SOLDIERS OF THE GOLD TRUST

For years past both of the old parties have been assuring the country that they were about to give it financial relief. A great parade has been made on their platforms of their devotion to the working classes. With these promises they have garnered votes and after the election the successful Presidential nominee has gone into the chair and notified the nation that he was the bond servant of Wall Street.

Thus it has come to pass that a Presidential nominee has stooped to the making of campaign promises he never intended to keep, while running on a platform every plank of which he was willing to repudiate if necessary.

These men have been possessed of no more honor or conscience than the Sheriff of a small county, promising a hundred different men the deputyship in case of election.

"See how the Democrats have slaughtered silver in the Senate," yells a Republican speaker. "Look at the way the Republicans have downed silver in the House," roars a Democratic speaker.

Both make true statements. Both parties have butchered the interests of silver only selecting a different locality for the killing.

In the light of these facts no sane man disputes that it is hard to see how any man who is really a friend of silver can have the hardihood to assert that he expects either of the old parties to lift a finger to help relieve the present distress caused by a contraction of the currency.

Look at the Industrial Armies marching to Washington. They are the victims of a Republican and Democratic congress who went into the halls of legislation to do the bidding of their Wall Street masters.

In the light of so much poverty and distress no man who wants to see a change in the times can continue to aid and abet the fraudulent political combinations serving Wall Street now.

Members of either of the old parties are now nothing more than soldiers of the gold trust, masquerading in the uniforms of Democrats and Republicans.
