SCRUGHAM WAS ANYTHING BUT EXPLANATORY

Gave Technical Explanation, but Failed to Indicate any Accomplishments

The democratic rally held Saturday night was responsible of a fairly large gathering, but was woefully lacking in enthusiasm in comparison to the republican rally held on last Wednesday evening, Oct. 4, at the Butler theater. The fact that many miners were laying off for the day was responsible for the large attendance on Saturday night, and it was plainly evident that the audience was made up in the majority of republicans who were desirous of hearing what J. G. Scrugham, nominee for governor, had to say in defense of the charges that he had been reckless in the expenditure of state funds while serving as state engineer.

Scrugham dwelt at length upon the accomplishments of his office by saying that practically all the water rights in the state had been adjudicated, a fact anyone knows to be untrue by reason of the fact that even in Nye county there is pending an array of water litigation that is no closer to settlement than it has been since the inception of legal controversies. He tried to explain the great water resources of this state which had been solved satisfactorily and which should result in a vast acreage of arid land being brought under cultivation, but his technical explanation lay in the fact that as yet he has only taken measurements of the source of water that should be available, and failed to cite one instance where any real accomplishment in an actual way had been brought about. He related of the great Boulder dam project and of the part Nevada would play in the matter, laying stress upon the possibility of cheap power that would follow after the dam has been completed and electric juice transmitted over the deserts and plains of Nevada. It was only a theory on the part of Scrugham, and the facts in the matter must yet be worked out, following a period of several years, although everybody in Nevada, and especially the southern part, would like to see the Boulder dam constructed, believing that great good to the state would ultimately result.

The only consolation that Scrugham offered the mining industry was that cheap power would some time be obtainable. He disagreed with Gov. John H. Miller, his republican opponent, regarding bullion tax payments, by saying that no change in the law should be brought about. In other words, he believes the miner should pay his bullion tax quarterly, as against yearly, as recommended by Mr. Miller. The latter wants the law more specific so that payments can be made yearly in order that protection may be afforded the producer, as sometimes happens when a deficit occurs at certain periods of the year. By this Mr. Miller means that the operating expenses should be charged against the production for the year, and not quarterly, so that the actual net production for the twelve months may be equalized, which would, in a great many cases, eliminate the gouging tactics that are at present in existence.

Scrugham admitted that the Wilson administration left the country in a state of chaos, and then admitted that the present republican administration had brought about considerable relief, but insisted that the democrats could do better if given a chance. He failed to take recognition of the great accomplishments that had been brought about by the Harding forces at Washington, and of the prosperity that is now rampant throughout the country as a result of the tariff law recently enacted and of the budget system which is now saving the taxpayers a billion dollars a year.

Charles S. Richards, nominee for congress, made an address that was wholly disconnected. About the most interesting part of his remarks was the compliment he paid the people of Nye county—a compliment designed wholly to an effort to capture votes among the people with whom he formerly resided.

The meeting was presided over by Henry Schmidt, who first introduced Maurice J. Sullivan, candidate for lieutenant governor. Mr. Sullivan entertained the audience by throwing a few bouquets at himself, at which he is an adept. Then he gave his hearers a history of the constitution—something we all know—and closed his address with an appeal for reelection.

BEN HUR SHOWS GREAT BODY OF HIGH GRADE ORE

Discovery Made on Three Hundred Level Larger Than on Level Above

News of a wonderfully rich strike on the Ben Hur Divide property at Randsburg was received in Tonopah Saturday morning. The news came by wire and was directed to R. J. Kelly and contained the information that the ore body on the 200 level of the shaft had widened to four feet and that ruby silver was greatly in evidence, proof conclusive that high values are contained. The telegram stated also that the ore body had been picked up in the shaft at a depth of 300 feet and that the showings was even better than in the drifts on the 200 level.

The Ben Hur Divide company has made remarkable headway in opening the ground since the property was taken over and the mine is one of the real sensations of the Randsburg district. It is evident that it will be developed into one of the substantial producers of that section, and in view of the fact that a great many Tonopah people are interested in developments are being watched with great interest.

SETTLEMENT OF STRIKE CLOSE, THINK MINERS

Underground Workers Authorize Committee to Effect an Adjustment With Bosses

It now looks favorable for an early settlement of the difficulties existing between the mine operators and miners and muckers who work beneath the solar of the shafts in the Tonopah and Divide districts. Under the terms of the proposed settlement a compromise will likely be effected by giving the skilled miners and muckers underground 50 cents a day increase and the top men 25 cents a day increase. It was stipulated, however, that this wage scale should remain in effect as long as silver remains the price of $1 an ounce and that there should be neither a cut nor an increase in wages during that period.

The committee from the mine workers was asked to secure authority from the miners to bring about a settlement, and at 11 o'clock a meeting of the underground workers was held at Eagles hall, when, by an unanimous vote, the committee was authorized to bring about a settlement of the existing differences. Accordingly, another meeting of the mine operators, committee and mine workers committee will be held this afternoon at 5 o'clock, when it is believed that final touches to the controversy will be completed and that the men will report for work again tomorrow morning after having been in idleness since Sunday morning.

The underground mine workers demanded a flat increase of 75 cents a day, and at a meeting held Saturday afternoon the mine operators offered 25 cents a day increase to all men employed about the mines, which was rejected by the miners. The conference this morning means that a compromise is in the offing, with the outlook bright for a settlement being brought about at the meeting to be held this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Following a conference held this morning at 10 o'clock in the Tonopah divide offices, at which were present a committee of mine operators and a committee from the underground mine workers the latter requested the latter to call a meeting of miners and ascertain if authority would be granted them to effect a settlement of the existing differences. It was then intimated that an increased wage scale of 50 cents a day would be granted underground workers and 25 cents a day to top men.

The committee from the miners immediately proceeded to the Main street and a meeting was quickly called to take place at Eagles hall. There was a wild scramble of the miners to reach the hall and within a few minutes the building was packed and following a brief surfeit of the proposition, it was voted unanimously by those assembled that the committee be given power to effect a settlement upon the lines above enumerated, with the provision that there should be no decrease or increase of wages during the period that silver remains at $1 an ounce.
