DOBSON'S DREAM.

A VISION OF DEATH AND DESOLATION—THE COMSTOCK BECOMES A GOLOTHA OF GIBBERING SKELETONS.

A few nights ago, Dobson had a most remarkable dream regarding the Comstock. It was worse than Byron's vision of Darkness and Judgment combined. He was in Virginia City standing on C street. The town was nothing but a mass of tumble down buildings, the signs which hung before deserted stores and brokers offices, were creaking in the wind, and every fresh spasm of the tempest brought some rotten building crashing to the ground. The saloons were empty, and the corpses of the bar-keepers lay in among the empty barrels, filling the air with a foul stench which kept anyone from essaying the task of burying them or taking a nip of the liquors within reach. The skeletons of dealers bent over the faro tables where they had died just as the last turn had been reached. The remains of the players lay strewn about on the floor as bones of contention for famished dogs, while the "sleepers" in the shape of bit chips still remained on the lay out covered with mildew. In the midst of this scene of desolation and despair, a few gaunt inhabitants threaded their way about the streets, but each day more and more dropped off until there was not a living soul but the dreamer to animate the pulseless city. As the man walked along the street he suddenly became aware of a stir among the corpses. Here and there a skeleton would hoist a window and look out while he waved his fleshless hands to others lying about on the balconies across the way and soon the windows were filled with more skeletons and the air resounded with the strange gibberish of the dead. They thronged out on the balcony of the International Hotel and danced a quadrille there to the music of Cara's bone band. They poured out of the saloons, nothing but bones, and soon the streets were crowded with the clattering inhabitants of the other world.

THE CITY REVIVES.

Then came a series of most appalling incidents. There seemed to be a strike in the 2,500 level of the Sierra Nevada and the skeleton of John Mackey came rushing up the street with a sample of ore. Everybody was resurrected immediately, the brokers offices were thrown open and troops of bones crowded in to give their orders, paying for the same in fiat money and dealing in thousands of shares. John Kelly with a troop of specters went down, saluted the Lady Bryan and reported a strike. Miles Finlan went about gathering up his disintegrated bones in various wards and hunting for Dave Crosby. The experts came to the fore at once, Hofflich, Sheridan, Canavan, Hank Smith and Grant Israel went clattering down the mine and coming up reported a big find. Dan De Quille got himself together and fishing up his skull from the sump of the North Bonanza, wrote an exhaustive article on the situation. Dennis McCarthy shouldering a pick and shovel, went out to the cemetery and digging up Arthur McEwen set him to work on Tilden editorials, and Wells Drury, who had been embalmed in a limberger cheese barrel in Gumbert & Webber's, was unsealed and started in on the locals of the Chronicle. The politicians got out the voters from the various graveyards and held a convention, both parties nominating their tickets, and Tritle and Lewis and Woodburn and Whitman began to work the primaries for the Senatorial election. Moses and Browne reopened their Justice Courts and fleshless policemen began to bring in the drunks as usual. Men gambled, caroused, fought, shot and stabbed each other just as they did in the halcyon days of '75 and '63.

THE AWFUL END.

Then came a break in stocks, the bottom fell out of the ledge, the north-end was a failure and the skeletons began to flee the sinking town. They took possession of the train, claiming the indisputable privileges of deadheads, and it was a case of every man for himself and the devil for the hindmost, foremost and intermediate fugitives. The town was given to the incendiaries' torch in twelve places and when night closed down over the scene the heavens were a pall of red, reflecting the lurid fires of the burning city. Then the Washoe gale came up in its fury and swept through the stricken city with a roar that sounded like the expiring groan of the universe. In the midst of all this the dreamer staggered on until he met the widow Cooper, who cast a Saratoga trunk on his shoulder and bade him save it, meeting his expostulations with the strokes of a club. As he bent beneath the burden the vast throng with a common impulse began to hurl their household effects upon the pile until it reached above Mount Davidson just then in the throes of a volcanic eruption. He left the city with an hundred tons on his shoulders, and the owners of the goods lashing him along the Geiger grade with curses. As he reached Thorp's toll house they tried to collect a dollar for every old washstand and bedstead he had on his back. Then came a crash and looking back the old Comstock ledge had disappeared, and he woke up to realize that he had been conversing with William Woodburn about the prospects of the country, and his night-mare was simply the result of his five-minute chat. He now vows that he will never give Woodburn another opportunity of outliving the stock situation; and to counter-balance the effect of the horrible vision, he went down town and ordered 100 Sierra Nevada and 50 Union Con. without limit.

RATIFICATION.

HOW CARSON RECEIVED THE NOMINATION—GREETED WITH CANNON, BONFIRES AND MUSIC—A ROUSING MEETING AT MOORE'S HALL—SPEECHES BY BARTINE, BEATTY, LEONARD, HARRIS AND HILL.

The excitement over the political situation was at a fever heat yesterday morning, and the telegraph office was crowded with politicians endeavoring to appear cool and collected. They were collected but hardly cool. The first few ballots seemed to indicate another day of dead lock which called forth the opinion from Farmer Treadway that the "chimpanzee headed calamities" were about to sit down on the country for another day. When the news reached the office that Maine had begun to break for Garfield the excitement began to boil, and it required a man with nine separate sets of lungs to catch half the comments, opinions and predictions made. When the ballot reached that stage that it no longer contained the elements of uncertainty, there was a general shout for Garfield, in which the Grant and Blaine men joined as heartily as anybody. The Blaine men were glad that it wasn't Grant, the Grant men felt that it wasn't Blaine, and all hands congratulated each other that it wasn't Sherman.

HURRAH FOR GARFIELD.

