

ALL SORTS.

Bill Chrisher has the gripe. No steck report since the 22nd. A light rain fell yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Guion is still under the weather.

Mrs. M. A. Murphy is greatly improved.

The roof is leaking and the editorial room is in soak.

The Mint is held back by the storm holding back bullion.

Work on the Indian school has been delayed by the storm.

Attention is called to the professional card of Dr. J. W. Fox.

You don't have to drop a nickel in the slot to test your "grippe."

Putty is a good substance to stop the leaks in tin roofs until after the storm.

Abe Cohn has an elegant assortment of winter goods at the emporium.

The Bullion & Exchange Bank closed up yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock.

Work cannot be commenced in the saw mills at the lake before June or July.

Joe Galiano, the barber has accepted a challenge to cut hair with the champion of New York.

The report reached Carson yesterday that men enough to run the rotary plow could not be had.

The statements in yesterday morning's APPEAL concerning the railroads came from D. A. Beader.

The inmates of the State Prison are busy cleaning the snow from the quarry and arranging to run off the water.

The Dayton dredger will shortly be taken to San Francisco Bay to dredge for the body of the late Mr. Macgintee.

Any person in possession of a news item is requested to leave the same at this office; it will be thankfully received.

We hope this storm has completely snowed McGinty under as he has attracted the attention of the entire universe.

It is said that the snow shovelers on the C. P. have been ordered to discontinue operations until the snow ceases to drift.

LOST—A keg of beer (five gallon variety). If Jake Klein will leave the same at the APPEAL office, no questions will be asked. j26*

Jules Verne's real name is Olchewitz. The novelist is now 68 years old, and engaged in the production of one of his greatest works.

The flags on the V. & T. R. R. depot and R. R. shops were put at half mast yesterday out of the respect to the memory of M. M. Hyde.

It is feared there will be much suffering for the necessaries of life among the people living in the camps south of us before the roads are opened.

An APPEAL reporter was informed yesterday by good authority, that it would be impossible to get any trains from San Francisco for at least a week.

The Government Building is now completed internally, with the exception of putting in some glass which cannot arrive until the blockade is raised.

Reports are so conflicting now concerning the railroads that the paper is unable to give any exact data regarding the arrival of trains, or condition of the roads.

News items are becoming scarce, and if some mail don't reach Carson pretty sudden, the APPEAL will be obliged to pick a row with some other journal; anything to fill up space.

Now is the time to protect the lungs well and keep the body as warm as possible, as the air is full of moisture and a cold setting in now is liable to develop into pneumonia.

While Will Wright is still with Peterson, at the gallery over Thaxter's, special attention will be paid to enlarging of portraits. Mr. Peterson has done some very fine work in this line, which can be seen at the gallery. The public is invited to call and inspect same.

DON'T WANT 'EM AROUND

A Few People We Don't Care to Meet.

With no trains, hardly any mail from the East and none from the West, it is hard work enough to get out a readable paper without the typos being bothered by people whose only mission on earth is to pick flaws, create disturbances and claim to know everything when they really don't know anything.

There are several other classes of people who are only a burden to mankind, and need a resting place in close proximity to the Hon. Mr. McGinty, deceased. The following are a few:

The one who springs the McGinty joke on every occasion.

The man who carries the only correct time.

The man who thinks he knows all about the arrival of the delayed trains.

The man who hunts errors in the home paper.

The man who wants an extra copy gratis.

The man who is everlastingly predicting another storm.

The man who wants the carrier killed.

The man who knows all about a scandal, because he overheard Jones tell Smith what he heard about the affair.

The man who wants to know why it wasn't stated in the news columns that he had "la grippe."

The man who wants it denied that he had it.

The man who predicted the storm two months in advance.

The man who wants to bet on Jackson-Sullivan fight—when he gets some money.

The man who don't like Klein's beer; if such a man can be found anywhere.

The man who is predicting a flood.

