IMPORTANT MINING CASE DECIDED IN UPPER COURT

The state supreme court has handed down an important mining decision.

The title of the case, Moore & Young vs. the Rochester Mines company. The suit involved title to the property, as Moore & Young, acting as attorneys in the original cause, sued the Rochester Mines for a one-half interest in the property.

The original case was brought by Moore & Young to secure a one-half interest for their client. During the progress of litigation the client and his one-half interest, paying his attorney one-half of his proceeds. Believing that they were entitled to the other one-half, suit was brought to collect the same.

In the lower court this was allowed on the showing made. The supreme court, however, reversed the decision of the lower court, declaring that the acceptance of the one-half interest of the original litigation satisfied the claim.

WATER SCARCITY CAUSES SHORTAGE OF ALFALFA

The U. S. crop report for Nevada sets forth the following conditions: "Having harvested and thrashing progressed rapidly under favorable weather; yields fair to good, except alfalfa is short in some sections because of water scarcity. Potatoes and garden truck generally good; fruit good in extreme west. Pastures and ranges are dry except mostly good in south portion. Heavy shipments of beef cattle and lambs to eastern markets."

BULLETIN SAVES MUCH TIME

Government's Official Newspaper, Answering Questions, Oblivates Loss of Time of Correspondents.

Owing to the enormous increase of government work the governmental departments at Washington are being flooded with letters of inquiry on every conceivable subject concerning the war, and it has been found a physical impossibility for the clerks, though they number an army in themselves now, to give many of these letters proper attention and reply. There is published daily at Washington, under authority of and by direction of the president, a government newspaper, the Official Bulletin. This paper prints every day all of the important rulings, decisions, regulations, proclamations, orders, etc., as they are promulgated by the different departments and the many special committees and agencies now in operation at the national capital. This official journal is posted each day in every post office in the United States, more than 56,000 in number, and may also be found on file at all libraries, boards of trade, chambers of commerce, and the offices of mayors, governors, and federal officials.

By consulting these files most questions will be found readily answered; there will be little necessity for letter writing; the unnecessary congestion of the mails will be appreciably relieved; the railroads will be called upon to move fewer correspondence sacks; and the mass of business that is piling up in the government departments will be eased considerably. Hundreds of clerks now answering correspondence will be enabled to give their time to essentially important war work, and a fundamentally patriotic service will have been performed by the public.

HOW TO MAKE POTATO BUTTER

British Ministry of Food Gives Time to Studying Out Plans to Conserve the Supply.

The ministry of food states that in view of the shortage of butter they have been carrying out experiments in order to find suitable and economical ways of making out the available butter and margarine supplies by mixing in other food substances and so producing cheap and palatable substitutes. These experiments have shown that an excellent "potato butter," costing only about 5d per pound (or less if margarine is used) can easily be made in any household without special knowledge or apparatus in accordance with the following recipe:

Peel the potatoes and boil (or steam) until they fall to pieces and become flowery. Rub through a fine sieve into a large basin which has been previously warmed. To every 14 ounces of butter or margarine add two ounces of potato butter and one teaspoonful of salt. Stir thoroughly with the back of a wooden spoon until the whole is quite smooth. The butter may then be made up into pounds or half-pounds and kept in cool place. The potato butter may be improved in appearance by the addition of a few drops of butter coloring, and if it is to be kept for more than a few days butter preservative, of which there are several forms on the market, should be added. The amount should be in accordance with the printed instructions on the packet for use in butter. Both the coloring and the preservative should be well mixed into the potato at the same time as the butter and salt. If these directions are carefully followed potato butter will keep for a considerable time.

Siam Adopts New Flag

Siam's white elephant flag is to be abandoned for the red, white and blue colors of democracy. Commenting on this, the Christian Science Monitor says:

"In spite of the fine feeling of enthusiasm for the allied cause which it shows, one cannot but be sorry that Siam should have decided to discard her own splendidly original flag, showing a white elephant on a red field, for a tricolor resembling that of the great empires of the west. Siam sees in the red, white and blue flag the colors which throughout the world stand 'as a rallying sign against barbarism.' It is quite interesting to find that red, white and blue do as a matter of fact figure in the national flags of Britain, France, the United States, Russia, Serbia, Cuba, Panama, Costa Rica, Paraguay and Liberia. And now Siam must be added, if it is really quite true that the white elephant is doomed."

MANY WORSE OFF

High Cost of Living Looked at From New Angle.

Uncle Peleg Gave the Citizens of Bloomfield Something to Think About When He Bought His Frugal Sunday Dinner.

"I suppose the folks back home still manage to get a living in spite of the high cost of it?" said the dweller in the city to his boyhood friend, Reuben Sparrow, who had driven in from Bloomfield that morning.

"Why, yes," said Reuben, "they all seem to live along in pretty much the same old way. Of course there is some scaling down. Extravagant ones are tightening up a bit, and the close ones are a little mite closer."

"Take the Longleys for example. You know how they always used to do. Jim would get his pay Saturday night, and then they'd begin to live on the fat of the land. About Thursday, funds would give out, and then it would be pudding and milk, or whatever they could pick up, for the rest of the week. Well, they do just that same way now. First of the week there's nothing too good for them, and price is no object. Only difference is that now hard times begin with them 'long about Tuesday instead of Thursday."

