

where I live, in the direction of my father-in-law; I suppose she came from the east; she then returned to my wife put the patch on my forehead; I first heard of the Timberger Thursday afternoon; was at the funeral on Saturday after that; I did not know about it; Joe did not know in my presence when the murder was committed; O'Connor was the man who shot the murder.

Patience—Lived in Youngstown; my last was living handy to the Coal Works; have known Joe for 20 years; saw him on the Saturday last at his home, in the yard, passed by his house between 6 o'clock in the evening; I was with us; I hid him the day and asked how his family was; they were all well and my family; have no book by me; I don't know the time; fix the time; been working only two days last Monday and Tuesday.

Examined—Youngstown is about miles from Dave Nicely's; I went there last fall and wasn't away until April; I was on my way to get my brother to move; was traveling in front; got my brother's; met people on the road; don't remember who; don't remember anyone near Dave; went from there down to Meadville; I saw Shellen's boys there; of the boys I know; the last one I saw before this was at Meadville some time last year; Mr. Shellen brought me here; I didn't tell him that I didn't see Joseph that day; didn't tell him that he was more than I could make out; didn't say I had a pistol; didn't tell him I was with a handy billy and revolver.

Thomas—I was called as a witness in the Commonwealth; they asked me the pocketbook that had been in the pocketbook in evidence; I wouldn't positively say that it isn't the pocketbook owned by David Nicely; I gave to Watson; the one I got from Dave was more stiff than this is now; I examined the pocketbook close; I don't look like the one on the book; Dave Nicely gave me; to the best of my knowledge I don't believe the pocketbook.

At this point Mr. Camp was recalled.

Mr. Camp went to Mr. Thomas in Ligonier a different pocketbook and ask that wasn't the pocketbook Dave had given him; this pocketbook one I had and showed to Mr. Thomas.

Thomas resumed—Mr. Camp drove my ivory stable and called me out; I'll give I have a pocketbook; want to show you, to see whether the one Dave Nicely gave you; it different one from this; he didn't see this one; he had two pocketbooks; he showed me; I told him they were the pocketbooks; on the day they were arrested I went down for them and Miss Horner; Miss Horner told me that she couldn't recognize the little man, for he had a mask; she described the appearance of the man.

Examined—There was a young man in the buggy with me; I don't know his name, or where he is; don't know whether he went west; Nanette is the little girl who was in the buggy; don't think any one was by; Camp showed me the pocketbook; he examined it; from the time it was given to me; I told Nicely I gave it to Watson; I told no one that I had the pocketbook; I put it in my inside vest; I did not take it out till I gave Watson; I told you (Mr. Camp) that I could not positively say whether this was or was not the pocketbook.

When Member—Mr. Thomas handed a pocketbook; this is not the pocketbook handed to me by Bill Miller; the inside was not so red as I examined it and know that this is the pocketbook.

Examined—I am a brother-in-law; I took the money out of the pocketbook and put it in the safe at the National Hotel; I didn't say I took the money out for fear I might get into trouble; I told Mrs. Nicely I took the pocketbook up what I did with the money.

My wife was given in care of Typographer Miller and Sullivan for the night and adjourned to 8:30 Wednesday morning.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 4.—The scenes here to-day are just a repetition of those every day since the flood, with its terrible suddenness and awful fury, struck the town. The excitement has calmed down somewhat, but the people are stupefied by the immensity of their loss. Cool heads and fine executive ability are gradually evolving out of the chaos a systematic plan of work and relief that is already beginning to show wonderful results. The Ohio men have come to the front in a way that is winning all hearts and piling up a debt of gratitude as boundless as the charity of the Buckeye State; they have tents up in the flood-swept plain in front of the Company Store; they come with horses and carts, picks and shovels and are doing effective work in clearing up the debris and rescuing the bodies of the dead. The fire has been subdued in the vast pile of wreckage that had piled against the Pennsylvania's bridge, and it is now proposed to use dynamite to break it up. Supt. Patton and his assistant, Mr. Manning, have done wonderful work in getting the Somerset & Cambria R. R. opened down to Bedford Street and are handling the relief trains that are constantly coming in with consummate skill. The Pennsylvania R. R. people have a temporary bridge over the new channel formed by the river and are rushing the relief trains from the west into their depot. Temporary bridges have been thrown across to the P. R. R. station and to Kernville.

