

DISTINCTION FOR THE BAD.

It seems rather a curious thing that while one generally regards a statue as a reward of merit, it is nevertheless a fact that the very worst people of the world have been oftenest reproduced in imperishable marble.

Helen of Troy, whose society scandals plunged two nations into war, has been passed down in marble and poetry until she has been almost deified.

Phyrne, who ran a place in Athens that wouldn't be allowed within a hundred yards of a Carson City school house, has been done in oil and marble about a hundred thousand times.

While her character was something awful, her figure was so perfect that even old Socrates could not withstand her charms and so the poets and sculptors of several centuries have been casting the glamor of art and poetry over the life of this beautiful Athenian wanton, and her name will live in the memory of man for centuries to come.

Then comes Cleopatra, the Sorceress of the Nile, who made such a monkey of old Mark Antony; the most cruel, murderous, beautiful and irresistible witch of a woman that ever melted the virtuous resolve of man and the worst pill in all history, is made over in marble, colored up in oil, put on the stage and crowned by poet, sculptor and playwright.

Then there is the fickle, giddy Aspasia. She is still a great favorite with the marble cutters, the poets and the painters. Her record wouldn't go through the mails if printed in a family newspaper.

But the girl that still gets the best advertised of the whole lot, who has been done in stone more than all the rest, is Venus, the patron saint of harlotry.

We have not mentioned all of the hard cases of history; just a few sample female toughs to illustrate the idea.

The bad people seem to be all embalmed in history, and the harder cases they were, the better succeeding generations seemed to like them. Just why this is we don't pretend to say; we merely state the facts and let other people draw their conclusions.

The main thing seems to be that if a woman is only beautiful she can carry hell around in a hand basket and no one objects.

TWO CURIOUS ARGUMENTS.

The gold bug organs say that the silver movement is a job to compel people to sell a dollar's worth of goods for a dollar only worth 80 cents.

They also declare that if free coinage became a law the silver dollar will be worth 133 cents. Now it looks as if anybody who sold a dollar's worth of goods for one of those 80 cent dollars would make a good thing holding on to it until it struck 130.

The sort of a dollar that enables the holder to realize 50 cents by holding on a spell ought to be mighty popular before long.

A City Ordinance Needed.

Although the State cannot collect a Drummer's license there is no reason why the city cannot collect a municipal license from the sample peddlers who do business in this city.

They come here from all over the earth as one may say, and do nearly as much business as regular merchants.

These sample peddlers pay no rent, no license and haven't a dollar invested in their business beyond the cost of a sample outfit.

It is high time that the regular business men who pay license, taxes and rent to do business in Carson were protected by the city whose government they are taxed to maintain.

Without any ostentation or display a few days since in San Francisco, Jacob Z. Davis sent a check of $10,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. This is an act which ought to endear the man's memory to everybody who realizes the cruelties and impositions practiced on the little ones. Ten thousand dollars spent in that direction is worth ten million trying to teach religion to the natives in Africa. Now let some of the wealthy men of San Francisco step to the front and emulate his example.
