BY THE FAMILY. "Hit the Nail on the Head." Patterson Tribune.

One of the prominent citizens carrying a package which he received by parcel post from a large Northern mail order house, was accosted by a local merchant: "Why didn't you buy that bill of goods from me? I could have saved you the charges of transportation and besides you would have been patronizing a home store which helps pay the tax and builds up the locality." The citizen looked at the merchant a moment and then said: "Why don't you patronize your home paper and advertise? I read it, and didn't know you had the goods in stock."

HIS UNCLE'S PROPHECY

By LAURA J. LIDDY.

"Uncle John always did have luck with him," said the man with the big black cigar. "Don't tell me that man can prophesy disaster and always get away with it unless there is some supernatural agency of evil helping him!"

"I've always been fond of Uncle John and his aversion to automobiles has pained me deeply, since I own three, and with the purchase of each one his bewildered wrath at me has increased. Each time a machine was added to my garage the mails have sized with the letters from Uncle John, remonstrating with me. His idea of an automobile is that it is a diabolical contrivance straight from the regions below and that those who risk their lives in one should be restrained in an asylum for the feeble minded.

"The last time I went east on business I hired a touring car and a driver in order that I might cover ground quickly, and as Uncle John lived in the city I was visiting I naturally went to see him. The first time I called he nearly wept over me because he had witnessed my arrival in the big red car. He had visited him his brother from Maine, whose ideas of automobiles were even more primitive than Uncle John's—but Uncle Henry had some excuse, for he lived in a region where there aren't any automobiles.

Each of them called upon the other to witness that I was a reckless young thing and probably would meet my doom before I left the city.

"I resolved to put an end forever to such foolishness and to show Uncle John that automobiles were harmless things that would eat out of one's hand if properly approached. So the next day I came again in my big red car and with an expression of firmness and resolve.

"Uncle John," I said, without any preliminaries. "I have come to take you and Uncle Henry out for a ride in my machine! Get on your things!" "After they had fainted and been revived we thrashed the matter out. They had been strong men in their youth, but they were no match for me, so I won out. I really felt sorry for Uncle Henry as he went trembling out to the machine.

"Remember, George," he said, "that my will and other valuable papers are down in the trust vaults. I have the feeling that something dreadful is going to come out of this, but it is all due to your persistence.

"Well, I started out with those two timorous old men, honestly resolved to give them the time of their lives and banish their absurd fears. I know all about cars and my driver was an extra good one, so I guess what happened was my fault.

"I told him to turn a corner an instant later than I should have told him. The steering gear locked, I think, or else it was just that little limp of bad luck. My lovely red car choked, gurgled, and then shot straight at the curb, which it skimmed over as lightly as a bird. Then it absent mindedly hit the coping between the sidewalk and the lawn, and as it was only an imitation stone coping. It merely brushed it aside without breaking it.

"Continuing our progress, we gougled across a fine lawn and aimed at a choice tree that apparently had been recently set out, because its throat was still tied up in burlap. We snapped that tree in two as though it were a straw with the top part dangling coquetically above Uncle John and Uncle Henry, and the radiator of the machine perched rakishly on the mangled stump we came to a pause.

"About a million people surrounded us at once. I didn't even look at Uncle John and Uncle Henry. I just faded out of that car. They were on the street car traveling back home before the driver and I got the car off the tree stump. I had to hunt them up, though, to see how their nerves stood the shock.

"Did you do anything in reparation for the frightful damage you created?" Uncle Henry asked in awful tones.

"Yes," said I, "I pushed the coping back into place and stuck it down with a postage stamp, and as the people who lived in the house were not at home to receive my apologies I went to the corner florist and got a bunch of flowers, which I tied to the mangled tree stump!"

"But wasn't it just Uncle John's luck to have his prophecies come true! He ought to get a job as weather man!"—Chicago Daily News.

Why is the soda cracker today such a universal food?

People ate soda crackers in the old days, it is true—but they bought them from a barrel or box and took them home in a paper bag, their crispness and flavor all gone.

Uneda Biscuit—soda crackers better than any ever made before—made in the greatest bakeries in the world—baked to perfection—packed to perfection—kept to perfection until you take them, oven-fresh and crisp, from their protecting package. Five cents.

Mrs. Bacon—"I understand one can learn different languages from the phonograph?" Mrs. Ebert—"Well, since our neighbor got his I know my husband has used language I never heard him use before."

English People Long-Lived. Within a stone's throw of each other at Stonham Parva, Suffolk, England, live 28 persons whose ages aggregate 2,121 years. One is ninety, two eighty-two, one eighty-one, four eighty, one seventy-eight, one seventy-six, three seventy-five, four seventy-four, six seventy-three, three seventy-two, one sixty-nine, and one sixty-eight.

