

A SLANDERER REBUKED.

Bret Harte has so long been permitted to defame the early Californians, and his vulgar caricatures of the California pioneer have so long been allowed to pass without any word of censure or denial...

We have suffered too long, without protest, the slanders of Bret Harte upon the early Californians to pass current as truth. His gorged imagination, fed upon unnatural and distempered food, has spewed out its monstrous and revolting creations as the antitypes of the people who created this State...

THE LATEST COAL OIL FIREWORKS.—Ploche can boast of the latest innovation by the Chinese. Evidently they desire to try everything that the white population find entertaining or exciting. This extract from the Record explains the situation: On Sunday afternoon a loud report was heard proceeding from Chinatown, immediately followed by screams and yells...

WHIPPING.—Reno has started on a new track which seems to us worthy of consideration and possibly imitation. Just now Carson is infested with tramps and thieves. Possibly we've got Reno's share, and if so it is a pity not to make Carson quite as warm for them as that burg. This is the way they served their last visitors according to the Journal: Last Saturday night the Vigilantes were out again, this time in a somewhat different role than heretofore...

THE BOE indulges in some fun at the expense of H. B. Williams, the Workingmen's candidate for Congress from that District. It says: "The nomination of H. B. Williams, of El Dorado, for Congress from this District by the Workingmen, in place of P. J. Hooper, invokes the risibilities of old residents of his county. Williams has been a miner; has been known as a chronic candidate before Republican Conventions, but never successful; would canvass the county on foot, from which he earned the sobriquet of "Missionary William." He has, we are informed, latterly been engaged as a street car driver in San Francisco.

WEAKENING.—The telegraph reports Secretary Sherman as saying to the Baltimore Bankers, that if the silver question was let alone it would soon solve itself. The dollar that a short time ago was only worth 83 cents is now worth 89 cents. This is new talk for John, and reminds us of an old horse we knew in our boyhood; when loose on the prairie he would allow no one to come near him, but when once secure within an enclosure, the most insignificant of us all could ride him.

EX-SECRETARY ROBESON will sail for Europe this week.

GARIBALDI'S CHILDREN.

The difficulties that may beset the children of Garibaldi in the settlement of his estate after his death are being discussed by the Italian journals. Garibaldi has six children. They are the offspring of three women, with only two of whom he has lived, yet, strangely, it was only to the woman with whom he never cohabited that he was married. At the time of his contest against the Dictator Rosas, in La Plata, he met a woman of Brazilian birth, called Annita. She was married, but falling in love with the adventurer, she left her husband, and after accompanying Garibaldi through his most perilous experiences in South America, she followed him to Europe. She was the mother of Garibaldi's three eldest children, Menotti, Ricciotti and Mme. Canzio. She died in the forest of Ravenna, when Garibaldi was fleeing from Rome, after the arrival of the French troops in 1849. Ten years later, at the time of his campaign in Lombardy, Garibaldi met the daughter of the Marquis Basomdi. This damsel loved unwisely one of Garibaldi's aids-de-camp, a young officer named Confrimi. When the Italian troops left Como, her home, she determined to follow her lover. She went after him on horseback and her father followed her. When the marquis found her she told him she had conceived an ungovernable passion for Garibaldi. The latter was informed of this declaration, and being pleased with the girl, married her. As soon as the marriage ceremony was over she informed her husband that she loved Confrimi; that there was a good reason why he should be her husband, and that she had lied to her father when she said she loved Garibaldi, because she was afraid to tell him she loved Confrimi, to whom, she felt sure, he would never let her be married. Garibaldi solved the difficulty thus raised by leaving his young wife at once. A few months after she gave birth to a child, now living, of whom Sig. Confrimi was the real father. When the veteran revolutionist retired to Caprera, after the struggle of Aspromonte, his daughter, Mme. Canzio, accompanied him. As she was on the eve of accouchment, she took with her a nurse named Francesca. This woman cared tenderly for Garibaldi in his sickness. One morning he summoned his daughter and said to her, "You must get another nurse for your infant. From this day forward Francesca will be one of the family, and will eat with us." Shortly afterwards Francesca became a mother, and has since had two children. One of her children is dead; the others, Menio and Clelia, are now in Rome with Garibaldi and Francesca. These two being illegitimate, as are also Annita's children, the Italian journals contemplate with interest the fact that Garibaldi's only lawful child is the offspring of the daughter of the Marquis Basomdi, with whom he never cohabited.

New York, June 10.—The Sun to-day has a communication from Alexander Delman warning Eastern men against the bonanza mines and quartz mining generally. The Comstock lode is honey-combed and used up. California's current product of $15,000,000 gold is derived chiefly from hydraulic mines, usually close coporations, who have obtained the privilege of washing the hills into the valleys and for the sake of one cent's worth of gold in a cubic yard of earth, of choking its rivers, filling its single harbor, and utterly ruining its agricultural lands.

DR. KEYSER, in a paper read before the Pennsylvania Medical Society, said he had ascertained that three and a half per cent of the train hands on three of the railroads in that State were color blind, being unable to distinguish the colors of the various signals, and fully eight per cent had eyesight more or less defective in that respect. The examinations were made with colored glass by daylight and gaslight.

EXAMINE THE $20 ROLLS.—The Reno Journal calls attention to the fact that you can't most always tell what is in a roll of money purporting to be $20 in silver. One gentleman of that town received such a roll a few days ago and upon breaking it open found that two-bit pieces had been inserted all through the roll, and that but $15.25 was in it.
