Society.

Woman's Club.

The Woman's Club held an interesting meeting with Mrs. A. B. Denbo last Saturday. Mrs. Baxter Clegg's application for membership was accepted, and after some business matters were disposed of, the hostess served a delicious four course luncheon. The Club then adjourned to meet Thursday March 11, with Mrs. John Givens.

Thompson-Webb.

Last Monday evening Miss Mary Webb, daughter of Thos. F. Webb, and William Thompson, of Opelousas, were united in marriage at the Presbyterian church, Rev. E. M. Stewart officiating. The young people will reside temporarily in Crowley and probably make Lake Charles their future home.

SAVED HER JEWELS

AUNT MAT'S SCREAMS TERRIFIED BURGLAR.

Imitation of Calloppo Proved Effective Once, But the Diamonds Are Now Safe in the Vaults of the Bank.

"You never heard Aunt Mat's burglar story, did you?" said the girl. If you only could hear her tell it! It was a real burglar, you know. This is how it was: You know, Aunt Mat has more diamonds than anybody in her town. You've seen them. Regular robin's eggs. Well, that night Philip was away, and she and little Mattie were all alone in the big house. Mattie was asleep in the big front room that is on the front porch, and Aunt Mat had the folding bed in the dining-room made up and was sleeping on that, with her diamonds in a little chamomile bag under her head.

"Long after midnight Aunt Mat was awakened by a creepy sound, like the branches of a tree sweeping back and forth against the window, in the big room where Mattie was sleeping. There was a tiny night lamp in that room, in a far corner.

"She lay there perfectly paralyzed by this sound, feeling that something foreign was near. You can understand that feeling. That something terrible was about to happen. She couldn't move, she said, listening to that awful sound. Pretty soon she began to realize what it was. The opening of the window in the big room. It kept on and on, and then the sound stopped, and she lay on her bed with her eyes on the door of the big room, waiting. It wasn't long before she saw the shadow of something coming into the doorway.

"The shadow came across the threshold first, then there began to creep across it into the dining-room on all fours—a great black negro.

"Well, Aunt Mat said she thought she would die of fright. She lay perfectly still, hardly breathing as this thing on all fours came creeping across the room to her bed, where he knew her diamonds were under her pillow. He came nearer and nearer, she lying there staring at him, unable to move from fright. He came nearer and nearer, and then, just as he was preparing to spring at her, she sat straight up in bed, she says, and yelled!

"She yelled: 'Philip! Philip!' Then she fell to screaming, screaming, screaming! She says Philip must have heard her, wherever he was, she screamed so loud.

"Then what? Why, the negro was more terrified than Aunt Mat. He looked at her for a moment and then he made for the window. Out of that he went head first.

"He was one of a band of negro robbers abroad that night. All of them were caught within a few days. Eight houses had been broken into during the night. In the morning on the five gates of the finest houses in the town there were arrows drawn in charcoal, showing which were to be broken into.

"You can bet your life Aunt Mat went straight to the bank the next morning and put her diamonds there. No more sleeping in diamonds for her after that."

A Camera in the stomach.

Perhaps the most remarkable of the recent inventions in the medical line is an apparatus by means of which the stomach may be photographed from within. It is the discovery of a Munich doctor, and is thus described in action: "The camera is actually swallowed by the patient, and when it reaches its destination the interior of the stomach is illuminated by a small electric lamp attached to the apparatus. At the bottom of the camera is wound on a photographic film 20 inches long and a quarter of an inch wide. The physician pulls a cord which runs the film past the lens, the electric lamp is turned on, and the impressions made on the sensitive film. The procedure is repeated until the requisite number of pictures have been taken."

JOLT FOR COLLEGE SLUMMERS.

Sociology Students Aroused the Ire of a Bowery "Boozine."

