

No Wonder.

Some months ago some attorneys who are constantly studying to cut down the printers' profits, induced the Supreme Court to allow transcripts to be printed by typewriters.

The copy of the transcript I received is almost illegible, and, fearing that the transcript filed in the Supreme Court is in like condition, I will here insert the said affidavits for the convenience of the Court.

Indeed, I am loth to say that the rule lately adopted, allowing transcripts and briefs to be in typewriting, will be, very likely, attended with great inconvenience and annoyance to this Court and to the profession, besides it encourages frivolous appeals.

In his letter accepting the Republican nomination for Governor, McKinley of Ohio made us the following remarks, which are of more than local application.

The public credit and sound finances must be preserved, and every scheme to destroy it must be met with courage and brains and repelled by the mighty force of public opinion.

"I wish that cursed country (America) had never been discovered," said John Bright, "because," added the great free trader, "they have no taxes in proportion to their population."

The principle witness who saved Olsen's neck from stretching, has just been arrested for perjury. Now, suppose he is convicted, what effect does it have on Olsen.

In 1875 wire nails were ten cents a pound, and the duty one cent a pound. Now the duty is just double and the price of the nails three cents a pound.

Senator Stewart's views on the one-term principle are good. It seems to us that a man occupying the Presidential chair one term should be satisfied.

Major Frank McLaughlin's treatment of oranges by electricity will result in a big law suit between him and a Florida man, who alleges an infringement of his patent right.

Forty-six thunder storms were recorded by the weather observers in this State for May.
