RUNNING DOWN THE TOWN.

How Carson and Reno Boom Their Respective Localities.

A gentleman from San Francisco talking with the writer yesterday regarding towns and their booms said:

"Carson is a good place of its size, and money is well distributed. It is better than most California towns of its size. The trouble here is that the residents of the place run it down too much. It is a community of growlers and this growling kept up a few years gives a town a bad name and ruins it. I was talking with a man yesterday and asked him how Carson would be as a business location. His reply was, 'For God sake don't come here, this place is no good, nobody making anything here. The town is played out and there is no money in circulation.'"

"Now as a matter of fact my observation gave me a different impression. There is money and business here. People live in good houses and money is tolerably plenty. In no matter what store you go you find plenty of people buying and if a man's store has been crowded all day and he is selling goods at 40 and 50 per cent profit, he closes up at night and goes along the street telling people how dull trade has been.

"It looks to me as if a good many people here were making lots of money and were afraid somebody would find it out. They don't act that way in Reno. Every man blows about his town and everybody assures you that business is brisk and picking up all the while, yet they don't do any more business there, than here and you can bet your bottom dollar on it."

This man was an excellent observer and we publish his language as near as we can remember it that some of the chronic growlers may mend their ways a little.

When a stranger gets to Carson he is talked to like this:

"How's business here in Carson?"

"Oh, bad, d— bad."

"What's your prospects here?"

"None. Capital is going to be moved to Idaho, State Prison to Reno and Orphan's Home to Virginia City."

"Isn't there some talk of tapping Lake Tahoe near here?"

"All talk; nobody but a d— fool would ever think of a crazy scheme like that. No population to justify it."

"But don't you think that if a scheme like that was put through a population would come?"

"Pshaw! Who'd come to this blasted country?"

It is the miserable whining of such men that hurts Carson City. Men who talk that way are invariably Played-out politicians.

Played-out business men, who played out in business because they were unable to get four prices for what they sold, or lost trade through double dealing.

Old fogies who think the country owes them a living without their giving any return in work.

Cranks who want to see everybody fail.

Cowards whose timid natures make them see disaster everywhere.

Short-sighted fools whose opinions are not worth the powder to blow them away.

W. B. Todhunter Embarrassed.

A dispatch from Winnemucca says: W. B. Todhunter of Sacramento, one of the largest land and cattle owners of this and Grant county, Oregon, has assigned or sold his property to Hayes, Carrick & Co., of Oakland. The land comprises 170,000 acres in Oregon and a ranch on the Humboldt, near this town, and the cattle are estimated at 50,000. The liabilities are said to be $400,000.

William Todhunter, Jr., when interviewed in reference to the matter, said that the statement of the assignment is true. He states that a number of his father's large business ventures turned out disastrously last year, whereupon the creditors mentioned clamored for their coin and Mr. Todhunter told them to take charge of his affairs and run them until they got their pay. Mr. Todhunter and several of his principle creditors are now in Nevada. It is believed that his financial embarrassment is only temporary, that his creditors will soon be satisfied and he will recover possession of his immense property.

Annual Campfire.

At the Opera House, this evening, May 13th, the old soldiers assisted by their fair and famed auxiliaries, the W. R. C., will give an old time entertainment, to which all are invited to enjoy themselves without restraint, as to the quantity they may consume or the number of times they whirl in the giddy waltz; or listen to sweet songs and patriotic sentiments and other enjoyments promised on that occasion. All this for the very modest sum of an American half-dollar for elders and little chaps at half that figure. Hurrah!

The following programme is announced:

- 1-Address by Post Commander; H. F. Bartine.
2-Tableau and Song, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground;" Carson Guard and male quartette.
3-Recitation, "Battle of Look-out Mountain;" Mrs. M. E. Jones.
4-Tableau, gypsy scene from Rosedale; Carson Guard.
5-Duet, "Unforgotten;" Miss Fanny Dorsey and Nat Dow.
6-Overture; Boys' Harmonica and Guitar Band.
7-Tableau, song and chorus, "Star Spangled Banner;" solo rendered by Mrs. W. H. Crisler.
8-Prince Methusalem drill and march, by 12 young ladies, under direction of John P. Meder.
Curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock, and the rendition of the programme occupy little more than an hour, when the floor will be prepared for dancing and the stage for the supper, which will consist of a very generous supply of pork and beans, brown bread, coffee, etc. with relishes of all sorts. The Virginia City band of six pieces will furnish the music, and dancing can be indulged in without limit. A pleasant time is promised to all.

Sutro's Bonanza.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10th.—About a year ago Adolph Sutro made the discovery upon his extensive grounds near the Cliff House and in that portion of his land near the county line that their was concealed beneath the surface of the ground, that which promised, if properly worked, to develop into a splendid quarry. The discovery was the result of a mere accident. Thousands of persons had passed for years over the same ground time and again, and nothing had ever been discovered. Mr. Sutro, taking a walk one day, picked up what seemed to him a bright and pretty sample of stone. Investigating and examining it, and then tracing it to its hiding place, he found that a considerable amount of it was contained upon his land. Without saying much to anyone, concerning his new found wealth, Mr. Sutro has for upwards of a year, been quietly delving into the earth. The result of his investigation proves that there is hidden on his land what may be a source of untold wealth to the discoverer; and also rich facilities for San Francisco to procure splendid stones for ornamental and useful building purposes almost at their own doors. The fact of the discovery was not made public until today.
