WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our regular cor respondent.]

WASHINGTON, Feb 24th. 1888.

The anti-Cleveland movement in the Democratic party is no longer to be conducted secretly. Nearly two-thirds of the National Democratic Committee, which met here this week to select the time and place for holding the nominating convention, are opposed to Cleveland. This fact was clearly brought out by the vote on the proposition, made by Representative Scott, of Pennsylvania, to hold the convention in advance of the Republican convention, which was 28 opposed to 19 in favor of an early convention. This fact is very suggestive, as it is well known here that Cleveland was in favor of an early convention, believing that the party controlling the Government should always take the initiative in a National Campaign. The above vote is believed to represent the Cleveland and anti-Cleveland strength of the committee.

The next day the Cleveland men, re-enforced by telegrams from Dan Lamont, succeeded in getting a reconsideration, and January 5th set as the day for holding the convention.

Another straw showing the direction of the breeze was the selection of St. Louis as the place for the convention. The Cleveland men wanted it held anywhere else than there. Still another blackeye for the Cleveland people was the selection of Steinway, the piano maker, to fill the vacancy in the committee from New York. Mr. Steinway has not been connected with any of the factions in the party in New York, but he is known to be extremely friendly to Governor Hill. It was fortunate for Cleveland that he was out of the city, as it gave him time to smooth his ruffled feathers before returning to the White House.

It will be surprising if the Republican Senators will vote to confirm the outside Fisheries treaty, which Cleveland says meets his approval. His ideas of what this country has a right to demand are a long way below those of the average American citizen. Does any sensible man believe that such a treaty could have been negotiated with James G. Blaine, Secretary of State?

The positive declination of Gen. Sheridan to be a candidate or under any circumstances to accept, the nomination for President should it be tendered him, has had the effect of adding to his already great popularity. "Little Phil" as his old soldiers like to call him, prefers to end his career as he began it-a soldier; and that he made a wise choice, no one can doubt, who will think of the trouble that followed the resignation of Gen. Grant from the Army.

In talking over the political situation with various Republican Senators, Representatives and visitors to the Capitol, it is remarkable to find them all showing such confidence of winning the big battle this year. There is no hurrah about it either. It is just a steady confidence, engendered by a thorough knowledge of the condition of the country. It is rare indeed to find an intelligent Republican who does not believe in the success of the party this year, no matter who shall be the leader.

As an organization the democratic party has always shown cowardice. It always waits for the Republican convention to meet, that it may study the platform issued by that body in order to get ideas to make its own. It is a party without original ideas; a party that with its whole existence has never originated a measure worth remembering.

There are some people here who wish the Committee to decide when a national convention shall be held, would meet here every week. Among them are the hotel keepers and the proprietor of the democratic morning paper. The latter is said to have received from Editor Hearst of the San Francisco "Examiner", a son of the millionaire Senator from California, $1,000 for a page of his paper on which was printed what purported to be a special edition of the "Examiner", favoring the holding of the convention at San Francisco. Conventions all come tight but the Californians were bound to have this one, if money could get it. But money did not succeed in this instance. F.

CHINESE AGITATION.

The agitation against the "Chinese Nuisance" has already begun in some places in California and that agitation will spread to all cities and towns. The anti-Chinese agitation is an certain a precursor of an election campaign as the flight of wild geese to the North is a forerunner of the Springtime. From Placerville the first note comes. The citizens there are to meet soon to take action on this Chinese nuisance. Some Chinese washerman has ironed the button off of some Placerville Man's shirt and the washerman forgot to sew on the button again, and that probably started the row. At any rate, we good people of this State not only tolerate but patronize the Chinese for the long times between election, and when campaign times comes the white voters discover some mean thing John Chinamea has done, and then the white voters hold nuisance meetings and protest at the presence of the Mongolians. And this spasmodic kicking against Chinamen has never done any good, by removing any Chinamen. If the white people could be persuaded to have less work done by Chinamen the white people would not be called so often to get themselves disagreeably excited at the presence here of the heathen, which presence is a nuisance in a great degree.-Grass Valley Tidings.

When Advertising is Useful.

An intelligent business man's method is thus told by the Colusa Sun: "When J. Furth was doing business in Colusa, there came some very dull seasons-some very dry seasons-when nearly all the merchants would be seized by an economical streak, and stop advertising, but Mr. Furth kept straight along advertising, and the consequence was, people came to think his the only permanent house in town. Advertising by spurts never pays."-Grass Valley Tidings.