Capt. Jones, of the Edgar Thompson Steel Works, has charge of a large force of workmen and is doing such work as only love and a great heart can do.

Among the parties reported lost in Monday's HERALD Mr. Samuel Shaffer and family are now known to be saved. The roof on which they were, floated down against Gen. Campbell's house, and Capt. Campbell and his brother succeeded in taking them off.

One of the things that went home to the heart of every visitor from Somerset was to see John Houston watching every brick and stone and piece of timber that was taken from the wreck of the Hulbert House, expecting each minute that the body of his daughter would be revealed to view.

The bodies of Mrs. Ogle and her daughter, Mrs. Hurst and her grandchildren and Miss Grace Garman have not been found.

The Tribune and Democrat both expect to resume publication at once.

A temporary post-office has been established and the people are now able to communicate with their friends.

A number of ladies whose homes were destroyed reached Somerset yesterday and to-day. They found a warm welcome from kind hearts and are being made as comfortable as possible. At the meeting last night arrangements were made to care for a number of people and Dr. Kindsley went to Johnstown to notify the committees. A large number of people are expected to-morrow. One of the first acts of some of the ladies on reaching the houses to which they had been assigned was to divest themselves of their outer clothing in order that it might be sent to friends in Johnstown, who had not saved enough clothing to allow them to make the journey. One of the things badly needed is women's clothing.

The appearance of David and Joseph Nicely, the prisoners, would not indicate that they are the hardened criminals they are generally believed to be. They are a very different kind of looking men from the four convicted for the robbery of Mr. Yoder. If placed among one hundred other men in the Court House, not one in twenty would point them out as probable murderers. Joseph's face is round, nose prominent, eyes dark and clear, forehead high and smooth, hair on his head thin and fine. He wears a somewhat heavy and long moustache. His gaze is steady, and bears the continued and close observation of the hundred of spectators, and there is no more interested person of every question asked and answered, and point raised and settled in the room. Not a word uttered by counsel, witness or Judge escapes his attention. Dressed in a neat fitting black coat, vest and pants, with clean, white collar and cuffs, his appearance is that of a somewhat shrewd business man. Immediately on his right sits his wife, neatly and fashionably attired in black. She is a modest and unassuming lady, with a rather thin and pale face. Like her husband she bears the fixed stare of hundreds of eyes without the least sign of embarrassment.

On her right is the chair occupied by David, the other prisoner, by whose side his wife with a four-month-old babe in her arms is usually to be seen. "Dave" as he is called, is a taller and slenderer man than his brother, and quite as inoffensive in appearance as his brother. With a thin visage, a straight large nose, clear black eyes, smooth short hair and small thin moustache, he sits with head usually resting on his hand, quietly and somewhat indifferently listening to the proceedings. Unlike Joe he seldom says a word to his counsel.

To the right sits the mother with a neat black dress on, and her head and face almost covered with a large black bonnet, shaped in the customary style of those allowed by the Dunkard Church. Her face is emaciated and strikingly pale, indicative of feeble health. Apparently she never loses sight of anything going on.

On her right the father is always to be seen; a patient and close observer of everything said and done. He is a short, angular man of some 60 years of age. His side and chin whiskers are quite gray, also his long hair on the side and back of his head. His forehead, owing to baldness of his head, appears to be higher than it really is. No one can fail to recognize a strong, if not striking, family resemblance among the parents and the two boys.