Evidence. "Do you really believe, doctor, that your old medicines really keep anybody alive?" asked the skeptic. "Surely," returned the doctor. "My prescriptions have kept three druggists and their families alive in this town for twenty years."—Harper's Weekly.

Squirrels' Instinctive Gift. Squirrels, it is said, know how to judge distances accurately, for they seldom jump two distances alike, yet never fall to land safely when an inch too far or too short would mean disaster. And dogs run along beside horses' heels, judging accurately the safe distance, and are seldom, if ever, injured.

Be Kind Today. Never, never wait for post-mortem praise. Speak the kind words which love prompts, and remember that words of loving kindness are the best possible tonic which can be given, even to the happiest of the mortals.—Kate Tannatt Woods.

Proof. "Do you think," said the intellectual young woman, "that there is any truth in the theory that big creatures are better natured than small ones?" "Yes," answered the young man, "I do. Look at the difference between the Jersey mosquito and the Jersey cow."—Life.

"Murder" Among Animals. Murder is not uncommon among animals, "murder" in this sense being applied to that kind of killing that has nothing to do with the struggle for existence, but which arises from malice, pure and simple, or from downright passion. Storks, it seems, frequently kill members of the flock which, at the time of migration, either refuse to follow them or are unable to do so.

God's Designs. I cannot believe that the creator made man to leave him in an endless struggle with the intellectual miseries that surround us. I am ignorant of his designs, but I cannot cease to believe in them because I cannot fathom them, and I had rather mistrust my own capacity than his justice.—De Toqueville.

Very Much So. "Have you any drop ceilings in your house?" "Yes, in the kitchen where the plaster fell down."

Miss Josianne Guilbeau of Carencro entertained Wednesday at Euclyre. Nine games were played and the prizes were awarded as follows: Ladies' prize, box of fine stationery, Miss Carmelite Breaux; ladies' booty, a harp, Miss Hilda Harrel. Gentlemen's prize, scarf tie, Mr. Paul Martin; gentlemen's booty, a harp, Mr. Eloi Melancon. The hostess then served delicious refreshments.

Bombay an Island City. Bombay, the capital of the Bombay presidency and the principal seaport of western India, is an island which forms a low-lying plain about 11 1/2 miles long by three to four miles broad. Two parallel ridges of low hills flank the island; the larger ridge protects the harbor, the other terminates in Malabar hill, on which stands the famous Hindu temple of Walkeshwar, to which pilgrims resort from all parts of India. The city covers 23 square miles and has 979,445 population.

Irreverent Youth. The curate was learning to ride a bicycle, and in a misplaced fit of zeal set off on his own. He thought he could manage by himself, so started downhill in a somewhat wobbly manner. The road was wet and muddy, and it was not long before the machine had skidded and the curate was foundering in the mud. A youthful member of the Sunday school watched the catastrophe with evident pleasure. "Here endeth the first lesson," he chortled.—London Tit-Bits.

Hair Mussed by Lightning. Edward Kones prefers in the future to comb his own locks and wishes lightning would leave them alone. When his house, in Sullivan county, was struck the electricity plowed small furrows about his skull, taking the hair off his head in every place it touched. His injuries, besides destroying his hair, it is said, were slight.—Philadelphia North American.

Where It Would Count. "Darling," he murmured, as soon as they had been seated in the high-priced restaurant, "you can have anything you want on the bill of fare. Shall I read it off to you?" "No," replied the dear girl, "just read it to the water."

What Would Newspapers Do? If it were not for our mistakes, life would be pretty monotonous.—Judge.

Poor Sticking. Sticking to a poor purpose makes many a poor stick.

Ancients Knew of Elevators. That the ancient Romans knew how to work lifts is the latest discovery reported from Rome in connection with the Palatine excavations. Præmular remains have been found, including 12 ancient lifts. One of the latter, which descends into the earliest known city, is now being cleaned and put into working order for the Archaeological Congress.

Enlightened Statesmanship. The story goes that Java was lost to the British crown through geographical ignorance. When the British were negotiating with the Dutch early in the last century, a trembling secretary pointed out to Lord Liverpool that the Dutch claimed the island of Java. "Java, where is Java? Let 'em have it," roared his lordship.

Give Good Cheer. There is contagion in a sweet and beautiful character, for health is contagious as well as disease. We are all the time giving to others either wholesome or unwholesome moods—poisoning their atmosphere with doubt and suspicion or clearing it with helpfulness and good cheer.—Phillips Brooks.
