

MORNING APPEAL

SUNDAY.....DECEMBER 6

BODY AND SOUL.

Emperor William got off the following speech through his new beard on the occasion of administering the oath to his life guards in Berlin last week:

"Recruits, you have, before priest and altar, sworn fealty to me. You are too young to understand the true meaning of the words in which you have sworn, but be diligent in following the instruction given you. You have, my children, sworn allegiance. That means you have given your services to me, body and soul. You have only one enemy and that is my enemy. If I may order you, which God forbid, to shoot down your relatives—your brothers, even your parents—and you must obey without a murmur."

COAST NEWS.

Bodies continue to be recovered from underneath the debris caused by the landslide at Canton Wash.

The manufacture of printing ink from petroleum has been regularly commenced at Santa Paula and an ink department added to the refinery there.

Evan Carver, twenty-one years old, was sentenced at Union, Or., Wednesday last, to be hanged Jan. 21st. The Judge shed tears while passing sentence.

While some hotel waiters were fishing for mackerel at the Coronado pier, their lines became entangled about the tail of a shark about five feet long and pulled ashore.

At Eagle Gorge, fifty miles east of Tacoma, Charles Rodgers met his death and Henry O'Neill was frightfully mangled by the explosion of giant powder. The powder was frozen and Rodgers attempted to thaw it out.

In the door yard of A. H. Tufts of Pomona there is a young Malta blood orange tree that is a marvel. It was a small tree, budded one year when set out two years ago, 1839. It is not yet a large tree, and the wonder is how it can support the enormous crop of fruit it has. There are 206 fine large oranges on this tree.

John W. Phillips, editor of the Pacific Journal at Sedland, Wash., is the leader of the best coronet band in that locality. During the summer months, grand concerts are given at Morrisons' to which hundreds attend to listen to the printers band.

If Captain Haynie's report is correct there ought to be a little more attention paid to the sewerage in the north end of town. A little repairing would be of considerable value to the city in the future.

Mr. Carpenter is not responsible for the course of nature in the growth of roots, but is for careful work on the joints. If there are any defects that can be remedied now the APPEAL believes that Mr. Carpenter will attend to them.

Gazette Weather Service.

The combined fall of rain, sleet, and snow, since my measurement of the 1st instant, is this morning just 3-10 of an inch, toos making the total since the first of December, 53-100 of an inch, which is quite a substantial rainfall for this region.

The barometer, which on the 2nd inst. was abnormally high, ranging above 25 6-10 inches, began a most rapid tumble, and on yesterday at 2 p. m., was down to 25 15-100 inches. It then began a rapid rise, and is, at this writing, at the average for this place. The fine days are here, and now for the winter nights. Take in your popcorn balls by sundown.

C. W. IRISH.

The Music and Drama prints a good portrait of Eleanor Barry; formerly Mrs. J. G. Chesley, and says: Miss Barry will re-appear on Monday evening as Rachel Westwood in Woman against Woman, a very strong role of the adventuress type, and a class of character she has proved very successful in.

The Wasp prints a cartoon entitled "The Rise and Fall of a Great Party," referring to the Farmers' Alliance. It is a good picture to make people laugh and it will also please the opposing parties, but it lacks tangibility.

Cider.
Doc. Benton has leased several orchards and is concentrating his attention to the production of genuine apple cider fit for table use or mince pies. It is the real article and can be ordered at his livery stable. 6231f

AS WE SEE IT.

From our office-chair, the view of the new store shows a large part of it devoted to the filling of out-of-town wants. Often as we look out upon the busy scene, we wonder if people realize that mail-order shopping has become an institution of general public good, quite as important, in its way, as the post-office, free education, and other advantages of this nineteenth century. Try, for a moment, to look at it as we do.

People everywhere are working from morning until night, from childhood to old age, and it is largely a struggle for food and clothing. Every one needs these in order to exist, and it is that necessity which keeps the world ever at work. How important, then, to humanity at large that these great needful things should be supplied on the best terms possible,—that goods should go as nearly as possible direct from the mills and factories to those who actually use them. If a number of profits are to be added to the cost of an article or articles, then it is impossible for hard-earned dollars to buy as much as they ought to buy.

It is just here that the great stores of to-day step in. They are based largely on this modern idea of buying in bulk from first hands, and turning over the goods to the consumer at a small profit. Such stores require large capital and trade to succeed, and naturally are found only in large cities. But for Mail-order shopping, out-of-town residents would be shut off from the great advantages they undoubtedly confer.

Few large stores have a Mail-order service, although with us that has grown to be a leading feature of our business,—due, perhaps, to the fact that people have learned to know that they can write to us for what they want, and be as well served as if they came in person. Mail-order shopping puts before the residents of small towns the chance to get the same goods and prices as city trade. To our mind, the value to them of that privilege cannot be overestimated.

Thus it is pleasant to know that customers are reaping as much or more benefit from the various transactions of this business as the business itself. The profits made from their trade may be seen concentrated in the beautiful new building, with its great stock, but what the business has done in return is only known and appreciated in the tens of thousands of homes where its goods have gone.

To those who are interested in Mail-order shopping we will send free a large descriptive catalogue, with prices and complete information.
