The First Shot in the Corning War.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—Yesterday while several Russian soldiers were fishing in a stream near the Prussian border, they finally crossed the border. On being ordered to recross the line by two Prussian gendarmes, they refuse to do so and fired at the Prussians, wounding one of them slightly. The Russians seized the wounded man, but when his companion tried to rescue him they released him and arrested the other Prussian, who they took away with them.

The Morphine Found.

On the day of the Cline inquest vigorous search was made for the morphine bottle from which the tin foil cap had been torn. Yesterday Mrs. Glover in hunting about the house, found the bottle on top of the wardrobe. The cap had been torn off, and the paper label was scratched off. The contents of the bottle proved to be morphine. They were weighed by Dr. Lee, and there were 24 grains short.

ADVERTISING PAYS.

The Experiment Tried by Dr. Harmon.

When Dr. Harmon arrived in this city he stopped at the Ormsby and hung out his sign. Two days passed and no visitors. He finally came to the APPEAL office and began to advertise, taking half columns at a time, regardless of price. He immediately became over-run with business, and has sold over 140 glasses, and is still rushed with custom. His skill as an optician is of the first order, but skill, no matter how great, is of little avail until properly advertised.

The Hitchcock Murder.

The regular old fashion, bloody midnight murder for money, which took place last week near Santa Ana, is causing great excitement. Anschleg, the murderer, has finally made a full confession as follows:

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28, 1888.

I, Frederick Anschleg, being in my full senses, hereby confess to having killed Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Hitchcock at Santa Ana on Tuesday morning, January 23rd. On Monday night they concluded to go to Santa Ana and asked me to drive them there. At five o'clock the next morning we started. I had previously got a hatchet from the yard and put it in the wagon. Hitchcock drove, his wife sitting next to him.

After we had gone a short distance I picked up the hatchet, and with all my force struck Hitchcock on the head; splitting it wide open, and then struck his wife in the head and jaw. They both fell backwards and died soon. I used no knife.

I did not know what to do with the bodies, so I turned round, went back and got a spade and then drove three miles from the house, where I jumped down and dug the hole. I then bound the hands and legs of the dead persons, dragged them out of the wagon into the hole and covered them up with dirt and then threw straw on the grave, so that no one could tell that the ground had been touched.

I then went to Santa Ana and brought Decker to the house. My object in tying the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock was so that they would not be so clumsy to handle, and they could be put more closely together in the hole. I went back to the farm and changed my clothing. I then cleaned the hatchet from the wagon and threw it into the wagon again, and then took my bloody clothes and hid them under a bush in the field, where I did not think they would be found or looked for. No one helped me.

FREDERICK ANSCHLEG.

"Passion's Slave."

There are hundreds of the older residents of Quincy who will remember with pleasure Miss Nellie Boyd, who was a member of Tom Duff's original Academy of Music stock company, in this city many years ago. At that time Miss Boyd made many warm and lasting friends among Quincy people, who will be only too glad to know of the great dramatic and financial success of their old friend. * * * We hope our people will fill the opera house tonight for old acquaintance sake, if for nothing else. It speaks volumes for Miss Boyd that, for nine years, she has managed her own company, which to-day contains many who has been with her all these years. Some years ago small pox seized upon two or three of Miss Boyd's company, but instead of abandoning these afflicted ones, she disbanded her company, and remained and cared for the sick. Upon their recovery the company re-united, and proceeded on their way. By this humane and Christian act Miss Boyd became famous on the Western slope, and every time she appears in that country, she is greeted with an ovation.—Quincy, Ill., Review.

Nevada's Outlook.

The Sentinel believes that the bed-rock of dull times in Nevada has been reached and passed, and from this time on our State will be on the up grade. A decided turn in our affairs took place last Summer and Fall. We have had a land boom in this State without knowing. A vast amount of land has been purchased last season by actual settlers. It shows that there are people who believe in our soil and climate. It shows further that there are people who have made up their minds to stay with the State through good and evil report. This is a healthy sign for our future. One of the great drawbacks to this State has been the unsettled, migratory disposition of our population. There was a time in Nevada, not many years ago either, when no living man or woman in the State expected to make a home for a lifetime within our borders. All regarded themselves as here but temporarily, to better their condition, and then make homes in some more attractive locality. And so our State has drifted on for nearly thirty years. It has not been understood. There are desirable features of climate and soil not equalled elsewhere on the face of the earth. People are just beginning to realize these things, and all over the State there are people who are fixing to live in Nevada for a lifetime, who until lately were ready to float out with the tide. This means business and a new departure for our State. It means attachment for the soil, and incidentally more pride in the success and welfare of our commonwealth. It means ultimately less corruption and a higher standard of morality among the people. But to secure and hold the boom which our State deserves and invites, we must go to work and cut the very life out of our State and county governments. A Constitutional Convention is a quick way to do it. There is not a county in the State whose entire official business cannot be conducted by three competent men. Two would be ample in Eureka and in a half dozen other counties. The same may be said of the State work at Carson. We will take a contract to do it all for $20,000 a year. It now costs $90,000. The Legislature should not meet oftener than once in four years. That would be ample. We have too many laws and too little enforcement of them now. There must be radical and relentless reform in our local system if we are to grow and prosper in the future.

No country will command permanent settlers where the rate of taxation is three or four per cent. per annum. That is as much as money will earn in the East. It is enough to scare away the desirable immigrant and keep him away. If there is any sense in the State, it ought to be able to see that these things which we have so often talked about in these columns are deserving of immediate consideration. The Lord helps those who help themselves. Let the devil take the hindmost.