NO NEW DEVELOPMENTS.
OFFICIALS BELIEVE THAT THE CLAN-NA-GAEL ARE CLAMELESS.
Coughlin, Sullivan and Woodruff Formally Arraigned—They Plead Not Guilty and are Demanded—No More Arrests are Expected for the Present, at Least.

CHICAGO, June 1.—The actions of the police officials yesterday betokened something out of the common to be on hand for consideration. Superintendent Hubbard did not come to his office till late in the morning. He was at the North side at the office of Luther X. Ladlam, who is engaged by Cronin's friends to prosecute the case. Mr. Mills was not at his office and the chief concluded he would wait for him. He refused to talk about the Cronin case. He admitted that he had heard that a man named Williams or Mack had been arrested, but would say nothing more. It is said the man arrested on the West Side by the police Thursday is named McWilliams. The fellow is said to know something about the occupants of the Carlson cottage which will throw light on the murder of Dr. Cronin. The police do not think he is the man who drove the doctor to the assassination den. He is locked up at the Central station.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Contrary to the general expectation, the grand jury occupied itself with routine business, instead of taking up another branch of the Cronin case. This was due to the fact that State's Attorney Longenecker has not yet made up his mind whether or not it is desirable to complicate the investigation by going into the alleged perversion of the physical force fund. Lawyer W. J. Hynes, with whom it is said the murdered man left valuable papers giving the full details of what he had learned regarding the conspiracy against his life, had a long conference with Chief Hubbard, but no information was disclosed by either man regarding its nature. Before leaving the city hall, however, Mr. Hynes said that he was now more convinced than ever that the conspiracy was the work of individuals and not of the Clan-Na-Gael as a body. He believed that the men under arrest were implicated in the murder, but they were not the heads of the conspiracy and may not have been the actual murderers. He was not satisfied with the conduct of the case by the police and would not be until the criminals were arrested and the guilt fastened upon them.

Coughlin, Sullivan and Woodruff Formally Arraigned.
Ex-Detective Coughlin, P. O. Sullivan, the leonard, and Frank Woodruff were formally arraigned in Judge Williamson's court yesterday afternoon on the charge of abducting Dr. Cronin. They were hurriedly brought into court through the passage way leading from the jail at a time when very few spectators were present. Counsel for the prisoners had not been notified of the intended action, but Lawyer David, who represents Sullivan, happened to be in court at the time. All three pleaded "not guilty" and David made the stereotyped motion to quash the indictments. After each of the three prisoners had been furnished with a copy of the indictment against him they were taken back to jail. All three looked anxious and careworn although it was apparent that they were trying to preserve a cool exterior.

Manufacturing a Sensation.
An effort was made this morning to manufacture a sensation out of the arrest of a man variously known as "Williams" and "Mack," and who was taken by the police from a West Side lodging house. It was gravely stated that he knew all about the crime and that it would probably be developed that he was the man that pulled down the carpet in the Carlson cottage. Chief Hubbard knocked this story in the head to-night. Williams, he said, had not the slightest connection with the mystery, and he was simply being held at the Desplaines street station pending his return to the Bridewell, from which he escaped some time ago.

No More Arrests Expected.
It was developed last night that at the conference between Hubbard and Hynes the entire situation was gone over and that the chief expressed the emphatic opinion that there was no evidence on hand that would warrant any additional arrests, especially of the "suspects" on which the batteries of Dr. Cronin's friends have been directed. The city detectives, however, are still following up a number of leads promising and un-promising, and some of which may result in additional arrests at any time. Local members of the Irish Land League express considerable satisfaction with the action of the Philadelphia committee in refusing to postpone the July convention as suggested by President Fitzgerald. They say that the order is not identified in any way with the recent tragedy except that its members along the crime and deplore the untimely end of the victim, and that the postponement of the convention, by conveying a different impression, might have worked great harm to the cause of Ireland.

