Official Paper for County of Nye and Town of Tonopah

THIS IS THE BUNK.

Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer, Democratic candidate for the presidential nomination, has incorporated a new feature in the legal department of the government by issuing a cook book backed by the endorsement of Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson. The discovery of a way of rendering the law department and the department of justice useful to the citizens of the United States is a novelty that will commend itself to all readers of the daily newspapers as a much more pleasing duty than stuffing them with promises to prosecute trusts. The production is issued on a pretty pink paper in very chaste ladylike style that is supposed to have an appealing effect on the new voters who are expected to share in the presidential contest. The connection between the judicial department of the government and the kitchen is not exactly clear to the reader not versed in the ways of the administration but it may have an occult connection with the failure of the department to prosecute the beef barons for running up the price of all food-stuffs to a point where consumers prefer to starve than indulge in the luxury of a meat diet. As a monumental joke the delivery of the satire may be seen by reading the brief introduction, presumably penned by the able attorney general who explains the object of the cook book in the following enlightening paragraph:

"The White house will cooperate with the department of justice in its 'Save Money on Meat' week campaign."

There is no explanation of the mystery of the department of justice issuing such a brochure when the department of agriculture is already surfeiting the country with millions of copies of cooking lore and it is mildly hinted that Mr. Palmer could find more appropriate service for his general help than in encroaching on the domain of another department unless it is with the object of gaining favor with Mrs. President and indirectly fattening his average with the feminine voters. To a man up a tree it would be more appropriate for the attorney general of these United States to remain in his own province by helping the republican members of congress in getting rid of the 40,000 idle war time clerks who are still drawing down princely salaries for doing nothing. At the very lowest estimate the country would be freed from a $40,000,000 drain by dispensing with these supernumeraries which would be more to the point than by aiding the packers to dispose of the cheap cuts which they say are unmarketable with everybody clamoring for porterhouse steaks and tenderloin and other delicacies which plain citizens have to forego on their household tables.

KEEPING US IN WAR.

Gradually the truth of the Peace League is leaking out and the filtrations do not portend any sagacity on the part of the president who lent himself to the agreement by which it seems the United States was to be saddled with the contract of conquering the Ottoman empire by driving the Moslem invader out of Europe. The job is one from which Europe shrinks and therefore one which is particularly fitting that this country should shoulder without any special commercial advantage accruing therefrom. Had the senate approved the treaty and the peace covenant this country would have no alternative but dig down again into the jeans of the workers and taxpayers for another billion or two to prosecute this war in which we cannot possibly have more than a sentimental interest. The expulsion of the Turk from Europe has been the aim of every Christian sovereign since the days of Constantine but none has had the resources of either man or money power to carry their plans into execution. France and England would be the chief beneficiaries of such action which would only be consummated at a terrible toll in human life for it is inevitable that at the first sign of hostilities a Holy War would be declared and the entire Orient with its countless millions of fanatics would be hurled at the men from America. The selection of the United States for this throat-cutting job in a country where we were never at war in spite of the fact that Turkey was an ally of Germany, is a refinement of diplomacy that should be throttled in its inception. It is strange that any man in possession of his faculties should have fallen into a trap that implies the slaughter of tens of thousands of brave young Americans. It would be impossible to raise an army for such a barbarous war and, if the draft law were invoked again with the object of calling our young men to the colors for the sake of saving Europe and redeeming the credit of rotten securities, there would be such an uprising that, if necessary, a special session of congress would be convened to repeal the instrument for enforcing compulsory service. No million men would spring to arms overnight as Mr. Bryan once predicted would be the case when we went to war with Germany and the volunteers for the dirty job of mopping up the unmentionable Turk would not amount to a corps' guard. The gallant Anzacs were wiped out in a futile attempt to seize the Dardanelles and the combined fleets of France and Great Britain were impotent when it came to gaining a foothold at Gallipoli. This is the kind of a failure the European powers would like to pass on to the United States as its heritage of the war with Germany and the man whose duty was that he kept us out of war encouraged the allies to believe that the "Humanitarian Heart" of the American people was a hindrance for Mr. Wilson has another guess coming.

Wouldn't it be better for the attorney general to start an investigation into the disposition of the funds of the defunct State Bank and Trust company in which Judge Langdon also was the jurist, rather than waste time on the Mary Pickford case, which matters nothing to 99 per cent of the people of Nevada.

Lord Carson blames America for the failure to settle the Turkish problems. About the only little thing we seem to have been able to do was win the war.

Senator John Sharpe Williams has been silent so long that we are led to believe things must be getting along better for the British in Ireland.

MINING VETERAN OF NEVADA DEAD

GRASS VALLEY, April 1.—George Mainhart, a veteran of the Comstock during the Bonanza days, is dead at his home here at the age of 71 years. Toxic poisoning, due to gall stones, is said to have caused the death of Mainhart, who had been seriously ill less than forty-eight hours. An emergency operation proved futile.

Mainhart was born in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, in 1849, and came to Nevada in 1865. Assistant to "Phil" Deidesheimer he assisted in perfecting and installing the "square set" system of mine timbering devised by Deidesheimer for use in the Comstock mines and now in use in all parts of the world. This brought Mainhart to the attention of John W. Mackay, who often sought the services and advice of the young engineer.

Mainhart was among the first mining men to operate in the Eureka district following the discovery of silver there and to the end of his life he believed that the Eureka mines would again yield great wealth.

Mainhart came to Grass Valley in 1870 and for more than thirty years served as superintendent of different mines here. These included the Omaha Consolidated, which was a large producer under his management, and the Bullion, soon to be reopened.

The family of the deceased consists of a wife, four sons and two daughters. The sons are George E. Mainhart, prominent mining engineer of Tonopah, Nev.; E. S. Mainhart, a business man of San Francisco; Frank Mainhart and Ed Mainhart. Mrs. Alys of San Francisco and Mrs. Sidney Talbot of Nevada City are daughters.

BRITISH COLUMBIA PUTS ON THE LID

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 1.—Three hundred and fifteen thousand liquor prescriptions were issued last year by British Columbia physicians, according to the annual report of the prohibition commissioner. During the year, in all British Columbia, 25,000 gallons of rye were prescribed and only 9,051 of scotch. Total sales amounted to $1,579,000. Amendments to the British Columbia act limit liquor-prescriptions hereafter to eight ounces, instead of two quarts as heretofore.

A long felt want. The Bonanza has printed and bound a fresh lot of location certificate books. Just what you want when you go out. The only way to preserve an absolute record of your claims.

APPLICATION NO. 5979