The news was carried rapidly along the street, and inside of ten minutes was known to the remotest corner of the city. The flag of the American Union was immediately flung to the breeze from the dome of Nevada's Capitol, and a liberal display of bunting soon made its appearance from the principal buildings on Carson street. The cry went up "Hurrah for Garfield", and the more excited rushed to the nearest saloon to drink to the continued good health of the nominee.

DISOLVING THE BLAINE CLUB.

At the headquarters of the Blaine Club there were a good many long faces over the last ballot which gave Grant 308 and Blaine 42, but they soon caught the enthusiasm and immediately ordered some hand bills printed calling a ratification meeting and inviting everybody to join them in a good rousing endorsement of the national candidate of the Republican party. Their action created no little merriment among the Republicans who had declined all along to endorse for Blaine, but it was deemed a fitting time for reconciliation and good feeling and the best of humor prevailed on all sides.

THE BOURBONS CRAWL OUT OF THEIR HOLES.

As usual when a Republican Presidential nomination is announced the old Jackson Democrats get out in the streets to let the people know what an easy thing they have to beat. Warren Wasson, Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee, insisted that the Convention had adjourned without nominating a vice President, from the fact that they had forgotten the existence of such an office. There wasn't a Democrat in town who didn't insist that with Garfield as an opponent, the Democracy would elect their ticket by at least a million majority. Considering the fact that they have talked in this hopeful way for twenty or thirty years, their prognostications upon the subject of national politics are looked for at regular seasons and may be counted on to continue in the same strain until after Garfield's election.

LAST NIGHT'S RATIFICATION.

At half-past seven o'clock last night a salute of 24 guns announced that the time had come to ratify the nominations of the Chicago Convention. A brass band stationed in front of Moore's Hall played patriotic airs, and a number of bonfires blazed in the street. By 8 o'clock the hall was packed with people including a number of ladies, and the meeting was called to order by Ex Sheriff Swift.

BEHOLD THE OLD RING IN THE NEW.

It was then announced that the Blaine club had ceased to exist, and it was proposed to organize as a Garfield and Arthur campaign club. This proposition was received with applause and music by the band. The chairman then called upon the audience to sign the roll of the Garfield and Arthur club. There was a general rush for the stand and nearly the entire audience came forward and signed.

A BREEZE.

Gen. Bartine was then called upon to address the meeting just as Judge Harris arose to address the Chair. There were loud calls for Harris and Bartine and for several minutes great confusion prevailed. Harris was finally recognized by the Chair and he proceeded to state that as the Blaine Club had ceased to exist it should reorganize as a Presidential campaign club, and placed Judge Hawley in nomination for President amid loud applause. This motion created quite a stir among the members of the old Blaine Club and several speakers rose to their feet. Bartine refused to go on the platform until all trouble had ended and George A. Hill spoke in favor of retaining the old organization until called upon to sit down.

T. Coffin held that it was hardly the correct thing to depose General Edwards while he was absent at the National Convention.

Mr. Bender then read a dispatch from Gen. Edwards, announcing the result of the Convention's labors, and ordering a ratification meeting.

Chairman Swift cut all discussion short by deciding Judge Harris's motion out of order,

HARMONY RESTORED.

Judge Harris then asked for an explanation of the purposes and aims of the new club, and it was shown that it was simply for national purposes, and had nothing to do with State or county affairs. This explanation was received with applause and harmony was at once restored.

General Bartine was then called to the platform and made an eloquent speech endorsing the nominees, being followed by Judges Beatty, Leonard and Harris and Geo. Hill. The meeting then closed with three cheers for the nominees. The new club now has a roll of 250 members.

The Bodie Free Press thinks it strange that the photographer can take a picture to put in his show-case so much better than he can take it for a customer. About as strange as to see men who go about in Carson in a cart yelling "sweet oranges" which are sour enough to make lemonade.

The Supreme Court has decided that the "Penalty Bill," an act compelling the bonanza mines to pay Storey county $100,000, is unconstitutional. The Bench was unanimous.

BENTON'S STAGE.—On and after May 28th Benton's stage for Lake Tahoe will leave daily at 9:30 A. M. until further notice.

J. M. BENTON.

TO RENT.—A well furnished house with five rooms. Apply at Geo. B. Webb's next the Post Office.

DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Arise from various causes, but principally it may be attributed to early neglect or the indiscriminate use of tooth powders and pastes, which give a momentary whiteness to the teeth while they corrode the enamel. The timely use of that delicate aromatic tooth-wash, Fragrant SOZODONT, will speedily arrest the progress of decay, harden the gums, and impart a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes those ravages which people sustain in their teeth from the use of sweet and acid articles.

COHN'S NEW GOODS.—When Cohn tackles the Spring and Summer trade, he means business.

He has just tackled it. When ladies want a genuine thing in their line, they go to Cohn.

He has the best that money can buy. He has just cleared his shelves of his Winter goods and replaced them with a new stock suiting the requirements of the season.

The best looms of Europe have furnished the fabrics which he now offers cheap for cash.

The ladies will find his stock of dress goods, hosiery and underwear unparalleled.

ATTENTION!—The greatest wonder yet discovered in medicine is Mrs. Dr. Howe's celebrated rheumatism, neuralgia and toothache cures. Would you rather suffer the pain of having a tooth drawn than buy a bottle of Mrs. Dr. Howe's toothache medicine? Mothers should not be without it for their infants. A few drops in a little sweetened water to swab a teething baby's mouth will instantly relieve the little sufferer. The medicine does not cauterize, and is very pleasant. Sold by all druggists. ml7

As a simple purgative they are unequalled.
