TWAIN IN CARSON.

Some Reminiscences by His Nephew Will Clemens

Will M. Clemens, a nephew of Mark Twain, is writing a sketch of his life for "Library and Studio," a San Francisco magazine. The following will be read with interest by Carsonites:

President Lincoln had appointed James W. Nye as Governor of Nevada, and Orion Clemens, an older brother of Samuel, was selected as Territorial Secretary by the President. Sam joined his brother at Carson City in the capacity of private secretary. He did not remain long in Carson, but pushed on to an out of the way mining camp, called Aurora. While in Aurora he wrote a series of letters to the Virginia City Enterprise, which subsequently resulted in his obtaining an editorial position on that journal.

Nevada, at that time, was swarming with adventures. Bankrupt traders were flocking there from other territories. College graduates, tired of grubbing for Greek roots, went there to grub for gold and silver. Murderers and thieves, escaped from justice, gamblers and the outcasts from the cities joined the throng and society became very lively in the mining towns of the Territory. The fashionable ornaments of the day consisted of an eight-inch revolver, an Arkansas toothpick and jack boots.

In the mining regions Mark Twain passed through divers experiences. He worked at day's wages in a quartz mill, and was explorer and prospector. Many of his sketches, afterward incorporated in "Jumping Frog" and "Roughing It," were published at that time in local or Eastern journals. Once for the space of a few moments, he owned the famous Comstock lode, and was worth millions. He found out all this after he had sold the claim.

During the Winter of 1861-2 he returned to Carson City for a time. There was little doing at the territorial capital, and in the rear of Governor Nye's private office was a comfortable room, where Clemens and the other attaches of the offices whiled away the Winter days at cards and story telling.

In the Spring of 1862 he accepted the local editorship of the Virginia City Enterprise, and upon that paper utilized for the first time his pseudonym of "Mark Twain." He perpetrated many broad and practical jokes through his paper. His sharp pen caused a man named Willis, then city editor of the Virginia Union to hunting up his record. This resulted in Clemens sending Willis a challenge to mortal combat. Willis would not accept, for he said he would not meet anyone on the field of honor except a man of honor. His best man then challenged Clemens, but he too declined on the same ground given by Willis. At that time dueling had just been made popular by a meeting between Tom Fitch, the silver tongued orator, and Joseph T. Goodman, editor of the Enterprise. But the matter was dropped, and Mark Twain and Willis never met upon the field of honor.

The above is not exactly correct. Twain never challenged Willis and Willis never refused to fight anybody who wanted a row.

At Steamboat Today.

The third of the series of five games between the Emporiums and Comstocks will be played at Steamboat today. Both clubs have been strengthened during the past week, and a close and exciting game can be looked for. The Emporiums added a new member last night in the person of Rube Kelly, who will pitch for that nine today. The Comstocks will play Hurley on third.

The APPEAL can assure its readers that there is no put up job about the game and it will be played strictly on its merits.

The ball game and the racing programme ought to draw an immense crowd. Round trip from Carson only $1.00

A GOOD SHOWING.

The Fund Closes With Over Sixty Dollars.

The APPEAL closed its fund for Mrs. Pratt last evening and the sum realized was $63.30 which is indeed a good showing for a ten-cent subscription in Carson when half the population are abroad at Summer resorts.

The poor woman in San Francisco on her bed of pain must feel grateful to the people of this city who contributed their mites to her as a tribute to her grit and self sacrifice.

Now that the APPEAL has closed its fund in Carson we hope that the papers in some other town in Nevada will start it and that each town in the State will raise as much. The money raised here will be sent to the San Francisco Examiner as the matter for a fresh fund. Parties have written from this city to the Enterprise to start the ball rolling on the Comstock, and as that city is proverbial for its generosity there will no doubt be a handsome sum raised among men who know how to appreciate grit in either man or woman.

Blue Laws in the East.

Bathers at Eastern resorts have recently been forbidden to walk from their cottages to the beach in the abbreviated costumes usually worn while sloshing around in the sad sea waves. They must wear gowns or gossamers reaching to the heels, under penalty of $5 fine, or five days imprisonment. This is horrible. Bathers should not be so encumbered. The small boy who immerses his anatomy in the murky waters of the mill race, wearing nothing but a few stone bruises and a rag around his finger, is the only true bather. As he wades in the warm, stagnant water, and the soft, yielding mud oozes gently up between his toes, he is thrilled with delight such as an ocean bather can never experience. But their is certain prudishness in this world that must be catered to. Custom is an inexorable tyrant. In Zululand a maiden arrayed in a string of beads and a smile is considered pretty well togged out, but in New York she has to case herself in gowns and gossamers till she is completely out of sight.

While law reaches for the bather in the East, Santa Cruz and Sausalito still adhere to the regular undress costumes which make women look so lovely in the surf.

Jackson's Idea.

The Enterprise had a geological fit when the APPEAL reported Hebe Holman as saying that the ledges at Pinenut were pushed to the surface by volcanic force. Mr. Jackson, formerly superintendent of the Sutro Tunnel, said yesterday to the editor of the APPEAL: "The formation is peculiar, the ledges have been pushed to the surface by volcanic forces. There is a limestone cap broken through. If the formation is not shut off lower down by limestone it is a big find. To the southward there is evidence of a contact vein. I think well of the formation as far as I could see, but I only had five hours to investigate."
