(Correspondence Associated Press) BEHIND THE BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, Aug. 26.—The working month of a night bombing squadron in France is divided into two periods which are known as the light and the dark.

The light period covers the moonlit half of the month. Should it be attended by fine weather, great aerial activity prevails. Practically any raid that is possible by day, can be carried out equally well at night during this period, for although certain details are not clearly visible, the essential features of the ground stand out clearly and can easily be followed.

The ease with which targets can be found depends very largely on their geographical position. Water is the great guide for night flying, and on a clear moonlight night it can be seen from a great distance. Hence targets situated near a river, canal or lake present no difficulty whatever as regards their being found.

During the light period most of the long raids of the squadron are carried out. The dark period, the moonless nights, is a much less active time. Flying is then done chiefly by the aid of a compass, but on clear starlit nights raids on targets such as factories with chimneys or blast furnaces whose glow lights up the sky for miles, may be carried out satisfactorily. On a still night

NEBRASKA BOOKS EIGHT STIFF FOOTBALL GAMES

(By Associated Press) LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 7.—The University of Nebraska football schedule, calling for eight games, is one of the stiffest arranged for the Cornhuskers in years. The season will open on October 5 with Iowa, a "Big Ten" machine, playing at Lincoln.

The schedule originally provided for games at Lincoln with Washington state college, champion of the Pacific coast conference last year, and Denver university, champion of the Rocky mountain conference. These tentative dates were cancelled, however, and bookings arranged with the Camp Funston eleven at Lincoln, and the University of West Virginia at Morgantown, West Virginia.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE SECTION HANDLING SOLDIERS' PAY

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—In a corner of the National museum here, almost in the shadow of Colonel Roosevelt's stuffed bartebeest and the restored dinosaur is a government bureau devoted to translating letters written in more than a score of languages by the mothers, fathers and wives of American soldiers. It is the foreign language section of the war risk insurance bureau which dispenses soldiers' and sailors' pay allowances and family allowances to the dependents of fighting men.

Two score translators and stenographers do this work, directed by Mrs. M. Crenshaw, around whom the organization grew up. The principal translator is Dr. Aurelio Palmieri, Italian scholar, master of a score of languages and dialects, who has taught in leading European universities, lived among the near eastern people of Europe and studied their social problems. He reclassified the theological library at Harvard a few years ago, and more recently classified the Congressional library's Yudin collection of Siberian literature.

Important as this foreign language section is to the war-risk insurance bureau, it is one of the smallest divisions. The entire bureau has approximately 11,000 employees, 10,000 of whom are women. No other government bureau has so many civil employees, and no other man in Washington does so much hiring as W. A. McKenzie, the chief clerk and immediate boss of these 11,000. Yet Chief Clerk McKenzie can not hire all the women typists and stenographers he needs. The exodus of several hundred school teachers employed during the summer as clerks, leaves vacancies which even the civil service commission has difficulty in filling, though salaries range usually from $1000 to $1200 a year.

As American armies grow, so must the bureau grow. Already it handles 150,000 letters a week. Every Monday morning between 60,000 and 70,000 letters, the accumulation of two days, pour in, to be slit open, read, sorted, and referred to the proper section, where information is gathered for an answer.

The bureau has on file 3,500,000 applications for allotments and allowances, and nearly 5,500,000 checks have been sent out since last December. Now they are going at the rate of a million a month. In addition, the bureau has taken care of 3,300,000 applications for government life insurance. Various sections of this big government department are housed in twelve buildings in Washington having 310,000 square feet of floor space.

Finaly the answers are written in English, turned back into the original language, and sent on their way to a foreign land. Many carry a paragraph of good wishes or encouragement which make them not merely business notes, but messages of good cheer from America. The greater proportion of the letters go to Italy and Greece.

Promotion for Enlisted Men at Camp Lewis

(By Associated Press) CAMP LEWIS, Wash., Sept. 7.—Appointments of staff officers in the 13th division training here prove the opportunity of enlisted men for advancement in the American army and the fitness of these men for places of authority once they are selected for the responsibilities of a commissioned officer.

The division chief of staff is Col. F. M. Johnson, recently arrived from San Antonio, Texas. As chief of staff Colonel Johnson will supervise the training of the new men from California, Washington, Oregon, Utah, Nevada, New Mexico, Montana, Minnesota, Colorado, Idaho and North and South Dakota who will come here under the draft calls.

Colonel Johnson rose from the ranks several years ago. Lt. Col. Walter H. Neill, another man to rise from an army private, is one of the assistant chiefs of staff. He was commissioned in 1901 and served sixteen years as commanding officer of the 10th cavalry. Until his assignment to the 13th division for some months he was range officer and division inspector at Camp Devens.

Maj. H. D. Mack, assistant division adjutant and at present acting adjutant, needed but ten years to rise from private to his present important assignment. He entered service April 12, 1907, and until 1917 was private, corporal, sergeant, battalion sergeant major, and regimental sergeant major. He was one of the first regular army men to be recommended for the first officers' training camp. From the training camp he was commissioned as a captain August 16, 1917. In less than a year he was promoted to his present grade although he was recommended for a major's commission a month after graduation from the training camp.

Captain F. M. Emerson, assistant to the camp adjutant, is another man "from the ranks." Like Major Mack he too was graduated from the first officers' school at the Presidio, San Francisco.
