

JOHN DENNIS LOCATED.

John Dennis was at one time, in Nevada, the wittiest and ablest newspaper man of the Silver State as well as a prominent politician noted for his ability and honesty. Since his retirement from the Superintendency of the Carson Mint we had lost track of our old and esteemed friend, but now he bobs up serenely in New York City in a role that will not surprise his western acquaintances who are familiar with his "mashing" manners of long ago. However, there may be another John Dennis, by name. But this is what a recent dispatch says:

A stony-hearted landlady of this city has distinguished herself by rendering one of her lady boarders, pretty Ida J. Morgan, a most singular bill, and she attempted to back up her claim by retaining the young lady's trunk. The difference between them amounted to $4, and became a legal issue in court recently. It appears that Mr. John Dennis had courted Ida J. Morgan unremittingly from the time of her arrival at Mrs. Wilson's until she moved away. Miss Morgan packed her trunk on Monday and told Mrs. Wilson she was going to move, but Mrs. Wilson forbade her to take her trunk away until she paid $4 for what Mrs. Wilson termed the wear and tear on the household effects, caused by the coming in and going out of a friend. The friend was John Dennis, and the household effects the parlor sofa. The landlady offered to make the sofa an exhibit in the case, and showed that the springs had depressed a foot and a half by the constant worry of Mr. Dennis during a period of over three months. The case was duly tried before Justice Dean and judgment given for the defendant.—Elmore Bulletin.

THE VALUE OF NEWSPAPERS—The newspaper has made Presidents and killed poets, made States out of territories, statesmen out of paupers, and bustles that loom into the past on straight backed beauties. It has furnished genius with the sandpaper of criticism, made the world get up every morning for roll-call; given the pulpit lungs of iron and voice of thunder, and furnishes a soft foundation for a new carpet. It has curtailed the power of kings embellished the pantry shelves, barated rings and located county seats. It has educated the homeless, robbed the philosopher of his reason and even criticized Indian agents, but it can't be run to suit everybody, and the paper that starts on that course will have a rough road to travel.—Baltimore Mirror.

Thanksgiving festival is observed among the Indians. The principal chief of the Cherokees issued the following unique proclamation:

"As our forefathers, when Nature's children of the forest in pursuit of game, around the council fire in simplicity did give praise and and thanks to the Great Spirit in their yearly mystic 'green-corn dance' for the return of his great gift to them—the 'Indian' corn—now today, as a Christian nation of the people, it is but meet that the Cherokee people should give thanks to the Christian's God for his continued protection of our tribe in the enjoyment of their government and homes, and that, through the many trials we have been compelled to pass, he has continued to bless the people."

One of the youngest monarchs in the world is King Thantati, potentate of Annan. He is nine years of age, very precocious and fully conscious of the importance of his position. He is solemn and thoughtful, disdains childish sports, and spends all his time in the seclusion of his palace, studying, conversing with aged counsellors and perusing ever books and manuscript. He is learning Chinese and French, and shows remarkable aptitude in the acquisition of foreign tongues. He is very arbitrary and his teachers stand in great awe of him.—The National.
