

YOU CAN'T REACH 'EM.

A gentleman—evidently one who has suffered—writes the APPEAL to know if the Grand Jury ought not to investigate certain female blackmailers in this city.

They ought to, but they will not. A good, smart female blackmailer is an exceedingly hard horse to curvy and if the Grand Jury tackles the proposition it will find the evidence exceedingly scant.

They probe the weak spots of their victims and are always sure of their game.

There has been considerable of this infamous business going on in Carson, and several married men have been compelled to hand over monthly assessments to silence the tongues of these insatiate harpies of character, who have cast the wages of shame and the hush-money of their victims into the same box.

These women feel perfectly secure from grand juries, as the parties they have in their toils are the last people who would care to testify.

The laws of the State proscribe the penitentiary for such cases, but without direct testimony they can never be indicted, much less convicted.

Not long ago a married man in this city, received an anonymous letter directing him to send $100 to a certain address or she would call on his wife and expose some of his escapades.

He replied by sending a letter to the address inclosing a bogus check, thinking when she called at the bank she would be identified.

The letter was taken from the office, but the woman was too sharp to attempt to cash the check, and wrote to the effect, that if he enclosed a bill, she would be better satisfied. He suspected who the party was and hired a boy to hang about the delivery window until he heard the second letter called for.

The woman was thus caught, and she proved to be one against whom no suspicion was attached. He called on her later in the day and threatened to have her indicted for attempt at blackmail, but she only laughed and said she had the drop on too many people, himself among the number.

He dropped the matter, and some day when he wants to pick up a red-hot horseshoe, he will probably revive the affairs, but it is not likely.

Indict female blackmailers?
Not much!

The Gazette Also In.

In seeking of the declaration of the APPEAL that it proposes to drive the criminal class out of politics in this State, the Reno Gazette says:

The Gazette has been working for two years or more to accomplish the same thing, but it has had no help from any paper in the State, and we are glad to receive the APPEAL into the ranks of honest and fearless journalism. The milk and water press of the State, controlled by the so-called powers, have done more to degrade honest manhood and push the State into the rut that she is in than all the other influences combined, and it can do more to make it respectable than any other force, if it will. The Gazette will do its share, and we take it from the editorial in the APPEAL that paper will also stand in.

Now we would like to ask the rest of the papers of this State what they propose to do during the next few years, on this proposition. The State has been slowly drifting to the dogs because everything political is fixed up to suit a few men who have no interest whatever in the State except to drain it of money to send abroad.

C. W. Grover has sold his interest in the Independent to W. W. Booher formerly of Virginia City. Booher is a man of push and enterprise and an excellent writer.
