

LYNCH LAW.

The law has been defied in Reno and the citizens as a last resort have hung Louis Ortiz, who attempted to murder Richard Nash, an officer of the law who was performing his duty. Nash is not yet dead but Ortiz's body dangled from an iron bridge twenty-four hours after he fired the shots. His livid face showed all the pent up passion of its deviltry and had twice before looked upon the dead, the victims of his pistol and knife. In his very soul lurked murder, and it was governed by a mind as polluted and debased as its owner. His statement before the shooting that he wanted to kill somebody showed the passion to take a human life that lurked within him.

The public mind had reached the limit of endurance, and when this human satan went to work again, it burst out in a fury of wrath and put an end to his miserable life.

His life has been taken from him with as little ceremony as he has taken others.

The citizens who rose up to defend themselves are satisfied that their actions were just and that in hanging Louis Ortiz, a law was again enforced that criminals fear more than the courts.

The entire proceeding was orderly in every respect and carried out before many witnesses.

ALL SORTS.

As the result of an oversight in ordering the tickets for the Agricultural ball they were printed, "Given by the ladies of Carson in aid of," etc. They should have read, "Given by the ladies of District No. 1," which comprises Ormsby, Storey and Douglas counties.

Now is the time to go to Pine Nut and work claims. There will be nearly two months and a half of good weather to work, and prospectors can get deep enough down on their ledges to get away from the cold weather and by Spring have mines instead of claims. The Pine Nut stage yesterday brought some quartz from Dean's & Viera's claim, rich in silver, galena and gold, which comes from about half a mile north of Zira's mine.
