The census of reports on the commercial value of our railroads shows that as a whole railroad property is worth as much as the securities representing it; and that in the general opinion of investors the total value of stock and bonds is much greater than their total face value, notwithstanding the "water" that has been supposedly injected in certain places. Upon the Southern Pacific Sunset Route efficiency and safety has always been the watchword. Mr. Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Company, once said, "Efficiency from the railway standpoint may consist of loading cars and trains to their capacity and moving only the minimum number of cars and trains to handle business. Efficiency from the manager's standpoint may involve a relatively slow movement of trains, because the faster engines are driven the greater amount of fuel they consume and the smaller the load they can pull, the result being that the cost of running the train is increased while the revenue derived from the running it is decreased." As the Southern Pacific Sunset Route stands today, with all its faults, it exhibits the highest industrial efficiency attained by any railroad in this country. This efficiency can only be maintained where the railroad charges are sufficent to permit it. Everybody knows that railroads have been put to greatly increased expense in recent years, much of it by legislation, however, wise or unwise. This company, like all others in this State, is seeking to obey the law, not only the strict letter of the law but to obey it in spirit, and if the public of Louisiana, through constituted authority, demands certain measures of safety, certain improvements, certain conveniences, it is entirely within the right of the public to express that demand in the form of law. But certainly such measures must be paid for by somebody. Good service can only be given and maintained by a road that is making money. The people are the chief sufferers whenever a railroad is operated at a loss. Among the enormous drain upon its resources which a railroad is forced to suffer is the vast [illegible] suits, a phase of [illegible] people do not [illegible] their [illegible] own [illegible] pocket.
