JIM CORBETT WINS

HE KNOCKS G. SULLIVAN IN 21 ROUNDS.

Sullivan Outclassed from the First Round.

JIM WASN'T HURT.

PETER JACKSON SHOULD NOW BE HEARD FROM.

A Detailed Account of Sullivan's First Defeat.

Special to the APPEAL

The Fight by Rounds.

New Orleans, Sept. 7.—The town is a seething mass of sporting men and the Olympic club is jammed. At 9:10 Sullivan and Corbett entered the ring and the cheering was deafening. John weighed in at 212 and Jim at 189. The gloves were found all right and time was called.

1. Both men come to the scratch with a bound, Sullivan is aggressive but Jim dodges smiling. Tame in the extreme.

2. Sullivan becomes angry and attempts to chase Corbett to corner, Jim neatly escapes upward and taps John on stomach; honors even.

3. Corbett dances up to the Boston boy and lands on his wind, John attempts to swing hard but only taps Jim's shoulder, who pelts him in the ear with his right, and John's head flops back with a jerk; Corbett is in good humor.

4. Both men come to the centre perspiring. Jim walks around and suddenly comes in with a right and left poke on Sully's neck smiling as he lands. Corbett is being cheered.

5. Both men are now smiling and Jim lands on face, clinch and separation after which the Californian lets his right go and the blood spurts out of John's nose coloring his body, he is driven to the ropes and unmercifully beaten. The crowd is on its feet and it looks as if Sullivan would loose; the gong taps and men go to corners.

6. Sullivan is red with blood and as he stepped to the front Jim again let his right loose and whelms him in the nose, countering on head with his left; John comes back with a terrific smash on the neck followed with bad left handed swing. Honors even.

7. John is like a tiger and bangs Jim on both sides of the head, who returns with another smash at John's nose who counters and lands on Jim's head twice, and about the same time gets three jabs on the nose for his trouble. Corbett is now the aggressor and forces John to the ropes again punching him all the time.

8. Considerable rapid head and neck smashing takes place and Jim is forcing the fight like a demon, he lands on John's stomach three times and sends the Boston beef to his corner looking very tired.

9. Jim's head stops a right hander from John and both men appear very cautious. Sullivan gets to Corbett's wind, who swings hard right on his neck.

10. Both exchange on neck; Sullivan now aggressive; John lands on Corbett's neck, and latter showed great generosity; Sullivan rushed and got jabbed; Corbett was loudly cheered.

11. Corbett as fresh as a daisy; both land but are cautious; John was forced to the ropes and was jabbed twice in the nose.

12. Corbett lands on John's stomach and gets one on the wind in return; Corbett landed on Sullivan's neck and stomach, smiling; Corbett does most of the fighting.

13. Sullivan lands on Corbett's neck, and looks like a tiger; he lands on Jim's wind; Sullivan aggressive.

14. Sullivan lands hard on Jim's neck, and there are several counter exchanges; they both smile; both land on neck, and Corbett gets a hard punch on the forehead; honors even.

15. Both come up quickly; John forces and Jim swings on his neck and clinches; John pokes him on the neck and the latter comes back on the stomach; cheers for Corbett.

16. Corbett lands on neck and John comes back on the chest; Corbett now the aggressor, landing on Sullivan's nose and wind; honors easy.

17. Both men are anxious; Jim is the fresher and Sullivan is breathing hard; Corbett jabbed him on the face and wind and retires gay.

18 Corbett came up confident and both were fighting hard; Corbett swung on the big man's head, who came back with a hard one on the ribs. Then Corbett led him on and banged him in the face four times. Corbett has the best of the fight by long odds.

19. Sullivan came up mad and vicious. Jim rushed and landed on the face and stomach twice, repeating the dose on Sullivan's face. John is getting tired and looks sad.

20. Sullivan landed his left on Corbett's face, then Corbett forced Sullivan to the ropes, smashing him four times in the face; they both exchanged swinging blows on the neck and face. Then Corbett got Sullivan on the ropes again where he punched him hard. Corbett is quite fresh.

21. Sullivan landed his left hard, and Corbett landed three times on Sullivan's stomach and face, finally landing a terrible right hander on Sullivan's neck, flooring the big boy from Boston; who went down bleeding like a stuck bull. He tried to get up but was counted out.

Corbett was then declared champion of the world, amidst a cyclone of cheers and yells.

The ovation to Corbett was terrific and he was almost smothered by his friends. He came out without a scratch.

Sullivan finally stepped up and said: "I fought once too often, but am glad the championship remains in America."

Sullivan is terribly punished.

THE SILVER CONVENTION.

What the Silver State has To Say Of It.

Regarding the silver convention the Silver State has the following:

It seems that there is some dissatisfaction in Storey and Ormsby counties because the convention was called at Winnemucca, the most central part of the State, and not at Reno. Eastern Nevada sent some 75 or 80 delegates to Reno at the first convention, while Storey, only 20 miles away, sent only twelve and twenty-four proxies and Eastern Nevada let Reno and Virginia have the meetings for General Weaver without a kick.

It is a hardship for the delegates in the eastern and southern counties of the State to pay railroad fare clear to Reno and return, when this burden can be divided. So far as the Humboldt county league is concerned, it would not care where convention was held; it would be there with a full delegation even if the convention had been called at Pioche.

It was urged by many members of the League in eastern Nevada to have another convention held at Winnemucca on account of its central location, but the Humboldt League urged that the convention should go to the western part of the State, either to Reno, Carson or Virginia, and it sent its full quota of thirty-three delegates.

The Humboldt and others in the east favored the calling of a convention at Reno on the 31st day of August or the 1st day of September, but this was not deemed advisable by many leading members in the west and the members of the east acquiesced although it was against their best judgement.

To have called the central committee together after the first of this month and then to call a convention so much time would have been consumed and the convention necessarily have been so late as to thwart the objects of the convention and leave the silver leagues in the predicament of the poor boy at a husking—without a word to say. As it is, no time can be spared after the fifteenth if the leagues don't want to be shut out and we know they don't, and don't intend to be. The silver leagues are not in the fight for child's play, nor simply for amusement for themselves or anybody else. They are in on principal, and to stay until Nevada shall be redeemed from the demoralization and the trucking of the two parties to the money power, and freed from the clanking chains of slavery, forged for every industry in the State by English and American plutocracy now represented by Harrison and Cleveland and their supporters. We can see no sensible kick coming from any quarter.

If any silver man is so weak in the faith that he can be shaken from his allegiance to the vital principle of free coinage because he has to meet his brother members at a Convention held in a central location instead of at the extreme side of the State and only two hours' ride from his own door, then we are afraid his faith is not strong enough to carry him through the election wherever the convention might be held. It is no time to swap horses while you are crossing a stream. Pull off your coat, roll up your sleeves, stop your growling, come to the convention and you will be received so cordially that you will be glad the convention will not be held even at your own home.
