Australian Ballot.

The following from the Chronicle explains the workings of the secret plan:

Notwithstanding the Australian ballot system was recommended by both parties in their State platforms, there appear to be quite a number of persons who are in ignorance in regard to the details of its workings. They are substantially as follows: Ballots are to be provided at public expense. None but those ballots are to be used; on them are to be printed the name of all candidates who are nominated either by conventions or petitions a short period prior to the election; the ballots are to be distributed only by sworn ballot clerks, at the polls, to voters, and for actual and immediate use in voting. The voter is allowed five minutes in which to retire to a booth conveniently arranged, where he secretly marks his choice of candidates upon the face of the ballot, or, if he prefers, writes the names of candidates of his own nomination in place of those already printed; having done this he proceeds directly to the ballot box, and, without exposing the face of the ballot or communicating with any one, deposits the ballot as his vote. For the benefit of blind and illiterate, such a voter is permitted to select one of the two ballot clerks, who, under oath of fidelity and secrecy, assists him in marking his ballot. If any person in preparing a ballot spoils it, he may successively obtain others one at a time, not exceeding three in all, upon returning each spoiled one. The ballots thus spoiled must be immediately cancelled and preserved by the ballot clerk.

Kalakaua Received.

He left the Charleston in the Admiral's barge late Thursday afternoon, and a few moments later arrived at the Clay-street wharf the Charleston and Swartara firing a royal salute as the King left the ship. Upon arriving at the wharf he was received by General Gibbon, commanding the Division of the Pacific, and Consul General McKinley of Hawaii. A battalion of U. S. cavalry was drawn up in line facing the wharf, and great crowds of people surrounded the landing place. As the King left the barge he bowed right and left in acknowledgment of the cheers which were given by the spectators. King Kalakaua immediately entered a carriage drawn by four horses and was driven to the Palace Hotel, where a reception was given him, which was attended by Governor Waterman, Mayor Pond, representatives of commercial organizations and a number of prominent citizens.

Wise Honeylakers.

The people of Honey Lake are at work in earnest for reclamation of the arid lands of Lassen Co., Cal. During the past Spring and Summer not less than $750,000 has been spent in the good work, and the coming Summer will see 50,000 acres of dry land supplied with an abundance of water for all purposes. They now have several immense reservoirs. It is the purpose of the several companies to get the land and water together and prepare the land for settlers, then invite immigration and it is expected that fully 1,000 families will move into that country this coming year.

The policy of General Miles in massing an overwhelming force of troops at the scene of Indian hostilities is the only correct one. In previous Indian campaigns the soldiers have been so few that the Indians have laughed at them. This time Miles proposes to overawe the savages by such an exhibition of force that they will not dare to strike a blow. The Sioux are like the Chinese—they have no respect for anything but force. —Journal.
