DIFFERENT METHODS

THE British and Canadian recruiting departments can give a lesson to the United States in advertising. When the men at the head of the departments of these countries want to reach their countrymen throughout the United States they buy space and get the desired publicity while Washington prefers to beg publishers to print their business cards. No one has been able to explain why our government insists on commandeering space from the patriotic newspapers of the United States. The rule is not applied to any other line of business or there would be such a howl that the administration would quickly change its tactics. Imagine what would happen were the government to simply tell manufacturers that they should deliver whatever was wanted without receiving a penny in return. Nevertheless, this has been the case with the papers which have nothing but space to sell. That is their only article of commerce and, when the publishers are told they must yield gracefully to every demand there is nothing else to do but to comply with the demand regardless of its injustice. Yesterday the Bonanza printed a notice from the British and Canadian recruiting depot addressed to men of British descent. This advertising was sent in without any plea for special concessions for the advertisers felt they were receiving full value in return and were willing to pay for the accommodation. The same principle prevails wherever the British flag flies and to the papers whose columns are used to make known the wants of the recruiting department.

AMERICANS AS THEY ARE

IN view of the performances of the American troops since they were brought into active service as recognized units brigaded under their own American commanders, the German leaders will have to recant much of the stuff which they have been giving out as their opinion of the American soldier:

The great army over the water cannot swim and cannot fly; it will not come.—The Prussian minister of Finance, Herr Hertg, in his budget speech, January 16, 1918.

The German press, after a long period of silence, now contains stray references to the American army, which are evidently intended to swell little by little into a demonstration that it is of little value. The Frankfurter Zeitung in a weekly review of the military situation that France has now been successfully impregnated with the German doctrine that Hindenburg is gradually exhausting the reserves of the allies, and concludes as follows:

The problem of the Germans' fight against the Anglo-French reserves now wears an aspect quite different from the artificial picture of the last few weeks. Hindenburg's blows are destroying the best fighting forces; President Wilson is sending an unorganized and unpractised mass.

France will have to go on bearing the main burden, for it is she that provides the best soldiers for the western front. It took years before the Englishman was an efficient fighter, and the Americans start with considerably less favorable conditions, while the German armies have added immensely to their knowledge and experience of war in the meantime.

General von Arz, the chief of the Austrian general staff, who is now said to have been dismissed, has also attempted to dispose of the American army in conversation with the Berlin correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse—a conversation which, curiously enough, was mainly devoted to enthusiastic praise of militarism in Spain. General von Arz said:

You ask me whether American help could provide any sort of substitute for the loss of the masses of Russians, even if it reached the French battlefield in the fullest measure of the wishes and hopes of the allies—which must be doubted, if only because the activity of the German submarines is bound to produce disturbance and confusion in the transport dispositions of the American army. No, I regard it as impossible. One must not forget that at the beginning of the war we had against our fronts from seven to eight millions of Russian soldiers, for the most part men with years of training; in any case capable fighters, and simply perfect in the modesty of their requirements. In comparison with that, what are a million or a million and a half of Americans, unaccustomed to war, with short training and no experience, and with their elevated ideas of living and total want of appreciation of the hardships of war?

General von Arz added grandiloquently:

Not words, and not promises of conceited self-estimation, but deeds of strength, organization, and intellectual foresight will determine the final success.

GREATEST ELECTRIC GENERATING PLANT IN WORLD AT NIAGARA

(By Associated Press) BUFFALO, N. Y., July 31.—One of the greatest water development projects of the many centering about Niagara Falls has been launched on the Canadian side of the river. It contemplates an immediate production of 300,000 electrical horsepower, or equal to approximately one half the present total development on both sides of the river, and it may expand to 1,000,000 horsepower. Actual work on the new channel was begun recently by the Ontario Hydro commission. There were no ceremonies and the launching of the work was virtually unknown to the general public. The channel will encircle the city of Niagara Falls, Ont., one running from the Welland river, a tributary of the Niagara above the cataract, to the escarpment below Queenston heights. The power house will be located on the river level almost at the foot of Brock's monument.

The channel is the first one planned to get the full benefit of the difference in level between Lakes Erie and Ontario, approximately 300 feet. The old companies, with power plants located close to the foot of the cataract, get a head of about 200 feet. The additional 100 feet head, it is estimated, will make it possible to develop the 300,000 horsepower with the same flow of water required to develop 100,000 horsepower at the falls.

While the units under construction for the power house are planned to produce only 300,000 horsepower, the canal itself will be built to allow a future flow of water capable of trebling this volume.

The Ontario Hydro commission is a provincial body, appointed by the Ontario government. It distributes power to Ontario municipalities within a radius of 200 miles of the falls at low cost. A large part of the current generated on the Canadian side, formerly exported and distributed by an American corporation, has been cut off. Canadian power for Canadian industries has been the motto of Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the commission, and war conditions have

CANDIDATE EVANS ON PRUSSIANISM

Charles R. Evans, candidate for the Democratic nomination for congressman, arrived in Ely Thursday afternoon. This is Mr. Evans' second visit to White Pine county, to learn more about the wonderful mining and agricultural resources, and make a more thorough acquaintance with the people. He is experiencing no difficulty in the getting-acquainted program, and he already feels very much at home in this particular section of the state.

"It is my purpose to travel all over our great state and endeavor to thoroughly learn of its undeveloped resources, as it would be a fitting monument to any man to aid in their development.