The class in sociology at Williams college, which occasionally makes a visit to New York's slums, is at least gaining material upon which each of them should make a reputation as a raconteur, if they don't learn how the other half lives. The other day they visited Magistrate Finn's court and were seated in a long row behind the bench. A pickled lady from the Bowery gazed at them with outspoken abhorrence. "Dirty little sussiey judges," said she. "Oughter be 'shamed of 'emselves—comin' down here embarrass hard-workin' lady. If I could get at 'em, I'd learn 'em. I'll get at 'em anyhow."

The court officer restored her to her place in line, dragging her violently back just as she had half way mounted the rail separating her from the sussiey judges." The sociologists flushed crimson. She still watched them angrily. The crowded courtroom, with never a smile in its hundreds, stared at the college boys dully. Now and then one spectator would point out something unique about the sociologists to his neighbor, and the pair would mutter together. Finn and his victims were forgotten in the interest aroused by the sociologists. The soused person was pushed along in front of the magistrate. She turned her back on the court to watch the sociologists. Failing to gain her attention, Magistrate Finn said: "Ten days."

"Sure, Dan, dear," she half whispered to Mr. Finn, "turn me loose wid them Nancies for jush a minnut and make it twinty days."

Solitude and Society.

At the opposite poles of our inner being are two imperative needs. One is for solitude, the other for society. Women never reach their best development if they live in loneliness or if they spend their whole lives in the social whirl, writes Margaret E. Sangster in Woman's Home Companion. For our soul's growth in goodness we require time in which to be alone. To the busy mother with her little ones around her, to the woman who prepares three meals a day, to a third who is driven by social engagements, it seems idle to insist that she shall have an hour or two by herself between sunrise and sunset. Without this little space of quiet, let it be ever so hard to attain, let me tell my sister that she will cease to thrive mentally and spiritually. She must think enough about herself to claim this privilege and hold it fast; but no one should shut herself up and live apart from her neighbors unless neighbors are so remote that to reach them she must drive miles across country. In this case the best plan is to find society in books and to cultivate in the family a habit of playing games and uniting in evening amusements.

Religion in Business.

The difficulty of living as a Christian should was expressed last week by a young stenographer employed in a large Cleveland business house.

"You can't live as Christ did and be an employe of a large firm," the young woman said.

Sunday she attended the mass-meeting of young Christians at Epworth Memorial church. She was one of the 1,500 who stood up, promising to live for the next two weeks as Christ would. Two days of the experiment convinced her of its impossibility in Cleveland business life.

"It can't be done by an employe," she said. "The employer himself might carry the morality of Christ into his business if he chose. But the employe—at least, in my case—does not, and it is suicidal for the employe to attempt it. Christ's morality and business tact clash. An employe insisting upon rigid honesty would be discharged instantly.

"I don't mean to say my firm is dishonest. Along broad lines it isn't. But the managers resort to many evasions of the truth in order to escape unpleasant consequences."

Not His Fault.

"You are an unusual son-in-law."

"Yes!"

"Yes, you nearly always help me to the tenderest part of the steak."

"Darn it! I never can tell which is the tough end."

Character Written on the Face.

Facies are records on which appear the result of every selfish, malicious thought and every wicked desire. The woman who flies into fits of temper soon looks like an orge or a dragon. The man who dissipates and drinks soon acquires the loafer's countenance. Moreover, it is our good, true thoughts that make for our happiness, as well as our appearance. All the mental and physical systems are practically controlled by these little guests of our brains. Lie awake all night and worry and behold your next morning face. It will scare you to death. You can change your embittered moods by exercise out of doors, by going to church, reading wholesomely stimulating books, by associating more with children and by doing good, kindly acts for those who are about you.

Women Like Pockets.

"Talk about the small boy and his desire for plenty of pockets," remarked Harry New, manager of one of the biggest concerns in the city or in the west, manufacturing women's garments, "no youngster with his first pair of trousers is half as excited about his pockets as is the average woman buying a cloak or suit. Within the last few years the question of pockets has come to be an important matter in women's garments. Women not only like pockets for carrying various small articles, but they can even like them so placed in their coats that they can walk with their hands in them, the same as a man. It's getting so that we manufacturers hardly dare put out a garment without paying attention first of all to the pocket feature."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
