MISSOURI'S VERDICT ON THE RAILROADS

Whatever arguments may be advanced for or against the full crew law as applied to railroads of various states of the country the overwhelming vote by which the people of Missouri rejected such a law which was passed by the last legislature, signed by Governor Major and submitted to the electors last Tuesday for referendum, may be taken as an indication that the people of the whole nation are beginning to see the mistake of constantly increasing the railroads' expenses through piling up legal restrictions.

The full crew law may or may not be a good thing in itself. It has been contended that it makes travel safer for the public and provides work for more railroad men. On the other hand many railroad employes contend that the extra expense this law, and many others recently enacted, impose on the railroads, has so reduced the companies' earnings as to have caused roads to cut employes' wages.

But whatever the good or bad qualities of the full crew law, the question that was raised in Missouri was the broader one of whether the people believe in piling up additional legislation to eat deeply into railroad profits and result in railroad retrenchments both in the matter of wages and in the amount of money devoted to maintenance, purchase of new equipment and the extension and improvement of lines. That was the issue in Missouri when the full crew law was submitted to the voters and the result of Tuesday's referendum vote in that state was awaited with keen expectancy by the industrial and financial interests throughout the United States.

DR. STOUGH AND LOCAL CHURCHES

The good people of this city, many of them, think that Evangelist Stough is rather severe on the churches in his attacks from the tabernacle platform. He has certainly spoken plainly regarding what he believes to be the conditions in Harrisburg's religious life. Whether what he says hits the actual conditions in this city no persons can know better than the members and the pastors of the churches themselves. It is for them to take heed if the shoes pinch, or to disregard the attacks if they are certain that they are on the safe side.

presumably he does not. What he says about the lifelessness and uselessness of churches and church members he evidently means to apply to all churches in general, while at the same time making the application appear specific enough to bring his statements home forcefully to Harrisburg church members in particular. It has been very noticeable that these particular persons have applauded him heartily in many of his criticisms of themselves, shouted at them from the platform in the tabernacle. It must be inferred from such manifestations of approval and endorsement that weaknesses which he condemns as existing in churches at large are not unknown to Harrisburg churchmen, and that in many instances he has, with his plain talk, hit certain obtrusive nails squarely on their heads.

Dr. Stough's language has, of course, shocked many good people. He told them in the beginning that it would. He does not say things to them as do sedate, decorous and altogether proper pastors. His preaching, he says, is effective because, like a cyclone, it is unexpected. His attacks on sham, vain show and surplus dignity in pulpits and in pews have come suddenly upon church members and naturally sound strange in their ears. They have not been accustomed to that sort of thing. They have considered most matters that go with church services entirely right, and now they are told that some things about divine worship are wrong.

The members and pastors of the local churches must figure it out for themselves whether they are being criticised deservedly and act accordingly. The evangelist is making some sweeping assertions about qualities alleged to be wanting in them, and they must harken whether they like it or not, for there is no escape.

Evangelical churches of Harrisburg, part of them, have brought Dr. Stough here to revive their religion in an evangelistic manner. He makes his remarks about churches from a platform where the co-operating ministers of this city and vicinity sit in apparent acquiescence. It would seem from an impartial point of view that the evangelist feels he must tell the members and pastors of the co-operating churches what he is telling them, at this stage of his strategic campaign, to prepare them to receive into their churches new converts of Christianity which his preaching will shortly start to produce.

The Ananias Club is vindicated.

Even President Wilson is "satisfied with the result."

Charley Murphy is lied again, but will he stay lied?

We are all for prosperity now,—even the "Harrisburg Telegraph."

The "Calamity Howl" has vanished now that election is over. Well, it is better so.

The "Harrisburg Telegraph" can now shed its coat of pessimism and root for a "Better and Greater Harrisburg" without the danger of running in conflict to the interests of its political friends.

May be that reduced dividend on the common stock of the United States Steel Corporation didn't have anything to do with the results of the elections throughout the country, and then again may be it did.

The "Harrisburg Telegraph" admits now that the business of the country is not going to the dogs. Remarkably sudden conversion to that view on the day after election! And the Democratic tariff still is in force, too!

TOLD IN LIGHTER VEIN

HOUSEHOLD BATTLE The battle at Short Jenks' home continues unabated. At 11 o'clock this morning Mrs. Jenks made the following official announcement:

"With a brilliant charge about breakfast time I flanked my husband with my stalwart foot and he doubled up and then retreated in haste. It was almost a rout."

