Organdies Bloom Anew

WHEN they are working with organdie or organdie in combination with other materials, designers use finishing mediums that prove an inspiration to them. The exhaustless variety in organdie is explained by the beauty of organdie and its adaptability. And this finishing material has been presented this season in the plain weaves—in lace organdies and in embroidered and barred patterns. It has been made up with gingham and other cotton goods, with tulle and other silks and in lovely color combinations of the plain weaves.

Organdie in one color was used for the pretty dress at the left of the two pictured here. It is very simple with plain undershirt, long tunic banded with wide, hemstitched tucks and surplice waist with helix collar. The edges of the waist are picoted, the helix taking the place of a girle and fastening at the side with an ornament. Pretty organdie flowers are used with frocks of this kind in bouquets for the corsage.

The uses in which checked and crossbar gingham have been made up with organdie are endless, the gingham usually playing the role of foundation for an organdie overdress. But occasionally a designer uses gingham as a decoration on organdie, as when checked patterns intrigue her to cut out battlement borders or pointed borders of them, or to make bandings. In the pretty frock at the right of the picture gingham provides both the undershirt and bands for decorating bodice and apron of organdie. White organdie in this model appears with red and white gingham, but usually a colored organdie is used with gingham in a color and white, and is selected to match or tone in well with the color. In nearly all these combinations organdie is used for a sash but there are exceptions to these rules as may be seen in the frock illustrated. These are informal and pretty dresses—within the reach of everyone and there is nothing that the season has to offer more alluring or becoming.

LEONARD PLANS TO QUIT FIGHT GAME EARLY

(By Associated Press)
BENTON HARBOR, Mich., June 28.—Dame Rumor frequently has announced that Benny Leonard, world's champion lightweight pugilist, planned to retire from boxing and Benny himself has never maintained that he expected to make boxing his life work, but now, for the first time, the prince of the smaller boxers actually has set it down in writing that he is going to forsake the business that made him famous.

Leonard, in a letter to Floyd Fitzsimmons, promoter of the Leonard-Friedman fight here July 4, announces that he will remain in the ring game a maximum of six months longer.

During the next six months, Leonard says, he will "meet all the worth-while opponents left in the lightweight field, clean them out, and retire with half a million dollars, while I still have two good ears and a straight nose."

"I have two good ears and my nose is still just as nature wanted it to be," writes Benny. "I have never won any beauty prizes, but I'm very proud of the fact that I have exposed these parts to perhaps a million boxing gloves—and still have preserved them. I mean to keep them, too."

"I am worth half a million. I have made investments that pay sufficient to keep myself and my family for the rest of our lives. No, the world is mistaken if it thinks Benny is going to go the way of many others of the profession."

"When I have met all the worth-while opponents in the field, and I do not think that will require more than six months longer, I'm going to put the old gloves in the moth balls and call it quits. The boxing world has been kind to me and I'm going through to the finish. Then I don't think the fans will have any complaint. I do not believe any of my friends care to wish 'tin' ears or a broken nose on me for life—and I want to have something to say about it, anyway."

I ought to know—
 I grow tobacco

You can't beat a Camel, because you can't beat the tobacco that goes into Camels.

That's why Camels are the choice of men who know and love fine tobacco. They know what makes Camels so smooth, so fragrant and mellow-mild.

They'll tell you that the expert Camel blend of choice Turkish and Domestic tobaccos makes a cigarette smoke you can't equal—no matter what you pay.

But it doesn't take an expert to tell Camel quality. You'll spot it the very first puff. Try Camels yourself.

RELIGIOUS SECT FORCED TO MOVE OFF GOVT. LANDS

(By Associated Press)
CAPE TOWN, June 27.—A native religious sect which calls itself the "Israelites" under a "prophet" named Enoch, who refused to evacuate government land at Bulhoek, near Queenstown, Cape Colony, has been forcibly ejected, losing 171 killed and 126 wounded in a night with mounted Cape police.

For some years past the government has permitted the Israelites to celebrate "Passover" on a common, but each year a growing number of pilgrims remained behind on what they called "holy ground" until a village of some 250 huts had sprung up. The sect forbade anybody to enter the village, or to recognize any authority except orders from "Jehovah, the God of Israel," as interpreted by Enoch the prophet.

The government some time ago endeavored to register the settlement but the police were obliged to withdraw to avoid bloodshed. Peaceful efforts by the secretary of native affairs and others to include the "Israelites" to withdraw failed. They steadfastly refused to go.

Finally a force of 800 mounted police moved from Queenstown to demand the surrender of the village. With shouts of "Jehovah says we must fight," 4000 natives charged the police with swords and assegais, the women urging on the men with wild religious chants. The police let them come on until within 20 yards and then fired, with the result stated. Thereupon the prophet Enoch surrendered and the village is to be demolished.

HERE'S ONE KING WHO HAD WITS

(By Associated Press)
COPENHAGEN, June 28.—When King Christian visited a little town in Northern Schleswig a German woman remarked to a companion as they were passing the king: "You can't call him good-looking, any- how." The king turned and answered in German. "But his hearing is excellent."

TEA MERCHANTS SEND MISSION TO AMERICA

(By Associated Press)
PEKING, June 28.—A mission has just left for the United States in behalf of the Chinese National Tea Merchants' association to investigate methods of manufacture and market conditions. The mission may extend its activities to Europe.

The family tree these days about which there is nothing shady is an exception.
