Wood for Sale.

I will sell wood, as good, and even better, than any in Carson, two-thirds red fir limbs, and one-third split yellow-pine (mixed) at $7 per cord. A reduction of fifty cents will be allowed to parties taking five cords or more at one time. I have also a quantity of nut-pine and cedar, which I will sell at proportionately low figures. Terms strictly cash on delivery. D. CIRCE.

Croup—Ammen's Cough Syrup.

Ammen's Cough Syrup is not a patent medicine. No patent has ever been asked for or been obtained upon it. To protect the public from counterfeits and imitations the manufacturer had the label registered at Washington. The Syrup is from pure and costly drugs, and cannot be sold as cheap to the dealer as the common patent medicines that are simply made to sell, which explains why dishonest druggists or dealers try to sell you something else when asked for Ammen's Cough Syrup. It is upon the market upon its own merits. You can buy a sample bottle for 15 cts., upon which, at the wholesale price the manufacturer makes nothing. Ask to see a large bottle, and read the label.

Dr. G. Haas, of San Francisco, Surgeon Dentist (graduate of New York College of Dentistry) will be in Carson on or about the 27th instant. Parties contemplating having dentistry done will do well to wait until said gentleman arrives. The Doctor visits patients at their residence, his workmanship is unexcelled and charges reasonable. He will be at the Ormsby House, where all orders can be left. oc-25

Upon the conclusion of the argument in the Richmond-Albion case Hon. Thomas Wren will go to Washington.

At the meeting of the City Trustees next week, the question of lighting the city with gas will come up for argument.

The ladies of the Episcopal Church will hold one of their pleasant sociables at the residence of Miss Katie Mason next Tuesday evening.

Col. G. G. Lyon has been appointed Superintendent of the Princess Mill & Mining Co., Candelaria, with present headquarters at Carson.

Chris. Vucanovich is here collecting bills due his former business, and to the credit of the town may it be said that he encounters no difficulty in getting all that is owing him.

The Express train was an hour and a half late again yesterday. The fault does not lie with that horrible bugbear, the "local" road, but the delays are on the Central Pacific.

The set of resolutions of Custer Post, G. A. R., to Mrs. S. C. Scoville, prepared by Mr. James G. Chesley, is one of the most elegant pieces of penmanship ever executed in this State.

Al Hakness, who for many years drove stage between this city and Wellington's, has recently purchased a stage line running between Bodie and Mill Creek, and is said to be doing very well.

Mrs. Alt goes to Carson Friday to open a dancing school. She has had several classes here and one at Truckee, and is a very successful teacher. The people of Carson will find her system of dancing very thorough.—Reno Gazette.

General P. Edward Connor, who is now in town, is being treated with the same deference that is usually accorded to a bonanza Prince, owing to the rich discovery he has recently made in his mine at Eureka. No good man begrudges the General his well-deserved luck.

The assessment roll of Storey county has not yet been received at the Controller's office, a fact which is somewhat retarding business in that department of the State government. It is suggested that the Commissioners of Storey allow the Auditor a competent person to help him out of his scrape.

Every one who comes from Candelaria appears to be in raptures about the mining future of that camp and its immediate vicinity. The mines which have so far been developed, are showing up better than ever; and by next spring there will be a rush to that locality. Mr. Yerington, with his usual far sightedness, made another good move in bringing his railroad to that section of the country.

Lost, while returning from the Lake, on the King's Canyon road, a satchel with the name of C. E. Laughton inscribed thereon. The finder will be suitably rewarded by returning the same to C. E. Laughton, at the V. & T. Railroad office. n1-tf

A Good Deal of Smoke.

A short time since a well known hotel keeper was greatly annoyed by the complaints of numerous guests against the bit cigars he was selling. The growling became so general that he wrote to the firm of whom he bought them, that he could do nothing with their cigars, and that he was losing trade by keeping such an article. By return mail the hotel man was instructed to turn the goods over to a certain cigar dealer, which was at once done. This dealer now disposes of the same cigars to the growling hotel guests at the rate of three for a half a dollar, and a better satisfied lot of smokers have never been seen. So much on account of imagination.

Dull, depressing, dingy days produce dispiriting reflections and gloomy thoughts; and small wonder when we remember that the mind is not only a motive but a receptive organ, and that all the impressions it receives from without reach it through the media of senses which are directly dependent on the conditions of light and atmosphere for their action, and therefore immediately influenced by the surrounding conditions. It is a common sense inference that, if the impressions from without reach the mind through imperfectly-acting organs of sense, and these impressions are in themselves set in a minor aesthetic key of color, sound and general qualities, the mind must be what is called "moody." It is not the habit of even sensible people to make sufficient allowance for this rationale of dullness and subjective weakness. Some persons are more dependent on external circumstances and conditions for their energy than others, but all feel the influence of the world without, and to this influence the sick and weak are especially responsive. Hence the varying temperaments of minds changing with the weather, the outlook and the wind.