At 1 o'clock this morning Mr. Jenks officially announced:

"The situation remains unchanged. There have been attacks and counter-attacks on both sides, with no decisive results. I'm now well entrenched and confident behind a tub in the cellar. I believe I will ultimately triumph. The enemy is making many claims and making those things the easiest thing in the world to do. If she had a cannon that was as rapid as her mouth I would be compelled to admit that my position is serious. As it is, I concede nothing. I will conserve my strength and forces, with the view of getting out of the cellar and consulting a lawyer. I urge American newspapers to judge not until the real situation is known. History will vindicate me and declare that I did not start hostilities. My sister-in-law urged my wife to start them. My wife didn't need a great deal of urging."—Acheson Globe.

MODESTY

It must not be supposed that because the Kaiser quoted Shakespeare—"To be or not to be"—in his original manifesto His Majesty is a good Shakespearean. The contrary may be surmised from an incident which occurred at a lunch at one of the Berlin Embassies. An English diplomat was discussing some big affair of the moment with a lady.

"As our immortal William has observed," the diplomat remarked, "There is a tide in the affairs of men that, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

The Kaiser looked puzzled.

"That is quite true," he is said to have acquiesced, "but I don't remember saying it."—London Tit-Bits.

PUZZLE IN A PROVERB

"Father, it says here. 'A man is known by the company he keeps.' Is that so father?"

"Yes, yes, yes."

"Well, father, if a good man keeps company with a bad man, is the good man bad because he keeps company with the bad man, or is the bad man good because he keeps company with the good man?"—Exchange.

IT WAS ONLY A DREAM

Mrs. Gabbeigh—"John, you were talking in your sleep."

Husband—"That's funny, for I was dreaming of you."

Mrs. G.—"What was funny about it?"

Husband—"Why, I don't see how I got a chance to say a word."—Boston Transcript.

WOMAN'S WAY

Mrs. Crawford—"Why don't you ask your husband's advice?"

Mrs. Crabshaw—"I intend to, my dear, just as soon as I've made up my mind what I'll do."—Judge.

Tongue-End Topics

General Hulings as a Fighter

After March 4, next, General Willis J. Hulings, Congressman, will be out of political office for the first time in many years. General Hulings is one of the best fighters, political and otherwise, in the State. He has been successively member of the Assembly, State Senator and Congressman, and he is known to have declined nomination for state office when he could have been elected. As a member of the National Guard he commanded the Fighting Sixteenth Pennsylvania regiment in the Spanish-American war and went with his regiment to Porto Rico, where his command fought the only battle with the Spaniards on that island and decisively defeated them and captured a stronghold, with prisoners, guns and flags. Recognized as a very independent sort of a politician, Colonel Hulings asked favors of nobody, but through sheer merit won his rank as Brigadier General and was commander of the Second Brigade, National Guard. He was in line for the Major Generalship, but the fact that he had reached the retiring age was seized upon by the powers that be to deny him the highest honor in the National Guard. When the Washington party sprang into existence he accepted a nomination for Congress from that party, and won hands down in his home district—one that was at the least considered doubtful. This year he was again a candidate, but the fortunes of political war caused his defeat and he retires to private life. But, wherever, he is, it is certain there will be some fighting going on, and he will be in the thick of it.

Kline's Work in Cumberland

One of the happiest employes on Capitol Hill is Joseph W. Kline, of Cumberland county, assistant cataloguer in the State Library. When the fortunes of the Republican party in Cumberland county were at low ebb a year ago the County Committee fixed on "Joe" to gather up the fragments and weld them into a fighting unit, and he was made County Chairman. He didn't sit quiet and let his political opponents walk over him, but began to get his forces together, made an earnest appeal for everybody to help, did a great share of the work himself and waged a hot aggressive campaign until the polls closed. The result is that the majority for the Democratic candidate for Governor in Cumberland is about 300. Penrose has a small majority and two Republican members of the Assembly are elected. That is why Kline is stopped so often in the capitol to receive congratulations.

McConnell One Who Comes Back

Former Senator William McConnell of Shamokin, is coming back to the State Senate. Senator McConnell has many old friends and acquaintances in Harrisburg who will be glad to hear of this. Two years ago he was defeated in the Bull Moose tidal wave that swept over the Northumberland district, and Senator Fisher was elected. Last spring, after a long illness, Senator Fisher died, and an election was necessary to choose a successor. Senator McConnell again faced the fight and has won out by a good majority. He has legislative experience that will be of value to him during the next session.

