LANCASTER TOBACCO MARKET. Growers and Packers Look for a Bright Business This Month. Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 4.—The year just closed has been the dullest in Lancaster county's tobacco circles in a decade. Probably never in the history of tobacco culture in this county were the growers paid such low prices for their crops for the 1913 tobacco, and the trade of the local leaf dealers and the cigar industry were at their lowest ebb, December, as well as the previous month, had been counted upon to put some funds in the accounts of packers and manufacturers, but these expectations were not realized. All are looking for an early revival of business. In their 1913 packing the dealers say they have the finest tobacco this county has grown for some years, odor good, and a free, sure burner. The little that has been sold went at 13 cents a pound, though it is predicted that within another month it will advance a cent a pound. Even then it will be below the prices of the 1911 and 1912 packings. While crops of the 1914 tobacco have been selling for the past week, the total acreage disposed of has not been large, not a thousand acres, in fact, including the Havana seed sold early in the season. The Harrisburg Hospital is open daily except Sunday, between 1 and 2 o'clock p. m. for dispensing medical advice and prescription to those unable to pay for them. N. PARKER SHORTRIDGE DIES. Oldest Director of Pennsylvania Railroad Victim of Pneumonia. Philadelphia, Jan. 4.—N. Parker Shortridge, the oldest director of the Pennsylvania railroad, both in years and in point of service, died at his home in Wynnewood yesterday afternoon. About ten days ago he contracted a cold which developed into pneumonia and brought on his death. Mr. Shortridge was in his eighty-sixth year, and for more than half a century he was identified with the financial and business interests of this city. He was connected with the Pennsylvania railroad since its incorporation, having been one of those who made a house-to-house canvass to solicit subscriptions to its stock. He was made a director on March 24, 1874, and served continuously on the board until the time of his death, during the administration of seven of the system's presidents. It was through his efforts that the railroad's insurance department was organized and the old age pension system inaugurated. As chairman of the finance committee of the board since 1891, he was the leading spirit in the floating of securities and the financing of the system's many new ventures. A tax on war talk would produce enough revenue to pay the national debt. Artistic Printing at Star-Independent.