A letter by Mr. Seward has just been published, addressed to a young man, in which he says: "I am glad to know you have got into the country. It is the best place for young men. Allow me to give you a word of advice. Just as soon as you can get out of public employment into some occupation by which you can support yourself, do it, and become an independent man. Salaries exhaust the energies of all men, and very often corrupt them." In copying this the Albany Evening Journal says: "No greater calamity can befall a young man than to begin life in a public office."

A Parisian journal estimates the total number of recognized medical men throughout the civilized world at 180,000, of whom it assigns 55,000 to the United States, 35,000 to Great Britain and her colonies, 26,000 to France, 32,000 to Germany and Austria, 10,000 to Italy and 5,000 to Spain. Of the whole number 11,000, it estimates, have contributed to medical literature—2,800 in the United States, 2,600 in France, 2,000 in Great Britain, 2,300 in Germany and Austria and only 300 in Spain.

Many of our readers have a notion that when some friend of theirs take them to a wholesale house to buy, they get goods at wholesale rates. If they would only know that their friend is making 20 per cent commission on them how astonished they would be. Why not do your business with a house that pays no commissions—where you will be squarely dealt with—that of Uncle Harris, 221 Kearny street, between Bush and Sutter, San Francisco.

A New Jersey widow couldn't earn six dollars a week at the wash-tub. She became a clairvoyant, and her income increased to sixty. It just shows that a man begrudges the quarter that pays for washing his shirt, while he will give a dollar to stick his nose into the other world before the show begins.

A Millionaire as a Beggar.

Baron James Rothschild, the head of the Paris branch of the great financial house, who died on Tuesday, was a great lover and liberal patron of the arts. It is related of him that Eugene Delacroix, dining one day in Baron James de Rothschild's hospitable home, fixed his eyes repeatedly on his host in so searching a manner that the latter could not help asking his guest, when they had left the dining-room, what it was that had to such a degree riveted his attention. Delacroix acknowledged that, having for some time been vainly searching for a head such as he would like to have for a prominent picture, he was suddenly struck with what a splendid model the Croesus would make who was entertaining him at his table. Would it be too great a favor to ask the Baron to sit for a beggar?

Rothschild, who was fond of art, and not displeased to be reckoned among its chief protectors, gracefully assented to act a part probably never performed before by a millionaire, and appeared next morning in the celebrated painter's studio. Delacroix hung a tunic on his shoulders, placed a tall staff in his hand and assigned to him a posture, as if he were resting on the steps of an ancient Roman temple.

In this attitude he was discovered by a young friend and pupil of the painter's, who alone had the privilege of being admitted to the studio at all times. Surprised by the excellence of the model, he congratulated his master on having at last found exactly what he wanted. Not for a moment doubting that the model had just been beggared at the porch of some church or at the corner of a bridge, and much struck by his features, the young man, espying a moment when the artist's eyes were averted, slipped a twenty-franc piece into the model's hand. Rothschild kept the money, thanking the giver by a look, and the young man went his way. He was, as the banker found out from Delacroix, without fortune and obliged to give lessons in order to eke out his living. Some time later the youth received a letter mentioning that charity bears interest, and that the accumulated interest on the twenty francs which he, prompted by a generous impulse, had given to a man in appearance a beggar was lying at his disposal in Rothschild's office to the amount of 10,000 francs, having borne five hundred fold, like the seed in the parable.

Jo Smith's Tablets.

David Whitmer, lately mentioned as the last of the three witnesses on whom Joseph Smith relied to support his statement of the divine origin of the Book of Mormon, and as retaining the manuscript from which the book was originally printed, is dead, at Richmond, Mo. During fifty-two years he adhered to the story that he was present when Smith dictated the matter, from the golden tablets which he had found; to Oliver Cowdry, who wrote it out; that the characters on the tablets were in some strange ancient language, which Smith was miraculously enabled to understand, and that, when the work was ready for the printer, a resplendent angel appeared to Cowdry, Martin Harris, and himself, commanded them to bear witness always to what they had seen, and took the tablets away. A rumor that he had confessed the untruthfulness of this was circulated a short time before his death, and he immediately issued a card in which, though condemning the practices of the Mormons, he solemnly reiterated the old narrative. "Standing in the very sunset of life," he said, "I desire, in the fear of God, once for all to make this public statement: That I have never at any time denied that testimony, or any part thereof, which has so long since been published with that book, as one of the three witnesses." One theory is that Smith deceived Whitmer with a pretended angel.—N. Y. Sun.