THE HOSTLER'S STORY.
His Experience With Woodruff on the Morning After Cronin's Murder.
OMAHA, Neb., June 1.—George Soule a hostler, now in the employ of Charles Mentor, on Davenport street, talked of the Cronin murder to a reporter. He was employed in Jim Cummings' barn, at 142 Madison street, Chicago, prior to his coming to Omaha. He was working there on the night that Cronin was murdered and states that about 2 o'clock in the morning, or sometime after mid night, Woodruff drove up to the barn with the famous white horse that has been written so much about and is supposed to have driven the rig which carried Cronin to his death. Woodruff said he wanted to leave the horse there over night and would call for it in the morning. Soule did not get up at the time, but the next morning found the white horse in his section. He cleaned him off, fed and watered him, and Woodruff called about noon.

"Is that horse all right?" asked Woodruff, as he approached Soule.

"I don't see anything wrong with him," replied Soule.

"Well, if any one had offered me $10 for the outfit last night he could have had it. I had a bell of a time with the beggar. In fact, I believe I would sell him pretty cheap this morning."

SOME took it for granted that Woodruff wanted to sell his outfit pretty badly, but at that time, of course, did not know anything about the murder. Woodruff then drove away and was never seen again by Soule, as the latter left for Omaha two days later. Inquiries made show that Soule did leave Chicago at that time and his statement is considered correct.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF TRADE.
Encouraging Outlook in Many Branches of Business.
New York, June 1.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The week has been interrupted by a holiday and a snap of unseasonable weather with a killing frost in some localities. While fruit has been injured somewhat extensively there is no evidence as yet that the damage to the greater crops has been appreciable, and it seems to have been confined to narrow limits. Rain has brought more hopeful prospects as to cotton in some southern sections, though oats in Alabama appear to have been generally injured by drought. On the whole the crop prospects continue unusually good and the markets are rapidly adjusting themselves to the assurance of ample supplies.

Business here has been somewhat interrupted by the holiday monetary uncertainties and the heavy auction sales, but at all points reporting continues large in volume, and the clearing through the banks show an increase of about 12 per cent. over last year outside of New York.

Money Market Quiet.
Lighter exports are to be expected for the next month. There is no apprehension of early disturbance in the money market, but the bank surplus, if materially weakened during the next six weeks by gold exports, may not be strong enough to prevent serious pressure in the fall. Money at interior points is almost everywhere in ample supply, Cleveland being the only city where any degree of closeness is noted.

No change is seen in cotton and sales have been large for the season. About 10 per cent. more than last year's price is asked for Michigan wool, but the trade is still checked by indisposition of manufacturers to pay any advance. The treasury decision on the worsted question, however, is regarded by many as an insurance of a more active demand for wool.

The annual auctions of flannels are believed to have established a satisfactory basis for this year's production and trading, and an improved tone in the dry goods market is perceptible. The jobbing trade continues fair for the season, and the new business in dress goods and hosiery is of fair proportions.

Dull Iron Market.
In the iron and steel trades no change of consequence is observed, though Pittsburg reports a very dull market for pig, with lower prices for some brands and a fair demand for manufactured iron and steel at former prices. The improvement prevails at Philadelphia and northern prices have been reached, and steel rail producers are encouraged by sales of 80,000 tons or more during the week to believe that the turning point has been reached, though as yet quotations are unchanged. In other branches of business the outlook is encouraging.

Failures during the last seven days numbered for the United States 200, for Canada 15; total 215, compared with 228 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 180 in the United States and 19 in Canada.

Daily Forum Under a Trestle.
ZANESVILLE, O., June 1.—The body of Marcus Hartman of Philadelphia, son of a Columbus, O., clothier, was found this morning under the C. & M. V. trestle at Ellis station from which he had either jumped or fallen a distance of twenty-five feet. His mind had been falling and he came to Ohio for recreation. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Wolf, and his daughter had just arrived here from Baltimore on a visit when the terrible news reached them.
