

AN ASTONISHING ARGUMENT.

The Enterprise having finally ceased to remind its readers of the fact that its editor served in the late war, has at last been forced to deal with the contest at Albany. The attempted use of the sack by the anti-Conkling men draws forth an astonishing deduction from our Comstock organ of monopolists, usurers, freight extortionists, gold gamblers and stock manipulators. It says:

They are a scaly lot, take them altogether. A re-election at their hands would not vindicate Mr. Conkling's conduct at Washington.

Mr. Conkling, as it happens, is asking for no assistance from bribers and sack workers in the Albany Legislature. He is seeking no vindication which money can purchase. The sack is being used by the other side and shows the desperate condition of their cause in all its weakness and rottenness. With these facts before the public the Enterprise dismisses Mr. Conkling with the remark that a vindication from such a lot would be of no use to him. Does our cotemporary imagine that a purchased office would bring any special consolation to the breast of Depew and the rest?

There is quite a difference in the appearance of the two noted war correspondents—Achibald Forbes and Dr. Russel. The former was worn with disease and hardship—the result of hardship and exposure at the front of the troops; the latter jolly and glowing with health—the result of good living and snug quarters in the rear with the Generals.—Stock Report.

The Daily Report representative had an opportunity of seeing the Pacific Coast Press Association in session, and has been much disappointed. Asked what he had expected, he said he had expected to see a full representation of the press of the Coast, whereas all he had seen was a small gathering of patent-outside editors bossed by Laura De Force Gordon.

Gen. Stoneman is mentioned as the Democratic candidate for Governor. He is a strong anti-monopoly man, and will make excellent timber for a Governor. It behooves the Republicans to put up a man whose anti-railroad record is equally above reproach. The party cannot afford to take the risk of a misalliance with Leland Stanford.

Mrs. Mackay appeared at a Parisian ball recently "loaded with diamonds." This reminds us that we would be happy at any time to assist Mrs. Mackay in practising the scriptural injunction, "Bear ye one another's burdens."

The brother of Pierre Lorillard, is authority for the statement that the latter wins $2,000,000 on one bet made on the result of the Derby race.

A TRICK.

A Cincinnati correspondent of the Chicago News Letter says, in speaking of Hermann the magician's engagement, and on the eve of the close of Mr. Aldrich's departure with My Partner Combination, the two artists met in the cosy sanctum of manager Miles, when Prof. Hermann declared he had no trouble in converting silver half-dollars into ten dollar gold pieces. "All right," said Mr. Aldrich, "try it on this," drawing from his pocket a silver fifty-cent piece; quick as thought ten glittering gold dollars replaced the silver piece, and Mr. Aldrich quietly pocketing it, remarked "That's all right, if it suits you, it does me," and bade adieu to the party. The magician, not to be outdone, called back the actor and said "Give me my gold piece and I will stand treat." Mr. A. returned, delivered over the ten dollars and enjoyed a convivial glass with Hermann. After settlement the Professor remarked he was grateful for Aldrich's treat. Explanation followed, when it was ascertained that though the actor had returned the gold piece he had neglected asking a return of his fifty-cent piece, which eventually paid for the drinks. Hermann, who performs the admirable trick of cutting off a man's head, to the horror of his audience, went into a barber shop on one of our thoroughfares, and looking grave and despondent, took a chair. The barber assigned him had proceeded but a little way on his shave when the nervous man snatched the razor, and with a gurgling noise drew it across his throat, the blood apparently gushing from his wounds. Guests and barbers all flew out the door, nor did they stand long on the order of going, thinking they had been witnesses to the atrocious act of a suicide. After calling loudly for help they ventured to peep in at the window, and there saw the Professor minus razor, blood o even excitement. An officer, at sight of him, said, "Gentleman you are sold; why, that's Hermann."
