LADY ASTOR MEDDLER OF WORST TYPE

Lady Astor, an American by birth, and born in the fair state of Virginia, has returned to her new love—England. Lady Astor says she's 50-50 American-English in her feelings, having married a man who deserted his native land in order to be knighted in England, but she will have a mighty hard time making the average loyal and true-blue American believe her statement.

Truth of the matter, Lady Astor is a meddler, and should be placed in the same category with Lady Asquith, who recently visited America. The only difference between the two is that Lady Asquith is a little more liberal-minded inasmuch as she likes to puff on a cigarette, and take a little nip if she has such an inclination.

Lady Astor, on the other hand, says that she finds prohibition in America has "been a big contribution to the spiritual regeneration of the world."

Such a silly expression coming from a woman in the class that Lady Astor finds herself, is beyond comprehension. She knows as little concerning the effect prohibition has had upon this country as the average South African of the junkies knows about the resources of the United States. She failed to learn that a dry America has caused hundreds of thousands of drug addicts; she has failed to learn that this nefarious law has made criminals out of thousands of heretofore highly respected and honest people, simply because they do not believe at heart this country has a right to tell its people what they must eat and drink.

Lady Astor had best stay at home and mind her own business. If an American woman, or a man either, went over to England and started to tell the people what to do—what to eat and what to drink and what to wear—he or she would be thrown in jail, and the jailer, in all probability be instructed to throw the key away and forget that said meddler with that country had been incarcerated.

Lady Astor has elected to forsake the land of her birth by marrying a man who has proven himself an unpatriotic American by becoming a citizen of England, so for God's sake, let her mingle with those on the other side and keep her fingers out of Uncle Sam's pie. She is not wanted here anymore than is her husband, and the United States, in both instances, can say, "Good riddance to bad rubbish."

DEMOCRACY DENOUNCED BY DEMOCRAT

Senator Heflin declared in the senate recently, that the deflationists "drove cotton out of the hands of the producers and the foreigners bought it at a low price, and the producers here were impoverished." The deflation movement was executed under the democratic administration, yet Mr Heflin will go back to his home in Alabama and advise his constituents to vote the democratic ticket in the future as they have in the past.

ALWAYS LOOKING TO AMERICA

Mr. Lenin says that the soviet government of Russia "demands a loan of a billion dollars." Now note the language used. The bolsheviks do not "request" a loan; they demand it. Usually a borrower requests, but here is one intending borrower who demands. It is usually the highwayman who puts his request in the form of a demand. Then note, too, that the loan is wanted in dollars—Uncle Sam's money. There is no request for a billion rubles, or a billion francs or a billion pounds sterling—dollars are desired.

Here we have one more hangover from the Wilson administration. Wilson taught the world to believe that the treasury doors of this country stand wide open to supply the wants of all the rest of the nations on earth. Therefore, having confiscated all the private property in Russia, and turning to new sources of possible confiscation, the head of the soviet government thinks immediately of the United States—the nation which Lenin's partner, Trotsky, wanted to overthrow.

What a strange notion the communists must have concerning the sanity of the American people. Only a few days before, Mr. Lenin had declared that Russia has nationalized property—another word for confiscation, synonymous with stealing. After admitting that the soviets propose to steal everything they can get their hands on, Mr. Lenin wants the United States to "loan" them a billion dollars, which sum they would immediately "nationalize," otherwise confiscate, otherwise steal.

And yet, after all this plain disclosure of the plans of Russia to make the United States the goal, there are still a lot of otherwise good Americans who want this country to send delegates to the Hague and mix in the horrible mess of international brigandage which seems to have grown no less since the close of the European war.

HARDING COURSE APPROVED

Lord Leverhulme, prominent British manufacturer, has arrived in this country on a business trip. Of course he was immediately interviewed as to his opinion on international affairs, just as every other Englishman who has come to our shores in recent months has been approached. Lord Leverhulme, however, takes a position so at variance before, and the debt of the countrymen that it is refreshing to quote his words.

"I want to congratulate your president, Mr. Harding," declares the distinguished visitor, "on the stand he has taken in the European situation, and in regard to Russia. I think the United States is doing exactly the right thing in leaving Europe to solve its own difficulties. The only way for Europe to come out of her difficulties is to work and work steadily. The countries of Europe should adopt the policy that the United States adopted at the close of the Civil War and work as never before, and the debt of the countries of Europe will melt away now just as they did with the United States then."

In uttering those sentiments this practical British business man has done more to cement the relations between the United States and his country than all the troupe of professional publicists and propagandists who have been filling our lecture platforms and press columns. The American people know that Mr. Harding's course is right. He has done precisely what he was elected to the White House to do, namely, keep the United States free from further European commitments. They do not take kindly to alien preachings that he should enter the league of nations and the Geneva conference, extend unlimited credit to Europe or cancel the honest debts owed by European governments to the United States. Every alien emissary who comes into our midst with arguments of that sort makes more difficult the cordial understanding between the two great English speaking nations that everybody wishes to see.

LOANS ON BUSINESS BASIS

A New York banker asserts that any loan made to Germany or any other European nation will be upon proper security and solely on a business basis. That is the way it should be. A loan by the government would be influenced too much by international politics and by sympathy. It's a good thing to keep our feet on the ground.

Lloyd George says the very aloofness of the United States makes it a power for peace. No doubt of it at all. Therefore, we take off our hats to President Harding, who determined to adopt an aloofness policy.

NEW COMMERCIAL SERVICE

One of Secretary Hoover's innovations in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce is the Survey of Current Business division, a statistical service for business men. Large business corporations have long seen the need of such a service and in many cases have made it a part of their own organizations. The federal bureau is undertaking to provide the same facilities for all industries. Extreme accuracy and completeness that feature the reports of some federal establishments are subordinated to promptness in placing reliable material at the disposal of manufacturers. It is realized that figures covering 60 to 75 per cent of an industry are usually sufficient to show the trend, provided they are available at once before they have lost their significance. In 1921, 19,652 companies failed, with liabilities ties totaling over $627,000,000. Most of those failures were due to errors in judgment that could have been avoided had proper statistics and other information been at hand. The elimination of that waste of capital and resources is the goal of statistical division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Octogenarian But a High Flier

Adolph Mullen, 85 years old, a retired farmer, saw an aeroplane for the first time a week ago, and decided to fly from Queens Aerodrome, Long Island, to his old farm near Albany. He says he enjoyed the thrill of his young life. Photo shows the aged flier waving good-bye as plane left the ground.

Postal receipts in April were almost 7 1/2 per cent more than for April of last year, which is another unflattering indication of the steady growth of national prosperity.

SCHOOL BOY WILL BE GIVEN OPPORTUNITY

(By Associated Press) CHICAGO, May 25 — The school boy who ignores his chums two-lifted fingers when they summon him to the swimming hole, or is deaf to the urgent appeal to "play ball," and hasten to his workshop to bend over vacuum tubes, will be given an opportunity to come into his own, according to plans of a committee in charge of radio contests in connection with the National Radio Exposition to be held here June 26-July 1. Five contests in making radio devices, the purpose of which is said to "unearth young Edisons of wire-les," have been announced by the committee; three of them will be for young people, two will be open to anyone. Contests are open to residents of any city, but each contestant must come in person to Chicago to prove that he made the device he offers.
