Third Big Drive Begun and Germans Sacrifice Thirty Army Divisions

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sunday, June 9.—Notwithstanding the great forces the Germans threw into the line between Montdidier and Noyon, they didn't achieve any considerable advance.

and three-quarter miles, about one-fourth of the entire line of attack. The gain was stopped on the wings with such losses that five divisions were put out of commission.

The Germans were forced to bring up troops at the last moment in order to avoid giving alarm to the allies. The columns deployed from the column of march into the line of attack as they arrived. This operation requires hours and exposes the men to unpleasant artillery fire unless the element of surprise is preserved.

German attacking troops coming out to envelope the heights dominating the Matz valley offered a splendid target for French gunners. The enemy had to throw in several divisions before they were able to drive forward to Resons and Marcell along the Roy road.

SENSATIONAL RAID ON THE MARKET WHEN JIM BUTLER AND WEST END SEE SAW 30 POINTS IN ONE HOUR

(By Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, June 10.—The supreme court sustained the right of the holder of a silver claim to follow a vein indefinitely in an opposite direction where the crest or the apex or anticline is within that claim.

The suit was brought by the Jim Butler Tonopah Mining company to recover the value of ore extracted from beneath the surface of their claims by the West End Consolidated Mining company.

apex existed and contended that the vein was in the form of a roll. The lower courts sustained this contention in part but ruled that the crest of the roll constituted an apex and the West End had the right to operate the vein in an opposite direction on both sides of the point.

Briefly this tells the story of the West End-Butler litigation contest over the right to follow the MacNamara ledge into Jim Butler ground. The truth came out after a most sensational raid on the market in which an effort was made to stampede holders of West End into selling by circulating a report that the decision was in favor of the Jim Butler.

Shortly after the opening of the stock market this morning a report was current that the United States supreme court had handed down an opinion reversing the decision of the lower court in the West End-Jim Butler case and awarding the disputed territory to the Jim Butler. The report came from Sparks in Philadelphia stating that at the office of the Jim Butler company it was announced that the court had acted favorably to that company.

Hugh Brown, attorney for the Butler interest, did not receive any confirmation and the street was left in doubt as to the facts. The report sent in by Sparks read: "The ticker says Butler gets the decision." Whatever influence was responsible for the rumor must have made a neat scalp as Butler went up to 88 cents from Saturday's close of 73 bid. West End dropped from $1.07 bid at the close Saturday to 80 and then reacted to $1.10, with sales, when it was found that the report was without any authority.

Just before the close of the exchange at noon a message was delivered relating that the court had ruled in favor of the West End. This caused the pendulum to swing to the other extreme and buying took the place of the selling movement that had been forced by bringing pressure against timid holders of West End stock. In a few minutes a further confirmation was received stating that the officers of the Jim Butler in Philadelphia conceded the verdict to be in favor of the West End. This led to heavy buying orders for West End which were further accelerated by the knowledge of the company's ground around the Ohio shaft showing up richer than the management ever had hope of reaching. At 2 o'clock the bid for West End was $1.27, with sales, while Butler was quoted at 75 bid.

The heavy bidding for the winning side is due to the necessity now for dividing the impounded earnings which have been tied up by order of the district court of Nye county in the hands of the West End company which has been keeping a separate account of every pound of ore raised from the disputed territory. The amount held subject to this decision in round figures is $370,000 and the distribution of this would be equivalent to the company's earnings for the year.
