A Degenerate City.

Yesterday a well-known divine in Virginia City, Bishop _____, sent $35 worth of mutilated coins to the U. S. Mint to be sold as old silver. They had been paid into the exchequer of the church by people on the Comstock, and the collection, which ranged from ten cent pieces to half dollars, bore evidence of the rough usage of the world—not to say the flesh and the devil. They were bent, clipped, punched, abraded, filed on the edges, drilled, filed and sweated by the sharpers of the "grand old ledge." Then when they fell into the hands of the religious element, rather than shove them off on the tradesmen (who decline to take them) they passed them on the Lord. It would seem that in a well regulated church the minister ought to take just as much pains scrutinizing the contribution money as the receiving teller of a bank in his inspection of the coin that comes over the counter. The sexton of a big church ought to be a money sharp and counterfeit detector who could detect the bogus ring of a bad coin and see a hole in a good one at a glance so as to be able to call out, "Brother Jones, that bad quarter won't do," or "Sister Smith, the hole in that last half will prevent me from receiving it at par." A man who can look pions and meek when he passes a mutilated half dollar on the Lord must be a hypocrite of the deepest dye. In "laying up treasures in heaven" the man who hands bad money must expect the same sort to be "measured to him again" and be in mind that "as ye sow so shall ye reap."

Spiritual seances are continuing to be the rage in Carson.

THE CORYVILLE STRIKE.

Another Promising Mining District Opened Up.

Last week the news of the strike at Coryville, a few miles from Hawthorne, caused some excitement in Carson from the fact that so many Carson people had located in that district. The Walker Lake Bulletin gives the full particulars of the strike, which cannot fail to interest Carson readers, nearly all of whom have friends in that county.

In its last issue the Bulletin said that news of another rich ore discovery in some one of the many promising mining camps surrounding Hawthorne might be looked for at any time. Even then the discovery had been made, but was being kept quiet until something of its extent could be ascertained. On the 22d instant the men at work in the face of the tunnel on the North Star Consolidated mine, at Coryville, tapped a very fine looking ledge. They ran the tunnel four feet into it without any signs of a wall, when their powder gave out and they came to town last Wednesday for another supply, bringing the news of the strike and a lot of fine specimens from it. The ore was tied up in a sack and was shoveled up from the face of the tunnel as it had been picked down. It had been pretty well sorted over by persons wanting rich pieces before the reporter got a chance at it. In order to get something near an average, he took a handful of the fine, pulverized rock from the pile in the sack and gave it to A. Heberling, the assayer. The result of the assay was: silver, $122 55; gold, $1.50—total, $122 05. Mr. Heberling says that the ore carries from 10 to 15 per cent lead and is in all respects similar to that in the Mount Cory mine. From the items under "Coryville Concentrations," it will be seen that since work was resumed the tunnel has been extended three feet farther, a total of seven feet, and still in the vein.

The North Star Consolidated is owned by Tobe Crossman and the two Ganong brothers, Charley and Cork, and is situated about a half mile northwest from the Mount Cory mine and about the same distance west from the town of Coryville. The ledge is thus separate and distinct from that of the Mount Cory and runs parallel with it. The tunnel encountered the ledge in about 145 feet, and between eighty and ninety feet beneath the croppings. There is an abundance of water and fine timber on the ground and two or three more splendid looking ledges crop out on the surface.

A mine having a ledge assaying $124 and known to be at least seven feet wide at a comparatively small depth of ninety feet, is generally considered a very fine piece of property. Of course no one can tell what it will amount to above or below that depth; but, if surface indications go for anything, enough is known to settle the fact beyond a doubt that Mount Cory Mining District is one of the richest and most extensive in the country, and if the realization does not more than half come up to the expectations, Esmeralda county will rank in the very near future as one of the heaviest bullion producers in the State.

Messrs. Forbes, Cardwell, Angell and Stoner, of Hawthorne, have a location on the eastern extension of the North Star Consolidated, called the Rising Sun. The ledge crops out boldly on their claim, and they naturally feel jubilant over the strike.

It might not be out of place here to say that had it not been for the far-seeing enterprise of two or three men the present stage of development reached in the districts surrounding Hawthorne would not have been possible for years to come.

Memorial Day.

The members of the G. A. R. are taking steps to observe Memorial Day by becoming equal, and a committee has already been appointed to make arrangements to observe the day in a befitting manner. They propose to indulge in a camp fire this year. Citizens should take hold and help the Committee by every means in their power.

A Chinaman's horse with an old vegetable wagon attached ran away yesterday. This is the first time a Chinaman in Carson ever owned a horse with so much life in him.

Carsonites who know Jim Keene well, and there are quite a number of them, are rather pleased to see him involuntarily descend from his his financial pedestal. They regard him as one of the most cold-blooded of men, who never was actuated by a single noble or generous impulse.

A certain Carson saloon keeper has two expensively ornamented liquor bottles which he passes over the counter to his customers. Upon one is pasted a certificate of 500 shares of Oro mining stock, and on the other a 500 share certificate of Abion mining stock, the aggregate cost to him of the two certificates being over $2,500.

It is now stated that Lucky Baldwin will send one of his own agents to conduct the Tallac House for the season. He demands a rental of $1,500 for the property during the Summer; but as the tourists' season is scarcely of long duration than two months, experienced hotel men consider the price exorbitant.

A Fair Ink Slinger.

One of our young society belles met with an innocent mishap a few days ago. She was visiting a lady friend who for the moment was called from the room. She had hardly vacated the room when the visiting friend spied a cologne bottle on the bureau. The opportunity was not to be missed, so she concluded to sample the article during her friend's absence. This she did generously, bathing her head, sprinkling her dress and in a manner slinging the cologne around as though it didn't cost a cent. She was well saturated with the balm of a thousand flowers when her friend returned. It seems her friend had been writing and in lieu of an ink bottle had filled the cologne bottle with ink, and so stated to her visitor. Instead of being toned up with fragrance our friend was literally smeared with Arnold's best black ink. No more strange cologne will be indulged in by that party henceforth until it is thoroughly prospected. — [Tuscarora Mining News.

An Honest Girl.

A few days ago Theresa Shrieves, a young lady of twelve, lost a valuable gold bracelet. The next day she found one sufficiently like her lost ornament to match it, and no lady would know the difference. A good many girls of that age would find it mighty hard to resist the temptation of keeping the bracelet, but she brought it round to the Appraiser's office and asked to have it advertised. The advertisement will be found in the 50 cent column. The owner should give her a liberal reward, and the person who found Miss Shrieves' bracelet should be good enough to return it immediately.
