STEWART AND HIS MALIGNER

A Sample of Harris' Editorial Flip-flap.

WHAT HE THOUGHT OF STEWART, DECEMBER 1885.

Also His Ideas on September Second.

For some weeks past the Nevada Union, edited by C. N. Harris, has been persistent in its malignant attacks on Ex-Senator William Stewart, denouncing him in such terms as its limited vocabulary will permit.

Some weeks ago he stated that the Senator had leased the Index for the purpose of depriving certain people in Ormsby of a fearless organ, etc., etc. The facts of the case are that when Senator Stewart first came to this city no one was more obsequious to him than the present editor of the Union, and in his capacity as editor of the Index he slobbered all over him. Stewart soon learned that the political friendship of such a man could only prove detrimental to his political interests, and told the proprietor that he would not recognize a paper with which C. N. Harris was in any way connected. The proprietor of the Index, who realized how his property had been run down and had become almost worthless under the Harris administration, was only too glad to lease it for the campaign to a more experienced journalist.

Harris had several interviews with Stewart, and was more than anxious to be his friend; but Stewart very sensibly reached the conclusion that such a man's assistance in politics meant certain defeat, and gave him the coldest shoulder he had.

HARRIS' OPINION OF STEWART. But Harris sought to get under his wing, and wrote the following, which appeared in the Index December 16th, under the head of "A Timely Response:"

Ex-Senator W. M. Stewart has written a vigorous and telling response to the position taken by the President upon the silver question. It appears in the San Francisco Chronicle of last Sunday and is a column and a half in length, closely printed. He brings into clear light the solecisms to which the President was forced in making his attack upon the coinage of silver, notably the paradoxical theory that the effect of contraction are disastrous and that the coinage of money (silver) produces contraction. Mr. Stewart aptly says that if the presence of inferior grades of money produces contraction, the retirement of such inferior grades ought to produce inflation, and then ask "if this be so, why not retire greenbacks, National Bank notes and standard silver dollars, and have an abundance of money at once?" Taking up the line of argument Mr. Stewart discusses the prevalent "hard times" and states that the money circulation is now $100,000,000 less than it was three years ago, while the demand for circulation has increased with the ratio of increase of population. The paralysis of business consequent upon the contraction has been aggravated by the declared purpose of the administration to demonetize silver and contract the world's money to the gold standard. Capital necessarily becomes timid under these circumstances, for property must be made cheaper and gold dearer by every influence which a powerful Administration is capable of exerting. Responding to the President's appeal to depositors in savings banks to demand gold in payment of any deposit, he says: "The President ought to know that if silver is demonetized and the gold standard adopted there will be no end to contraction, no end to depression of business, no end to low wages and starvation among the masses." Mr. Stewart then asks: "Is it possible that the President of the United States is really scheming to demonetize silver for the purpose of increasing the power of the national banks?" and then the further question, "why does not the present Administration call in the bonds and relieve the Treasury of its surplus revenue?" We cannot resist quoting the following passage entire:

"The President's message has spread gloom and apprehension over the Pacific coast. The refusal of the Treasury officials to execute the law of 1878 in good faith was familiar to the mining States and Territories. They were annoyed by the vexatious and arbitrary rules of the Treasury Department, which deprived them of silver as a circulating medium. They could see no reason why silver coin needed here could not be exchanged for gold by the Sub-Treasury without applying to Washington in each case for authority to make the exchange; nor could they see why silver coin needed here should be shipped to New York or Washington at great expense and withheld from circulation among the people. But they did not imagine for a moment that the President of the United States was a party to such disreputable transactions. They do not now believe that he is guilty of any intentional wrong, but they fear what is equally disastrous to the interests of the country, that he is misled; deceived and imposed upon by the unscrupulous and artful representations of the bondholders and national banks."

The article concludes with a masterly portrayal of the misfortunes which are to result in every branch of industry, mining especially, if "the now apparently overwhelming power of the European syndicates and American bankers" is to succeed. It could be wished that Mr. Stewart were already in the Senate again, to take up the weapons there he so vigorously uses in his written discussions of this all important question of the demonetization of silver. As it is he is doing excellent work.

HE DROPS THE MASK. When he finally realized that Stewart would absolutely have nothing to do with him he dropped the mask and proceeded to heap clumsy abuse upon the man he was not long before so anxious to serve. On Sept. 2nd he wrote as follows in the Union: "Somebody about town suggests that the attitude of the Nevada Union toward W. M. Stewart will only serve to arouse the sympathy of his friends and unite them in his cause. Who ever supposed to the contrary as to Stewart's friends?" But the appeal for sympathy which is thus voiced is remarkable. Here comes from California a candidate for the United States Senate "From Nevada." Sympathy for the people of this State on his part has been from the very first an invisible quantity. His every act has belied the very idea that as a candidate Mr. Stewart ever entertained any notion of associating himself in a friendly way with the people of this county. If the bulldozer sees a pretty large prospect of being finally bulldozed by this people, it is no cause for "sympathy". The time has arrived when the people feel, at the best, but little interest in the Senate, and no hope whatever for any improvement in their affairs should they send forty Stewarts to Washington. They propose to exercise a little sympathy for themselves before breaking their hearts tendrils in effusiveness over Mr. Stewart.

Mr. Stewart does not preserve a very consistent attitude. He claims in his paper that there is no issue on the Chinese question in Ormsby county, and yet he wants somebody to put up an anti-Chinese ticket and run it at his alleged Republican primary next week.

The rank and file of the Ormsby Republicans have no great interest in that primary. Mr. Stewart can run it alone without any opposition ticket. This ought to satisfy him and every pro-Chinese friend he has on earth. This people does not propose to go headlong into an ambush for the purpose of fighting the forces of idle men of both parties that are to be concentrated from Candelaria and other points along the railroads. They will not repeat the experiment of 1884 at Stewart's dictation—issue or no issue.

Mr. Stewart is making his own fight and nobody is interfering with him. He must, however, keep his hands off the masses who are in earnest about ridding this locality of Chinese slaves. The true Republicans of Ormsby county have this fact in their own hands and propose to keep it there. They will also in due time take hold of the party affairs and so control them so as to suit themselves.

Mr. Stewart's paper naturally feels hurt that the editor of The Nevada Union is a Republican. Its wounded feelings will be still more irritated as it realizes that the Union Editor is sufficiently versed in Republicanism to understand his own rights and duties as a member of the party without going to school to Mr. Stewart. It will find before long that its attempt to wheel the Republican organization of this county into line against the Anti-Chinese League; was such a blunder and crime that the people in general, irrespective of party, including the Union editor, will join hands in teaching its proprietor. Mr. Stewart, some salutary lessons in Republicanism—however much they may wound him."

This idea of a failure in county politics teaching an Ex-United States Senator lessons in Republicanism is like a white washer teaching Joshua Reynolds how to paint portraits.

But while proving a case against the Union editor his own articles prove the most formidable weapon that can be found, as he places himself unwittingly in much more ridiculous attitudes than any studied attempt to do so, could accomplish. He says:

"The Enterprise this morning launches forth a ponderous editorial the evident purpose of which is to frighten Senator Fair out of the idea of seeking re-election.

The Enterprise has simply succeeded in making itself conspicuous as an exponent of a type of venality which is the next door to blackmail."

No Money There.

Some weeks ago the APPEAL was authorized to publish some election bets. The Chronicle copied the challenge and stated that the money was up at Milton's store or at Frankie's brokers' office. The editor of the APPEAL called at both places yesterday, authorized to cover the money, but was informed that there was none of Mr. O'Brien's money at either place to make any such bet.