Christy's Work in Allegheny

Congratulations are being sent Walter J. Christy, political reporter of the Pittsburgh "Gazette-Times," for his handling of the Republican campaign in Allegheny as County Chairman. Mr. Christy is the present Governor of the Pennsylvania Legislative Correspondents' Association, and has been a legislative reporter for his paper for years. He was the best booked man on politics in Allegheny county and one of the hardest workers, consequently his selection as County Chairman was quite natural. Night and day he had been plugging away since the first week in June, and the result of his work showed on Tuesday when a clean sweep of the county was made for the Republican State, Congressional, Senate and Assembly candidates.

Walnut and Scott Licked

T. Henry Walnut and Samuel B. Scott, members of the last Legislature from Philadelphia, will be missed when the House is called to order in January. They were Bull Moosesters and were in the thick of every fight on the floor of the House, and it was thought that they would surely be returned to the House on the Washington party ticket. Unfortunately for T. Henry and "Sam" they were on the wrong side of the ballot and the way the voters soaked them was a caution.

Something Really Important

"I wonder if you could find out exactly how I stand with your father?"

"What difference does it make?" responded the heires. "I'll marry you whether he likes you or not."

"I wasn't thinking of that, my love. He gave me a tip on the stock market just now. Is it safe to play it, or is it not?"—Pittsburgh Post.

Marcella—Mr. Beaubrough won the prize at the Giddygals' hop the other night for tango dancing.

Waverly—No wonder, the practice he has had.

Marcella—But he told me he never danced before this season.

Waverly—Probably not, but at college he was a champion hurdle racer.—Youngstown Telegram.

Miss Anglin says her husband is a poor actor, but a good sweetheart, which must be consoling as so many husbands are good actors, but poor sweethearts.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Is Aching or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water and Eat Less Meat

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the Troid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. Adv.

Discordant Thoughts

In wandering through your mental pleasure grounds, whenever you come upon an ugly intruder of a thought which might bloom into some poisonous emotion, such as fear, envy, hate, worry, remorse, anger and the like, there is only one remedy to treat it, writes Pull H. Schaulfer in the Atlantic. Roll it up like a weed, drop it upon the rubbish heap as promptly as if it were a stinging nettle and let some harmonious thought grow in its place. There is no more reckless consumer of all kinds of exuberance than the discordant thought, and weeding it out saves such an astonishing amount of eau de vie wherewith to water the garden of joy that with it in hand every man may be his own Burbank.

Better Than Nothing

A Boston man tells how, at a railway station, a number of wives were starting for the seashore and bidding their respective husbands adieu and he heard one really charming young matron say as she kissed her hubby good-bye: "Au revoir, dearie. Don't forget to write."

"Oh, I'll write often," protested her husband.

"Do dearie," continued the wife—"do—if it's only a check."—Kansas City Star.

Sudden Action

Orville Wright, apropos of his new safety appliance for aeroplanes, said at a dinner in Dayton:

"In a short time now there will be no more aeroplane accidents. In a short time there will be no more aeroplane jokes, either."

"I heard a new joke yesterday. A young woman rushed into an insurance office and cried:

"One life policy, quick! My husband's biplane's falling!"

Nothing Doing.

A little four-year-old, a most attractive little fairy, suddenly lost interest in Sunday school. She had enjoyed so much learning about Moses that her mother could not understand the change of attitude.

"Why don't you want to go, daughter?" she asked.

"Oh," was the astonishing reply, "I don't like to go to Sunday school since Moses died."—Woman's Home Companion.

A True Courtier

Upon his arrival at the court of Vienna a former French Ambassador was presented to the Emperor, who was aware that the day before he had visited the beautiful Countess X.

"Is it true," she asked, "that the Countess X is the most lovely woman in Europe?"

"I thought so yesterday, your majesty," replied the diplomat, with a graceful bow.

A Real Flesh Builder For Thin People

A New Discovery.

Thin men and women—that big, hearty filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gain in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, the sally out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Omit the flesh cream rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those single Sargol tablets. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good, solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh, new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and expensive, and G. A. Gorgas, and all other druggists in Harrisburg and vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back. Adv.

HE IS MISQUOTED MAN, SAYS STOUGH

neered all over with a lot of churchianity. But there is a big difference between churchianity and Christianity. You are nearly killed with churchianity. When you can get filled with Christianity you will soon bring about the millennium."

Every Man Worships a God

"We've been getting away from God's laws. There are only two of them in the Ten Commandments, and they have to do, first, with man's relation to God and, second, with man's relation to man. We've brought forth the second and smashed the first. I say it's impossible for a man to love his neighbor as himself if he doesn't love God."

