NEW LOW WATER RECORD MADE IN RECENT DROUTH

State Commission's Report Shows West Branch of the Susquehanna Was Almost Dry—Peculiar Action of Limestone Streams

Records for low water in the rivers and streams of the State have been broken by the recent drouth, according to reports received at the State Water Supply Commission. At Williamsport, on the West Branch of the Susquehanna river, where the tributary drainage area is 5,670 square miles, the river fell during October 0.20 of a foot lower than had previously been recorded as the minimum, but has since risen slightly, so that at present it is still 0.02 of a foot lower than during the previous low flow.

One interesting feature, standing out prominently in the present drouth, is the behavior of those streams draining limestone sections of the country. Ordinarily a limestone stream draws on its subterranean source of supply during a drouth and shows a much larger rate of flow than those streams draining a country of other geological formation. In the present case a conflicting state of affairs exists, in which the largest limestone rivers are steadily and continuously falling, while the smaller limestone streams are running at a low but steady flow. The Lehigh river, one of the large limestone streams in this State, is running at a uniformly falling stage and is now within 0.13 of a foot of the previously recorded minimum flow.

Yellow Breeches creek, another limestone stream, in the lower Susquehanna basin, is holding a uniform flow of 0.20 of a foot above the minimum and is running off at the rate of 0.6 of a second-foot per square mile. This is probably the most uniformly flowing stream in the State.

On the North Branch of the Susquehanna river the tributaries were all very low, but have shown a general rise during the past week. A peculiar fact is that the main river is still low and stationary and has not been affected by the rise in the tributaries. This condition cannot exist long and the main river should rise slightly in a short time, bringing to an end the long dry spell.

The Water Supply Commission has had its engineers and hydrographers making measurements of discharge on the streams of the State during this low season and has collected valuable data relative to this subject. This information is for the use of the public and can be had by any one interested.

Offering Prayers for Rain Marietta, Nov. 12.—In all sections of the county there prevails a scarcity of water, and daily prayers are being offered for rain. In some sections, there are meetings held in the evening, where for hours prayers are offered. With the spread of the dread disease of the mouth and hoof on cattle, it seems as if Lancaster county is being punished severely. To-day there were several more inspections and probability of infected herds, as they show symptoms. Samuel G. Engle will lose about forty-five head.

TO EXHIBIT ENGINE NO. 666

Will Be Placed on Siding for Inspection by Members of Welfare and Efficiency Conference

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company will have their giant engine No. 666 on exhibition at the local shops for the benefit of the second annual Welfare and Efficiency Conference that goes into session here next Monday. The big passenger engine, which is of late construction with an H. S. boiler, weighing 394,000 pounds and painted like a big toy, will be placed on the siding facing the P. and R. station for the examination and criticism of the members of the conference.

The engine has passed through every department connected with the local shops and more than 150 men and boys were employed in preparing it for inspection. It has all been painted and polished until the last blemish has been removed.

The speed of the gigantic engine is 90 miles per hour and she was built in the Juniata workshop of the Pennsylvania several months ago. Her run was between Harrisburg and Jersey City.
