

SOCIALISTS TO HOLD MEETING IN CLEVELAND

Will Discuss Drastic Measures for What is Described as Real Political Evils.

(By Associated Press) CLEVELAND, April 27.—Proposals for immediate and drastic remedial measures for what were described as "political evils" and industrial derangements said to have been left as a legacy of the world war, will be presented at the annual convention of the socialist party here April 28 according to the preliminary agenda issued by Otto Branstetter of the party's executive secretary.

Following over by the government of the business of insurance and extension of it to include provision for unemployment measures, "the collapse of agriculture," the gradual socialization of the great basic industries, and recognition of Russia form part of a program of the socialist party here. The measure relative to insurance was worded as follows: "The socialist party insists that the business of insurance should be taken over by the government, and should be extended to include adequate provision for unemployment, accident, sickness, invalidity and old age, without contributing on the part of the workers."

Proposals to remedy "the collapse of agriculture" specify that "all farm land not cultivated by owners shall be taxed its full rental value; that the federal government shall acquire other lands by reclamation, purchase, taxation, condemnation or otherwise, such land to be organized into socially operated farms with modern machinery; that ample credits be extended to farmers at low rates of interest; that a comprehensive plan of elimination of farm tenantry be worked out with the view of establishing socially owned and operated farms where the relation of employer and employed shall disappear; that socially owned cold storage plants be established and rural wage workers be encouraged to organize unions of farm laborers."

COMSTOCK LODGE PROBABLY WILL CONTINUE RICH

Geological Survey Report Says That Is Likely Far From Being Exhausted.

At certain periods in the long and diversified history of mining on the famous Comstock lode, at Virginia City, Nev., the engineering problems of handling the treacherous floods of hot mine waters and the problems involved in the struggle for the financial control of the mines have seemed to outweigh all others in determining whether the workings should be carried still deeper, but even more fundamental has been the geologic problem of the persistence of the ore with increase in depth. If the rich silver ores were deposited wholly or largely from solutions that ascended from sources far below the surface deeper exploration is fully warranted. If they owed their richness to the action of descending surface waters on ore that originally contained relatively little gold and silver, then there is little to encourage deeper mining. The steady progress in metallurgy, by which more and more metal is recovered from low grade gold and silver ores, has given large practical importance to the question of the persistence in depth of ores of this class. No thoughtful observer expects a revival of the golden and silver age of Comstock mining, for the tremendous feasting which created the channels that made ore deposition possible was more extensive near the surface than at great depths. Nevertheless, the "roots" of an ore deposit so immense are by no means small, and the Comstock operators have in recent years shown their confidence in the existence of deep lying bodies of workable ore by draining a large part of the lode to and below the 2900 foot level.

In spite of the detailed studies that have been made by the geology of the Comstock lode very little concrete, tangible evidence has been presented to show the variations in tenor or composition of the ores far below the surface, and little information has been available for comparing the results of the richer bodies of ore. Yet, as downward enrichment has evidently been effective in many silver deposits a tacit belief in its potency at the Comstock lode seems to have become current among many geologists and mining engineers.

The early geologic work of King and Becker on the Comstock lode was done before the development of the theory of enrichment of ores through the agency of descending surface waters. Later, observers have made only brief examinations of the lode under conditions that were most trying because of the high temperatures in the mines. Finally, as most of the ores were fine grained, it has been impossible to determine the relations of their constituent minerals by observation with the unaided eye.

91st Division is Now Composed of Californians

(By Associated Press) SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—Organization of the 91st reserve division of the army, to be composed entirely of Californians, is now nearly completed, according to Colonel E. V. Smith, its regular service, chief of staff of the division. The infantry commissioned personnel of the unit is now 70 per cent completed, engineering commissioned personnel 99 per cent and field artillery more than 90 per cent. Colonel Smith added that development of "California's own division" has been much more rapid than that of other divisions now under formation elsewhere in the country, although work on the 91st began later than with the others.

LIBRARIANS TO MEET SHORTLY TO TALK SHOP

Secretaries Want Commissions to Take Greater Interest in Fascinating Work.

(By Associated Press) FRANKFORT, Ky., April 27.—Efforts are being made to interest members of library commissions throughout the country in the work of the League of Library Commissions which will meet in Detroit, June 28, according to Miss Fawcett C. Fawcett, this city, chairman of a committee appointed for the purpose. Miss Fawcett said that the league was composed largely of secretaries of library commissions and the active executive heads, but that it was believed more good could be accomplished if the commissioners themselves would take an interest.

A letter has been sent to members of every commission in the country asking them to attend the meeting. "In states where the best work is being done, in library extension," she said, "credit must be given to the intelligent and enthusiastic support of the members of the governing boards. Such members, therefore, are the impelling forces in library work and because they are beginning to realize their importance they are to meet with their opportunities and responsibilities."

Speakers at the meeting of the American Library Commission, according to a tentative program of the session sent out with the letter, will include President Burton of the University of Michigan and A. S. Root, president of the association.

Legend Will be Made Clearer by Spreading on the Screen the Complete History.

(By Associated Press) CHICAGO, April 27.—What the totem pole means in Indian history and legend will be made clearer to the school children of the country, when films soon to be made by the Society for Visual Education, are thrown on the screen.

Early this summer on those far off islands lying along the upper coast of British Columbia, hundreds of Indians will take part in the unfolding of the legend surrounding the totem poles which travelers see in the Alaskan villages. This work will be under the direction of Professor F. E. Probes, who for 40 years has made his home among the Indians on Queen Charlotte and Prince of Wales islands. The services of Professor Probes were obtained by H. L. Clark, vice-president of the Society for Visual Education, as the man best fitted to carry out this important plan.

Every part of the drama will be taken by Indians, and drilling them for the ambitious work will begin in a few weeks under Professor Probes's instruction. Two films have been arranged for and they will be produced purely from an educational standpoint for use in the public schools. While pictures have been made of the totem poles and of some of the Indians of that stormy region, it is believed this is the first attempt to put the meaning of the symbols into form understandable to the children. It is expected that both films will be ready for use by the opening of the schools in the fall.

UKRAINE QUIET AS RESULT OF GREAT HUNGER

Home of Wheat Sugar and Bandits Assumes Very Quiet Attitude in These Days.

(By Associated Press) KIEV, March 27.—(By Mail.)—The rich Ukraine, the home of wheat and sugar, bandits and hard working, stubborn peasants, is at last quiet. This vigorous people has been conquered, temporarily, not by the red army so much as by hunger. All the Ukraine wants now is food and quiet.

The Ukraine has had its government since October, 1917. It has been a battleground for communists, nationalists and czarists and Poles, followers of Petura, the Ukraine nationalist, and all manner of men and parties.

The tragedy and ruin of Russia's revolution, is best seen in the Ukraine, the great farms have been laid low. Its rich lands are lying fallow and going to waste. Its fine railway system has been shot to pieces. Its bridges have been blown up. It has been damaged more than any other part of Russia.

In this former land of plenty dozens and dozens of dead bodies are dropped off at each railway station, dead from hunger or typhus.
