS SENTENCED FOR INCITING STRIKE

(By Associated Press.) AMSTERDAM, Feb. 6.—Wilhelm Dittman, a socialist deputy, testified before the court martial over the German strike that only the demonstration was against peace annexations and in favor of peace by an understanding.

Dittman was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for inciting high treason. He was given two months additional for resisting public authority.

He said that the strike would have lasted but three days "if the government had entered into negotiations as requested by the intellectual organizer of the strike, who was Admiral Von Tirpitz."

He testified he had no connection with affairs in Russia.

LADIES, TAKE NOTICE.

(By Associated Press.) STOCKHOLM, Feb. 7.—Some of Christianstad's leading citizens do not intend this year to bare their heads to winter's biting blasts, regardless of rules of courtesy. They published in the city's papers a notice to the effect that, when meeting acquaintances in the street they intend, "during the cold season, merely to make military salute and not remove the head covering. And request all to respond in the same manner."
