A MATRIMONIAL BOOM

From the tone of certain letters received in this office of late, it looks as if a matrimonial boom might not be out of place in this city.

Carson seems to have almost every thing desirable to build up a city except a choice assortment of marriageable young men.

Fine water, cool nights, equitable climate, good society, beautiful town, abundance of shade trees and more than her share of moonlight nights, but a scarcity of young men.

The young ladies in the hour of distress have turned to the Appeal to start a matrimonial boom.

One young lady intimated that we should pay more attention to the feature of the country's progress than writing up mining developments all the while.

Now there is certainly no better place on the coast for a matrimonial boom than Carson. The town is over run with handsome girls who are more than ordinarily intelligent. They have education, beauty, and culture and it would seem that men who have come from the East to make their fortunes should assist in the development of the State by gathering in Carson after they have made their piles in the Southern mining camps, and here marrying and settling down in the garden spot of Nevada where they can gather their growing families about them and spend the sunset of their days in peace and contentment.

We believe that the time is ripe, dead ripe for a matrimonial boom in Carson and we call upon the state press to spread the news in every direction that this berg possesses advantages in the line of prospective brides that is shared by no other locality on the Coast.

We invite inspection.

A CLOSE SHAVE

A Goldfield Man Nearly Perishes in the Desert

H. W. Boyer, a well known mining man of Goldfield arrived in Rhyolite this week from Death Valley, where he was lost on the desert for three days and two nights, and narrowly escaped death. It is the first experience of the kind this season. That Mr. Boyer lives to tell the tale is perhaps due to his wonderful powers of endurance and the fact that through the trying ordeal, while suffering the tortures of hell, his presence of mind never deserted him.

The last day of this eventful journey was attended by torture that no tongue can describe. The heat was terrific and the agonies I suffered from thirst seem to me now beyond the endurance of mortal man. My feet pained me a great deal and it was with difficulty that I dragged myself forward. I could see that my strength was fast failing, but I preserved toward where I thought the Furnace creek ranch lay. Once I came upon a mud puddle some five or six inches deep and three or four feet long. I first tried to drink the water, but it was thick with mud and nauseating. Then pig like, I simply wallowed in it. While lying there I went to sleep and slept over an hour. The evaporation of the water from my body had a cooling effect and I woke much refreshed. It was an advantage also to frequently apply the salt water I found in the pools along the way to my body.

"More dead than alive, about 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the third day, bedraggled, faint and weak, I reached Furnace creek. I drank sparingly of water at first and then drank some milk. Strange to say I wasn't hungry, but the overpowering pains of thirst were above every other form of suffering I experienced. I lost 18 pounds during the time, and I never expect to be so near death's door again until the final summons comes."

The Mining Record claims Ely White Pine county will have a population larger than Salt Lake in the next ten years.
