BRUMBAUGH, M'CORMICK AND PINCHOT AT FIFTH STREET CHURCH

Candidates Will Discuss Moral Issues of Campaign in a Non-Partisan Manner

PINE STREET AIMS AT 1,200

Holy Communion to Be Administered in Coincidence With Teaching of Subject in Sunday School Lesson—To Observe Anniversary

On the occasion of the annual Sunday school rally and reunion day at the Fifth Street Methodist church to-morrow the speakers will be Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh, Republican candidate for Governor at 10.30 o'clock; Vance C. McCormick, Democratic and Washington party candidate for Governor at 11.30 o'clock; and Gifford Pinchot, Washington party candidate for United States Senator at 1.30 o'clock.

The candidates will not be present to represent political parties, but avowal to discuss the moral issues of the present campaign. They will speak on this general theme, having no assigned subjects. Dr. Brumbaugh, who is an ordained minister of the Episcopal church, provides a rare example of a preacher running for high office.

The officers and teachers of the Fifth Street Sunday school have been busy for some time awakening interest in this Rally Day and a record attendance at all services is expected. Preparations have been made to accommodate two thousand persons at the morning and evening church services. There will be special music during the day by the church choir and by the Sunday school orchestra.

Rally Day at Pine Street Church

Rally Day services will be held in a number of other churches. For the last month plans have been under way for the largest rally ever held in Pine Street Presbyterian Sunday school. Hundreds of invitations have been sent out to the members of the departments and of the Bible classes. The goal has been set at 1,200 present at this service and leaders confidently expect that it will be reached if not exceeded. H. B. McCormick is the newly-elected superintendent of the school.

The Sacrament of Holy Communion will be administered in many churches. The International Sunday school lesson for the day deals with the last supper, a coincidence in cases where the sacrament is to be administered. Several sermons will be preached on questions relating to the Holy Communion.

The first anniversary of the dedication of the Fourth Reformed church, Market and Sixteenth streets, will be observed morning and evening in connection with Harvest Home services. The pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. Dr. Theodore F. Henman, professor in the Lancaster Theological Seminary. A musical program has been prepared. Offerings of the day will go in the church building fund.

Old Folks' day will be observed at the morning service at Curtin Heights Methodist church. The pastor, the Rev. A. S. Williams, will preach on "Peaks and Plains in Religious Experience."

Stough Campaign Meetings. Mass meetings for men preliminary to the Stough evangelistic campaign will be held in the afternoon at 3.30 o'clock as follows: Young Men's Christian Association, presided over by Howard Black; speakers, Joseph McClernan and George A. Lamb, both of Berwick; Market Street Baptist church, same speakers.

Meetings for women will be addressed by Josephine Colt, at 2.30 o'clock, at the Derry Street United Brethren church, and at 3.30 o'clock at Market Square Presbyterian church. Mixed meetings will be held at the Second Baptist church at 3.30 o'clock, speaker, Dick Branton, of Berwick; at Steelton United Brethren church at 3.30 o'clock, speaker, A. Bogar, of Lykens.

NUDE ART IN HOME PROPER

Boston Judge So Decides, Vindicating Dressmaker Defendant. Boston, Oct. 10.—Judge Duff, in the municipal court yesterday decided that pictures of nude women hung in the home could not be branded as objectionable, when a policeman arraigned Rose Crocker, a dressmaker, and blushing offered as evidence "The Japanese Siesta," "Awakening of Galatea" and "Love and Psyche," which he had found in her Massachusetts avenue apartment.

Judge Duff declared that a verdict of guilty would sanction a raid on every home in Boston, and could not be thought of. He declared that paintings were works of art and asserted he thought they might be exhibited publicly, "under certain circumstances."

RESIGNS POSTOFFICE POST—Reading's Assistant Postmaster Was Appointed Eighteen Years Ago. Reading, Pa., Oct. 10.—Assistant Postmaster Horace H. Hammer tendered his resignation to Postmaster Seltzinger yesterday. He wants to devote more time to his duties as national secretary of the Sons of Veterans.

SATURDAY NIGHT SERMONS BY REV. SAMUEL W. POWERS, D.D.

THE MAXIM SILENCER. Text: "A soft answer turneth away wrath."—Prov. xv, 1.

