THANKSGIVING DAY SEES TONOPAH PROSPEROUS.

Tomorrow the nation observes with the reverence and respect the day set aside by presidential proclamation when the people of this broad land are called upon to offer thanks for the manifold blessings with which we are endowed.

In this city we are grateful for our most excellent crop of grapes which the day and by necessity are not ready to market until we are indeed fortunate to be able to find so much for which to be truly thankful.

The year 1921 has drawn to a close, while the country prospers as never before. The harvest has been a successful one and the people are happy and contented with the work of the year.

Fortunately, indeed, we are well filled our hands with the appointed tasks of the day's labor and our hearts full of the gratitude and affection that comes to those who have labored well and fruitfully.

It is indeed fitting at this time to respect the words of our president and governor and joining other thanks to the Most High for the manifold blessings with which we are assured.

What accounts for a great proportion of the success of the year? It is the spirit of the people, the spirit of the nation, the spirit of the world.

A tin doesn't amount to much if it is not bought for a dignified and a family could live in luxury in a year.

At the conference were present and speaker notes which were recently held at Carson City between the Nevada mine operators and the public service commission.

Another operator says clearly showed the injustice of the gradual method of rate determination by producing two statements showing practically the same quantity of ore.

One shipment in the state of Nevada have dropped from approximately 48,000,000 tons the figure for 1918, to an estimated 12,000,000 tons for this year.

It is hoped that the conference at Carson City last week will do much toward a rapid adjustment of the freight rate tangle and secure a proper shipping charge for the untold wealth that still lies in Nevada's hills.

Verily, prohibition has given an enormous boost to law-breaking. Bone-dryness reckoned without its host when it ignored the demand for alcoholic beverages that persists among millions of men and women.

The chief effects of prohibition in the United States are seen in the putting up of the prices of alcoholic drinks to extravagant figures, the creation of a great army of law-breakers, the driving of beer-drinkers and wine-drinkers to the use of poisonous spirits, the increase of the cost of drugs, the paying of money to lawyers for law and the affairs of justice.

The constitution itself, once so readily regarded as the bulwark of American liberties, has through the imposition of a legal amendment, been made to suffer in the eyes of the people.

It's the little things that count. The man who pays the taxes to look out for the mines and the oil wells will take care of themselves.

COMMISSION ON REPARATIONS IS WORKING HARD

Associated Press

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—A vast mass of material on German raw materials, production, labor wages and the country's financial status is being gathered by the members of the reparations commission, the subcommittee of the reparations commission.

Ministerial consultations are being held with German government officials as well as financial and industrial leaders as to the prospects of Germany meeting her $10,000,000,000 commitment to the allied powers on January 1, and in view of the conference between W. Dawidson and Colonel James A. Lovell, the industrial American representative, are making a plan.

The end of four installments, another installment is due next April.

COAL MINERS RETURNING TO WORK SLOWLY

Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J., Nov. 23.—The coal miners returning to work in the United States are slow to get back to work. The total of men reporting for work in the district today was 1965, according to a company statement, a gain of 47 men over Monday.

Miners are using the columns of the Bonanza to the benefit of their organization by increased sales of their merchandise.

At the conference were present and speaker notes which were recently held at Carson City between the Nevada mine operators and the public service commission.

Another operator says clearly showed the injustice of the gradual method of rate determination by producing two statements showing practically the same quantity of ore.
