

League Means America Must Be Militaristic

(By Captain Eddie Rickenbacker)
CHAPTER II.

If Article IX means what it says, it means war—more war than the United States ever had before. If we pledge ourselves to preserve "against external aggression" every other member of the league, we have got to fight or break our word. If we are going to fight, we must get ready to fight. That means a great deal. Only a man who was in the war knows how much. We can't contract for a lot of war by signing Article IX, and then not prepare for it.

The United States has fine fighting men; none finer. Every soldier who was in France knows this, and when they got into the war, these men were warlike enough. But they felt that war was a regular business with them as the people in Europe understand it. They were not military professionals and the American people are not professionals. They are a fighting people, when called out, but in peace they refuse to be military.

We went into the war unprepared, and were protected by our allies while we made preparation. We were in the war 19 months and we came out still unprepared. Yet we spent $20,000,000,000.

We had only 196 airplanes at the front in France at the end of the war, and not one of them was a fighting plane. Yet we spent more than a billion dollars for aircraft. The soldier of the air knows that.

We did not make our own gas, though we tried. We did not use our own grenades. We did not have our own liquid fire; we did not have any American tanks. The soldier of the line knows that; and he knows the thousands of lives these failures cost.

We cannot afford to go into another war thus unprepared. It would cost too many lives and too much money. If we contract for war all over the world, we have got to prepare or suffer awful losses.

A soldier who was in Europe during the war realizes what a burden a life of militarism would put on the American people. He understands how terrible would be the result, under Article IX, if a policy of military preparation were not adopted.

The soldier is against bringing European militarism to America and

BLAST UNCOVERS BEAUTIFUL CAVE

(By Associated Press)
CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 11.—Workmen blasting for lime rock recently uncovered a beautiful cave 1 1/2 miles west of Cheyenne, according to reports received here.

The cave's roof walls and floor were covered with stalactite and stalagmite formations which glitter brilliantly in the light. The workmen crawled through a 10-foot opening and came upon a passage 60 feet long. At the end of the passage they found a chamber 70 by 30 feet.

he is against sacrificing American flesh and blood in conflicts for which we are not prepared. If we go into the league of nations we would have to choose—preparation or punishment. He knows it. That is why he does not want this country to go in under Article IX. That is why he is against the league of nations.

FLORENCE MAKES BIG PRODUCTION

From June 15 until six weeks ago the Florence shipped to the mill of the Goldfield Development company 41 carloads of ore of a gross value of $22,000, according to E. A. Byler, engineer for the Florence company, says the Tribune. The ore was mined entirely by leasess. During the last six weeks shipments have been made at a slower rate and settlement for them is still pending. The shipments were made from the Development, Hinds, Cracker Jack and Boesch leases, the ore from the last named having been mined many months ago. The best grade of ore came from the Hinds lease. The work being done by the company on the seventh level has now reached a particularly interesting stage in the southeast cross-cut, now 1200 feet long. During his recent visit of inspection, F. Sommer Schmidt, general manager, said he was well satisfied with present conditions in this cross-cut and that he considered the company had a good chance to find ore.