"There are only two classes of people who have no god, idols and idols—idolists—they haven't a ray of reason, and innocents because they haven't arrived at the age of responsibility. Everybody else has a god, and there are only two gods in the world, said Jesus, the true God and Mammon. Mammon stands for the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes and the pride of life. Every man is worshipping either God in heaven or Mammon. Don't tell me a man's not a worshipper because he doesn't belong to a church. He only has another god, that's all."

Would Rather Take Hindu's Chances

The preacher then told the story of the Hindu woman who feeds her baby to the crocodile to appease her god. Turning in contrast to America, "the land of ringing church bells and open Bibles," he told how "college-bred, cultured men and women, having all that civilization can give them, have turned their backs on the God of high heaven and are worshipping not the Christ, but the god of lust, of flesh, of the lust of money, of the lust of power, of the lust of property, of the lust of appetite, of the lust of dress, of the lust of selfishness, and of the lust of this, that and everything else."

"If there's a darker, deeper place in hell than any other," he said, "it is for the man and the woman who have turned their backs on God, in the light that they have I would rather take the chances in eternity of the Hindu women who murder their babies in their ignorance than of such people."

What Churchmen Say They Do

Enumerating the things church members say they do which persons outside of the church do not do, the evangelist met every point with an argument intended to show that ordinary church members do nothing more than other people. To the statement, "I go to church," he said that so do a lot of persons who make no pretensions of religion; to "I read my Bible," that so do skeptics and infidels, and a good deal more thoroughly; to "I pray," that so do persons who are afraid goblins will get them when they go to bed; to "I give money to the church," that there is not a church in this city but what has a lot of money of people who have no religion; to "I have been confirmed," that many persons have been confirmed in the church and then gone straight out and been confirmed in the devil; to "I have been baptized," that there are some people in hell who have been baptized, and to "I have participated of the Lord's Supper," that Paul says people can take the sacrament unworthily.

"Is that all you've got to show that you're a church member?" he shouted at the multitude, throwing his arms about in the air. "Yes, you belong to a church, but I want to tell you that there are churches in hell to-night for that matter. I have no doubt that hell has well organized Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopal and all other kinds of churches, with bishops, presiding elders, deacons and everything else. If you have nothing more to show for your church membership than what I've mentioned, you'll go to hell just as sure as a stone goes to the bottom of the sea."

An Ounce Find no Differences

In the course of an illustration showing how a non-church-man could find no difference between himself and his church-member wife, the preacher said that the man wrote down for his wife these points:

"I do not use tobacco in any way and you do not. I do not use profane language and you do not. I am a teetotaler, you are a teetotaler. I play cards and you play cards. I go to the stores, you go to the stores. I attend church irregularly, you attend church irregularly. I pay money into the church and so do you. I dance and so do you. I associate with unbelievers, so do you. I read trashy novels, so do you. I do not go to devotional meetings, neither do you. I do not read the Bible, neither do you. I do not pray, neither do you. Now then, what does your church membership add to your manner of living?"

"If some men could see any radical difference," the evangelist said, pounding his stand with his fist, "between church members and non-church members, they would join the church. But there isn't any difference generally. You drink out of the same trough, you gulp down the same swill. Until you clean up in your churches I don't want any others to come in."

To Skin Their Carcasses

"You've been thinking I'm a fool and a joke up here. I tell you I'll have you laughing on the other side of your cheeks till I'm through with you. I'll skin your old carcasses until there isn't an inch of life left. You've been nothing but a lot of old hypocrites parading around. You've been finding a lot of fault with me; now I'm putting a few things to you."

"A lot of you churchmen smoke like chimneys and smell like garbage cans, because you can't let tobacco alone. You smell, alright, whether you admit it or not. I have found out why so few wives kiss their husbands. If any of you married men have had trouble along that line, just buy a tooth brush."

The preacher demonstrated by a lengthy illustration how little church members might do for Jesus Christ, or how much. He found his time was growing short, and said he could talk all night, his audience was so inspiring and looked so happy. Glancing at the section enclosing the co-operating ministers, he said:

Dr. Fox Looking Pleasant

"Why, even Dr. Fox looks pleasant and happy this evening. Aren't you happy, huh?"

He announced in closing that he will preach to-night on "Home Mothers and Home Breakers, or Why So Many Young People Go to Hell." This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock he spoke at the tabernacle to an enthusiastic audience. The sermon to-morrow afternoon will be the last day sermon this week.

Hope is the dream you have when awake.