"Then there is Eben Titus. He goes on altogether a different principle. Eben says that it doesn't cost him so very much more to live than it did five years ago. He was always a great frugal, you know. He's set what calls a fair price on each of the commodities. Of course he can't control the price, but he can regulate the quantity. So when sugar, for example, takes a jump of ten per cent, he marks down the amount to be used in just the same proportion, and so keeps even with the game. You might suppose that the family would be on scant rations by this time, but Eben says not. According to his tell, not one of 'em has lost weight, and they never were healthier or happier. He says the generality of folks eat too much and too expensively and that we never can know how little is enough until we have put the question to the test."

"But most of our Bloomfield people do their fighting of the high cost of living simply by word of mouth. That was what I found a lot of 'em doing when I stepped into Elias Pridie's provision store the other night. They weren't giving the monster a leg to stand on. They all agreed that it was unjust and outrageous and heartrending that the flesh and blood couldn't stand it much longer. Elias himself joined right in with the rest. He said it made him fairly sick to have to charge such prices, but what could he do?"

"Just then old Peleg Daves came to buy his Sunday dinner. I suppose Peleg was the only man there that you might say was actually feeling the pinch of poverty. He's past work, with not much to do with, and it was kind of pitiful to see him pricing one thing after another and then shaking his head. Finally he settled on half a pound of tripe.

"A good piece of tripe, properly cooked," says he, "goes about as well as anything, this time of year. Some calls it a little tough, but I tell 'em it's tougher where there's none."

"Have to pay pretty high for anything we get nowadays, Uncle Peleg," I says, as he started to go.

"Yes," says he, "but that isn't so bad by half as not being able to get it at all. Sometimes," says he, "when I'm setting down to a good, square meal at home, I seem to see some of those hungry people across the water looking on kind of wishful; and it makes me feel real guilty, as if I was getting more than my share."

"After the old man had gone out, conversation seemed to take a different turn. I guess we had all been reminded that there are some things in the world a little more heartrending than the high cost of living in Bloomfield.—Youth's Companion.

AMUSEMENTS

GREAT COMEDY DRAMA

"With Neatness and Dispatch"—that is the way all tasks should be handled. It's skill that counts in this world. With skill and sincerity, moral fibre and cheerfulness you can't lose. Francis X. Bushman as Paul Donaldson in this brilliant photo play to be seen at the Butler today, certainly handles the job he undertakes to do "with neatness and dispatch." The story has surprises every minute, both for the hero and for the audience. But of course there's nothing a man with red blood in his veins wouldn't do if pretty Geraldine Ames ordered him to. Beverly Bayne plays Geraldine. Much of the scene of "With Neatness and Dispatch" is laid on a great estate where no man is permitted to enter. The maiden aunt of Geraldine and Mary call it "Eden." But neither of the girls is disconsolate when the right kind of man succeeds in "breaking in to Eden," even if he has to use a jimmy to do it. Romance and excitement abound in "With Neatness and Dispatch." Some comedy today. Harold Loyd, the celebrated comedian in a rip roaring comedy, "We Never Sleep," a laugh to each turn of the crank. Tomorrow, George Behan in "One More American."

PIONEER DAYTON CITIZEN DIES IN RENO THURSDAY

Lewis D. Folsom, a resident of Nevada for forty-five years and of Reno for thirty-five years, died at 9 o'clock Thursday night at his home on North Center street, Reno, after an illness of three weeks.

Mr. Folsom was one of the early residents of Virginia City and spent several years at Dayton when that town was enjoying great prosperity due to the activity on the Comstock. He was born in 18'9 in Corinth, Me., the son of Orman and Nancy Folsom. When still a youth he came west, reaching San Francisco by the way of the Isthmus of Panama. For a few years he lived with an uncle in Calaveras county, Cal. After arriving in Dayton he was employed for some time by a lumber company.

TO USE NEWSPAPERS TO TEACH CURRENT HISTORY

Daily newspapers and current periodicals are to play an important part in teaching present day history in the schools of Hamilton county, O., during the coming school year, so pupils may keep pace with important war moves.

Decision that these publications should be used by teachers in the public schools was made by more than 500 teachers who attended the Hamilton teachers' institute in Cincinnati.

RED CROSS APPEALS FOR WINTER WEAR

At the request of Herbert Hoover, chairman for the commission for relief in Belgium, the American Red Cross will conduct a drive during the week of September 23-30th to collect an additional 5000 tons of used clothing for the Belgians.

Of this 5000 tons, 350 tons are allotted to the Pacific division. Allotments are now being made and will be forwarded to all chapters in the division within the next two or three days.

Hoover's plea to Henry P. Davison, chairman of the Red Cross war council follows:

"The ten million imprisoned people in occupied Belgium and France are facing shame, suffering, disease and some of them death, for lack of clothing this winter. They must be helped. I hope that the Red Cross will undertake a renewed campaign to obtain this clothing in America. It can come only from us. Your first campaign yielded magnificent results, bringing in fully 5000 tons of clothing in good condition. But much more is needed if these war-ravaged people are to get through the winter in decency and safety. In the face of brutal coercion and spiritual suffering they remain splendidly courageous. This courage challenges our charity. Let us match the courage of Belgium by the generosity of America."
