Youthful Depravity.

DETROIT, Mich., February 1.—The police of Bay City, Mich., have created a decided sensation by the discovery that a number of young girls, highly connected, who were supposed to be in school, as they left their homes each morning with their books and returned after school hours, have really visited houses of ill-repute and remained there during the day. The girls are but 14 and 16 years of age. Their families are nearly crazed by the announcement of their youthful depravity, and a searching investigation is to be made.

EXIT HENDERSON.

He is Allowed to Slip Out of Reno in the Night

The Gazette says: Yesterday it was rumored about town that the authorities had come to the conclusion that it would be impossible to convict Henry Henderson, the negro expressman charged with rape, and rather than subject the county to the expense of a second trial, it had been decided to allow him to go on his own recognizance. A Gazette reporter asked Judge King, Henderson's attorney, if such was the case, and was given to understand that proceedings looking to that end would probably be had, but requested that nothing be published regarding it. An attaché of the Sheriff's office, as well as County Clerk Julian, were subsequently interviewed, but nothing whatever could be learned from them, both professing the profoundest ignorance of the rumor. However, the events of the evening proved that the rumor was founded on fact, for as soon as the shades of night had fallen, the massive iron door of the jail was opened, and Henderson stepped forth a free man. A wagon and team were conveniently located near the courthouse and Henderson was quickly driven away by the party having him in charge, which is said to have consisted of a member of the Board of County Commissioners, the Sheriff and a Deputy Sheriff. Henderson was driven to the coal bin near Verdi, where the overland trains get coal, and told by the officials to right-about-face in the direction of the setting sun, and to keep himself moving until he had left the virgin soil of Nevada behind him forever. Then they left him, according to one statement, but another is that they placed him on the west-bound train and they remained there until the train had resumed its journey westward.

A FAITHFUL DOG.

He Defends his Dead Master's Body From the Coyotes for two Weeks.

The following interesting account of the death of H. P. Noyes comes to the APPEAL from R. F. Brooks of Round Valley, Inyo county. The heroic act of his dog in defending the body by leaving provisions untouched fourteen days, shows an animals devotion to his master to a degree unparalleled in the history of such strange examples of self sacrifice and faithfulness: [ROUND VALLEY INYO CO., CAL.,] Jan. 29th, 1888.

To the Editor of the APPEAL: On or about the 10th of this month, H. P. Noyes, (who had been hauling lumber from Mono Lake to Bishop Creek for a Mr. Hill) left Sherwin's Station, Round Valley, on snow shoes for Bodie, taking four days rations, and his dog, and as Mr. Noyes was known as an experienced mountaineer no fears were entertained of his getting through to Bodie without danger to himself, until two days ago, when his little dog returned alone to Sherwin's Station in a starving condition. Mr. J. L. C. Sherwin, himself an old and experienced mountaineer, feeling certain of the return of the dog alone, together with his starving appearance that something was wrong, started out on the trail with his brother Wm. Sherwin and his son Bertie Sherwin each on snow shoes and found the dead body of H. P. Noyes about ten miles from the Station in Rock Creek Canyon, near the old Toll House, lying on his face in the snow. From appearance Noyes having got so far on his way, got off his snow shoes and went down to the Creek for a drink, and returning must have been taken suddenly with heart disease or something as death must have been immediate, for the snow showed no signs of any struggle. Noyes seemed to have died as he fell on his face almost instantaneously, the dog stayed with the body two weeks without food, and although the four day's rations which Mr. Noyes had taken with him was lying by his side, untouched, the dog had not disturbed the food in the least, a track which the dog had beaten round the body, and outside coyote tracks, clearly showed that the dog had been defending the dead body all that time, and although knowing the food was lying there within his reach, would not touch it without his permission. Procuring more help from Long Valley, Mr. Sherwin brought the body in on a sled this evening to his Station from there the body will be taken to Bishop Creek and after an inquest will be placed in the Bishop Creek grave yard.

I send you this in order that if any of Mr. Noyes relatives still reside at Carson City that may know of his unfortunate death and if they desire his remains removed they may know where to find them. Respectfully,

R. FRED BROOKS.

"Passion's Slave."

The Los Angeles Herald says of the Nellie Boyd troupe which will appear at the theatre here on the 3rd inst:

The Nellie Boyd Dramatic Company opened at this resort last night to a tremendous house, which crowded auditorium and gallery to repletion. The artists of this troupe are confirmed Los Angeles favorites, and they proved by their performance that they deserved their cordial reception. The play underscored the sparkling melo-drama, "Passion's Slave" and all its possibilities were very fully developed.

A DESPERATE SUICIDE.

He Cuts His Throat from Ear to Ear.

Yesterday, about noon, a little girl living at the house of Ezra Crane, the brick maker, went across the street to carry something to a sick man, and came running back in a fright. The neighbors went in and found the man lying on the floor in a pool of blood, with his throat cut clear across. He had nothing on but an undershirt, and had apparently risen from his bed in the next room and gone into the kitchen where he had cut his throat. The blood was on the door knob, on the floor and on the walls. Everything was soaked with it, and the act of the despairing man was so recent that the body was still limp, and the blood had only just begun to coagulate. His left leg was diseased as if blood poisoning, and the table near the bed in the next room was covered with bottles of medicine. A bloody razor lay on the floor.

The man had died in the midst of the most miserable surroundings, and the place was indistinguishably filthy and wretched. The house was a hovel in the corner of Crane's brick yard. The man had been living there about eight months, and had been sick about a week. No one about the neighborhood seemed to know his name. The number of his shirt collar was 627.

Dr. Herrick said he was called on Tuesday to attend the man. He was suffering from rheumatism, and it went into his leg, giving him intense pain. The neighbors blistered it with hot water and burned off the skin. The man called himself Chris, and was a Dane. He seemed very despondent, and said he had never been sick before. On the morning of his death he seemed considerably improved.

The Coroner's inquest will be held today.

THE CASE OF APPLEBERG.

A Touching Example of Cleveland's Civil Service Reform.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE APPEAL:—Old Carl Appleberg, of this city, nearly froze to death in his bed during the late cold weather.

Charley, as he was called, was for a long while employed in the U. S. Mint, and lost one of his hands while working there. The Republican Administration kept him after his misfortune, as watchman; a position which he was able to fill and make his own living. When the Democratic Administration got in, one of the first things they did was to fire him and put an able-bodied Democrat in his place. While Charlie worked in the Mint he helped the poor with his money, and gave poor children money to make them happy. Many men that he helped then have since got good situations, and now they let him stay in his cabin to starve, and freeze his nose, ears, forehead, and other parts of his body for the want of means to buy provisions, wood and blankets. The Government gives soldiers pensions, and lots of them can earn an honest living. Why don't his friends get something from Congress—a pension or position?

It is a shame to let a man like this die of want when he lost his arm in the employ of the Government. He is too much of a man to go to the County Poor Farm and become a care of the people. It is the duty of those whom he helped to help him now.

A FRIEND OF APPLEBERG.

The Most Agreeable As well as the most effective method of dispelling Headaches, Colds, and Fevers, or Cleansing the System, is by taking a few doses of the pleasant California liquid fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs. For sale by Geo. C. Thaxter, agent.