"There is a certain compensation in meeting new friends and old friends with young hearts and young faces. Never before was there such an outpouring of loyalty as there now is for justice of our arms. They are going in as just a war as ever sent a nation to battle. Wherever you go in Nevada, it is the same enthusiasm, confidence and devotion to our cause. This peace-loving nation has perhaps three million enlisted men and as many more as will be needed to win completely. Americans by birth and Americans by adoption are aroused and inspired by the spirit of devotion to their country and to mankind. Our boys are carrying on to a great victory and it must be a complete victory, leaving Germany only when it is a modern republic; where all printed thought advocating Prussianism will be obliterated from the earth; reducing the Krupp gun works into pig iron and throwing every iron cross into the melting pot.

"Conscience assures confidence that we shall state the peace. Never have men of any age seen what we are seeing. Never have so many new problems thrust themselves upon men and women for settlement. All of us must be, first and last, Americans. We must know how to win, and how to adjust our affairs, our homes and our lives to new conditions. And let our prayer be that a Divine favor may grant to us that the freedom of speech and the power of right thinking may continue to grow and endure until the end of time."—White Pine News.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE TIED UP BY THE SCARCITY OF SHIPS

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, July 31.—Commercial relations between the United States and South America are in a serious condition because of the war. The lack of shipping has caused a decrease in the amount of manufactured goods exported to Argentina, and the factories of that country are unable to meet the demand. Some of the factories require raw materials that have formerly been obtained in the United States and have been compelled to shut down or greatly to curtail their forces.

The entrance of the United States into the war marked the end of extensive shipping between this country and Argentina. Besides a few steamships some sailing vessels still visit Argentina, according to consular advices, but they are so small that navigation is dangerous and they do not even approximate the demands of commerce. The most needed articles are heavy iron castings and coal.

Argentine business men are greatly concerned because some of the vessels arriving at Buenos Ayres have come in ballast, caused, they say, by the fact that they were sent away from the United States hurriedly to get the cargoes of products in Argentina that are needed in this country.

The United States has a credit of $60,000,000 in Buenos Ayres which will be increased, according to this information, by $40,000,000 to be used as a basis of exchange in trade. It is said this situation requires diplomatic arrangement and that this is one of the affairs to occupy the attention of Ambassador Naon, who has just returned to Washington after six months absence.

Materials from Argentina sought by the United States and the other nations at war with Germany include beef, sheep hides and wool.

principally. According to official figures recently issued by the Argentine government there are 30,000,000 sheep in the republic as compared with 43,000,000 in 1914, the last year in which figures are available. The wool clip last year was situated at 140,000,000 kilos valued at approximately $150,000,000. The total exports of Argentina last year aggregated about $175,000,000 and the imports $190,000,000. There were 3,000,000 head of cattle exported, principally to the United States, England and France.

To meet the situation caused by the lack of ships the Argentine government has decided to change several old warships to merchant vessels and to buy more ships wherever they can be found. This is another of the problems with which Ambassador Naon will deal.

Similar conditions are reported from Chile. Exports from the United States of manufactured goods have been virtually suspended except on a limited number of articles. Complaint is made that a large number of vessels from the United States arrive at Chilean ports in ballast to bring nitrates to the United States. Urgent requests have been made in this country to permit those vessels to carry cargoes of needed commodities.

German editors are beginning to see things. Perhaps, sooner or later, they will be able to visualize the truth.

HIGH TRIP IN SIERRAS ABANDONED FOR YEAR

(By Associated Press) SAN FRANCISCO, July 31.—Conditions resulting from the war have prompted the Sierra club of San Francisco and Los Angeles to abandon this year's organized trip into the high Sierras. The "high trip," as it is called, is an annual feature "hike" in which two hundred or more members of the club participate and includes exploration trips among the snow caps of the mountains.

In announcing the abandonment of the outing, the club directors cite Governor William D. Stephens' appeal to California citizens to forego vacations and point out a possibility of adverse criticism might be made by the public should the trip be taken owing to the fact that it attracts wide attention.

The club, the aim of which is to conserve and promote the natural beauties of the mountains, has among its nearly two thousand men and women members probably the hardest mountain climbers in the country. Those who are not in some active branch of the country's service are urged by the directors to continue the work assigned to them indirectly through the club during the vacation season. However, the announcement assures others that the facilities afforded by the club's camp at Soda Springs and the Parsons Lodge, where provisions are cached, are at the disposal of individuals who, owing to their sedentary occupations choose to avail themselves of the privileges.

The club's camp consists of a quarter section in the Tuolumne meadows, having an elevation of 8,500 feet, six miles from the east portal of the Yosemite national park, surrounded by magnificent peaks and domes, on the banks of the Tuolumne river a short distance from the confluence of the watersheds of the glaciers of Mount Lyell and Mount Dana.

From Yosemite valley food and dunnage is packed either by person or animal over one of two 20-mile trails which at their summits reach an altitude of 9700 feet and have considerable snow as late as July.

On all trips, particularly to hazardous peaks, domes, canyons and lakes, almost military discipline is adhered to owing to perils attending high mountain work. A leader who is familiar with the terrain is always in command and, if he cannot, there is usually some one in the party to talk on the trees, flowers and other vegetation, geological formations, living glaciers and results of glacial pressure.
