

THE BAILEY MURDER.

Another Man Arrested on Suspicion.

The Coroner's jury after holding an inquest on the remains of Henry Bailey are unable to find any clew to the party who did the shooting, and the suspected men have been released from custody.

"George," the clog dancer who was also suspected because he had been involved in a difficulty with Bailey over money matters, was asleep in Raycraft's stable when the killing took place.

Suspicion seems to point to no one else at present. The tracks at the window show that the man who fired the shot wore rubber boots, probably because they made less noise in walking.

Since the above was written an old Italian who was heard to threaten Bailey's life has been arrested.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

There was a big house at Uncle Tom's Cabin last night and the play was given in splendid style all through. The same tonight.

ALL SORTS.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the most potent blood purifier, and a fountain of health and strength. Be wise in time. All baneful infections are promptly removed by this unequalled alternative.

Ayer's Hair Vigor improves the beauty of the hair and promotes its growth. It imparts an attractive appearance, a delightful and lasting perfume. While it stimulates the roots, cleanses the scalp, and adds elegance to luxuriance, its effects are enduring; and thus it proves itself to be the best and cheapest article for toilet use.

INSANE LAW MAKERS.

Some of the Solons who Grace the Lunatic Asylum.

One would be surprised to learn how many ex-members of the Legislature are now confined in the Lunatic Asylum at Reno. It would seem that the excitement of law-making tends to unseat the reason, as at the present time no less than twenty-eight members of past Legislatures are now in the Asylum.

On Sunday last an APPEAL reporter visited the Institution and there learned the names from Dr. Bishop, but these are for obvious reasons withheld.

"I can't understand," said the doctor, "how it is that so many ex-members managed to reach this place, but I attribute it mainly to the feverish excitement and unrest of a campaign. Many a man is subjected to the foulest abuse that one can imagine, and must endure it all for the party's sake or be beaten. This strain I think tends to excite the brain tissues and bring on insanity. Again, some men go to the Legislature expecting to do a great many brilliant things, and they find themselves snubbed and sat down on at every turn. Their disappointment and chagrin at finding themselves failures is too much, and after brooding over it a few years they go crazy."

"What's the matter with this man here?" asked the scribe.

"He was a member of the eighth session, and never once got up and wanted more time to have something explained when there was a motion to adjourn. Of course, he could not long keep out of here after such a break as that."

"I never heard of another such case," said the reporter.

"Here," continued the doctor, "is a man hopelessly demented. He tried to master the difference between a concurrent and joint resolution. He was in Carson two sessions. The first time he nearly went leony, but the discussion in the next session sent him clean daft and raving."

As the doctor spoke the unfortunate man rose up and began explaining the difference between the joint and concurrent resolutions.

"A sad case, indeed."

"Lord, I should think so," and motioning to the attendants, a straight jacket was laid out where it could be reached at a moment's notice.

The next cell showed a man in the last stages of dementia. He had been a member three times, and never introduced a judiciary bill or attempted to amend an Act regulating proceedings in Justice Courts. Poor fellow; the strain attendant upon keeping his mind off these bills had knocked him clean out. When approached he sprang at the bars of his cage and howled dismally.

"If you were to allow him to draw up a few of these Justice Court bills wouldn't it rest his mind?" asked the editor.

"Yes, it might, but some of these bills might get into the hands of the law makers in Carson and get passed. The cure you suggest has much to recommend it, but it's risky."

"Who is this poor devil here?"

"Been here some time. Mild case. When arrested under a call of the House and brought to the bar he paid his dollar and never attempted to make a funny speech. The Commissioners of Lunacy spotted him and gathered him in. No hope for him."

"An unusual case, indeed," murmured the scribe, quite interested.

"This man here had his cousin elected Sheriff of White Pine, and never introduced a bill raising his salary. Of course he was daft, and was sent here by his relatives as soon as the session was over. The Sheriff brought him in, and told us never to let him out."

"Who is the man with the wild, glaring eyes?"

"He was Chief Clerk of the Senate some years ago, and coming in to the House one day, he remarked: 'Message from the Senate,' laid it on the Clerk's desk and retired, without saying, 'Message from the Honorable the Senate to the Honorable the House.' He was grabbed at once and brought down here. I never heard of such a case as this before. A man in office seldom gets so cranky as to talk plain English when he can twist out some verbiage and bad grammar, pickled by official usage."

"Who is this raving demon in cell 428?"

"Ah," said the doctor, sadly, "he is the worst of all the unfortunate lot. He helped elect a United States Senator, and after the election was over positively denied that he was the first man that brought him out, and never asked to be appointed Superintendent of the Mint."

"Let me leave this den of horrors," cried the reporter excitedly, "or I too may succumb to the malign influences of the place. Give me once more the pure air and warm sunshine of Carson."

The doctor showed the scribe to the door.

"Have you drawn up any thieving bills yet, or been interested in any steals?"

"Not one."

"Here boys, quick!" shouted the doctor, "here's a clear case. Head him off there, Jake."

But the scribe was too quick, and dodging the attendants he vaulted the high fence and out-stripped his pursuers to town.

CLOSED DOWN.

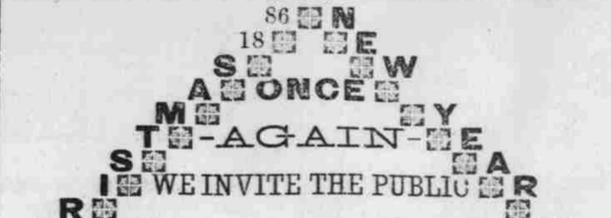

The Steam Laundry Suspends Operations.

Yesterday the Steam Laundry suspended operations and closed down the works. The cause was lack of funds to pay the hands. An APPEAL reporter called there yesterday and found no one in but the foreman. He explained the shut down as follows:

"We have every facility for doing good work and we have plenty of work to do. We are troubled about making collections. Some of the loudest howlers for a white laundry are the hardest to collect from. Some of the leading citizens as you call them have immense washings and want all the starched and frilled work in sight and never pay a cent. It makes me tired to see women flouncing about town as if they wanted to turn the earth up on its end and sell it, and the skirts they wear have been washed here for months and never paid for. The other day I went after a man with a bill and he was at a faro game with a big stack of chips in front of him. He couldn't pay a three dollar wash bill but he could lay down $20 on the ace and never flinch. But we don't propose to be caught out. We shall wake out the accounts and collect all we can and those who don't pay will see their names advertised in the papers and if that don't fetch 'em we will place the accounts in the hands of a lawyer that will hang to 'em like a bull dog."

Found Guilty.

Fred Davis the man who shot and killed Jos. Mayer in Genoa Dec. 1st was found guilty of murder in the 2nd degree yesterday. Jury out three hours.