The man who is predicting a famine.

The man who knows who will be the next Governor.

The man who says the APPEAL is devoid of news.

The above mentioned people are respectfully requested to remain away from this office.

He had been working at the time of his death 14 years for the V. & T. shops. In his line he was considered one of the best workmen on the Pacific Coast. He leaves a wife, one daughter and a son to mourn his loss.

Mr. Hyde was a Mason and was insured for $2,500. The funeral will take place under the auspices of the Masonic order, Sunday at 2 o'clock. Friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend.

It is said that the drug stores of Carson, Reno and Virginia have been raked for anti-parein. This is spelled wrong purposely, to give somebody an opportunity to make a fuss over it.

The snow plough being made at the Shops to assist in getting the train out which was stuck this side of Gold Hill was abandoned yesterday.

The school Trustees have resolved not to open school next Monday. It will probably be another week before school reopens.

HOW A DOG DIED.

Going Out of Life Looking Longingly at His Friends.

Shall I tell you how a dog died? Last summer I spent on the seashore at a lazy little resort where everybody knew everybody. Among the guests was a big, handsome St. Bernard dog named Lord Lovell. I speak of him as one of the guests, because he was as conspicuous and interesting a figure as was there, although he walked on four legs and the other guests on two. He was on the most friendly terms with all, but formed a special attachment for a bright and spirited young girl. He was also devoted to his owner, a delicate man of silent and preoccupied manner; but he sought the society of the young lady with as much delight as a person could have shown. They spent hours together on the beach; and in the evening, when the guests were all grouped together on the piazza, Lord Lovell was sure to have some portion of his big body touching Miss Alice's dress. At such times his eyes were almost human in expressiveness—indeed, more than human, I sometimes thought.

One day several of us were down on the beach. Miss Alice sat high up on the sands, Lord Lovell was moving about in a stately way, and his owner occupied one of the benches up near the walk. The others were scattered around, chatting and laughing in the mind-weakening way people do at such places. Suddenly the dog ran to Miss Alice, and laying his head upon her lap, looked into her face and whined as if he were suffering pain. She noticed that he trembled violently, and that two great tears fell from his pleading eyes. "What's the matter, Lovell?" she said kindly, patting his head. He only moaned. Then leaving her he hurried to his master and repeated the same appeal. Returning to the young lady he rested his head on her lap an instant, moaned pitifully, looked at her as men look their last at some beloved thing, licked her hand caressingly, then moved a step or two away and fell dead.

"Pitiful—over more than the pain of human beings whose lips can speak—" says Robert Buchanan, "are the fatal pangs of poor beasts that the good God made dumb. By an instinct diviner than our reason they know and feel the approach of death, and sometimes they seem to love life well—so well they dare not die. Shall we weep by mortal death-beds and keep dry eyes by these, or shall we not rather deem that the shadow that darkens our hearts is terrible to theirs, and that the blessing we ask upon our last sleep shall be spoken on theirs as well—with the same hope of awakening, with the same poor gleam of comfort, with the same faith born of despair in the presence of that great darkness we cannot understand?"

HARRIET G. ROCKWELL. BOSTON, Mass., May 19.

Tagliani, when asked if she would like to repeat her life, answered: "To dance, yes; for there is always consolation in art; but for anything else, no; a thousand times no."

What in the world is the reason you will cough and keep coughing and still keep trying inferior medicines when BEGG'S' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP will positively receive your cough at once? This is no advertising scheme, but an actual fact, and we guarantee it. W. M. Chedie, Druggist.

How Can Parents

allow their children to cough and strain and cough and calmly say: "Oh! its only a little cold," and keep giving them cheap and dangerous medicines, until they are down with lung fever or consumption, when they can be so easily relieved by BEGG'S' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP? What on Earth

Is the reason people will not, cannot, or do not see any difference in cheap nos trams put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGG'S' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work, will cost you nothing.