In pictures red haired people make beautiful silents, but it's hard work in everyday life. The writer is blest with "Titan" hair, and he knows. Years ago, when he was a Philadelphia newspaper man, it was as good as fireworks to see him get mad. But several churches and numberless men and women, who also were "called to be saints," but missed their train, have toned him down until now his hair is "auburn," and he's as meek as Moses' cat. He can shoot fairly straight still, but he uses smokesless powder and a Maxim silencer. He has learned a more excellent way. Christ taught "Blessed are the peace makers." Solomon said, "A soft answer turneth away wrath." By a little tact and kind words Gideon won over the Ephraimites when they wanted to quarrel. Jacob's gift conquered Esau. By a little judicious flattery Abigail saved her husband's life. I know this is an age of the big stick, but when it is all over we have to resort to diplomacy to settle things. You've read Don Swift's satire on the Kilkenny cats? According to the voracious historian, two pug-nacious felines met in fateful conflict and fought till there was nothing left to tell the tale save their own two tails. The details are omitted.

Kindness and Kind Words. Kind words are the oil that smooths the waves of life. Kindness is an international passport, an adjustable key, a never failing card of introduction. Thoughtless talkers and dull razzors tear, but they do not cut. A glacier may be melted by the sunshine, proud men are won by affability, and in the fable, you remember, the wind and the sun strove in turn to take off the traveler's cloak; the fierce wind made him draw it closer, the sun's gentle rays compelled him to remove it. Perceptions are never popular; bears make equal parts form a good specific for many mortal ills. A constable gains strength by bending, and men gain power by condescension. The wolf whom steel could not confine was caught in a gossamer web. A meat ax will not sever silk, and ice will yield more readily to a pin than a hammer. An ounce of kindness is worth a ton of policy. Pald kindness is like wax flowers—cold, but regular. A child may lead an elephant by kindness; a dozen men could not budge him by force. The rock that resists crowbar gives way to roots of tender plant. A kind spirit may hold friends better than loans of money. Those who speak kind words bear kind echoes. I would rather bear a head than a heart; it's less cruel. Civility costs nothing and buys much. Confucius said, "Behave toward every one as if receiving a great guest."

When Fiery Darts Are Hurlled. Some Sundays in summer when my services are through I stroll over to city hall plaza and listen to the various street orators, with whose pathetic visions I most heartily sympathize, denouncing with hoarse and passionate eloquence the sins of the wealthy and powerful, doing their best, often with success, to inspire in their hearers discontent, envy, hatred, I share, my church come in for our full share, too. Probably the last thing in the world the orator thinks of is the effect on his own self of the thoughts he entertains about people and the wrongs he criticizes. He would be amazed if he knew my inmost heart as he belabors me. I nod approval when he execrates the sinful waste of the churches in their bitter denominational competition. I smile when he calls me a "frook coated, white necked parasite" and so on. I gave one ferocious fellow, who was for tearing down all the churches that night, a nice juicy orange to refresh his parched lips. I told him I was more dissatisfied with myself than he was. We've been chummy ever since, though I often catch him looking at me sidewise. I am convinced that external evil cannot harm us. It is our thought about evil that contains the real poison. That is why Christ refused to let the sins of others overshadow his peace. Paul, too, says, "Love taketh no account of evil."

Winsomeness. I know folks that are winsome, don't you? I think I would rather have that quality than money or beauty, though my rating in all three is painfully deficient. Winsome folks don't go around with a big stick unless it's a stick of candy for the youngsters on the sidewalk. Winsome folks always look beautiful though their features are misshapen and their presence insignificant. The winsome lawyer wins his cases. The winsome merchant sells his goods. The winsome girl has lots of beaux and takes her pick. The winsome teacher gets her scholars to study. The winsome preacher wins men to Christ. Some folks are so winsome in their religion that I want to be just like them and their Christ; there are other folks when I see their religion I feel like stealing the pennies out of a blind man's cap or shying a rock at our tom cat when he comes purring to meet me. Winsomeness makes us forget our own interests and we laugh with those that laugh and weep with those that weep. I sort of feel that winsomeness is a kind of Christlikeness.

Opportunity is delivering double knocks on Uncle Sam's door. There seem to be more blockheads in the world than wooden legs. What the world still seems to need is a soft drink that people don't tire of. Though haste is not always advisable, it is preferable to procrastination.
