

A MIGHTY FORCE FOR MCKINLEY.

Young Republicans of Pennsylvania Labor at the Polls on Tuesday Next.

TO WORK FOR THE WHOLE TICKET

Thousands of Club Men are Appealed to That the Democracy Shall Have No Opportunity to Rejoice When the Returns Come In.

Republicans everywhere throughout Pennsylvania are preparing for next Tuesday's election, so that they may perform a solemn duty to their families, to state and to country to vote the whole Republican ticket.

There are many thousands of active, progressive young men who will not be content with merely casting their ballots for McKinley and Roosevelt and the entire Republican ticket, but they propose to labor all day to get others to the polls to do likewise.

CLUB MEN ACTIVE. In an address just issued to members of Republican clubs J. Hampton Moore, president of the State League of Republican Clubs, gives this timely notice:

"In the approaching election for president of the United States the forces of the Pennsylvania State League of Republican Clubs are expected to play a most important part. The recent convention held in Philadelphia demonstrated the enthusiasm and earnestness of the workers of the league, and justifies the expectation that excellent results would be forthcoming in the interest of McKinley and Roosevelt, and the whole Republican ticket."

"It is not my purpose as president of the league to enlarge upon the advantages of the Republican party policy. All good citizens should be united upon this point, and it is my purpose, however, to issue this final call to all Republican club members of the state to put their best foot forward in the fight which is to be determined on Nov. 3."

"Shall McKinley, Bryan rule this country? That is the question. If you are for McKinley, work for him; vote for him; urge your neighbors and friends to work for him. Do not permit to a citizen who is interested in the commercial and business life of the community to fall in his full duty as a citizen. Make him come out to vote; see that his vote is counted; support him; that it is counted upon the right side."

"What you do for McKinley and Roosevelt is also for your own state candidates. Give your loyal support to E. B. Hardenberg, the Republican nominee for auditor general, and to Galsusha A. Grow and Robert H. Forderer, the Republican nominees for congressmen-at-large. They are worthy and deserving men, who are entitled to and should receive the full Republican vote."

NOTE THE WHOLE TICKET. "Do not be deceived in any of your congressional districts. Stand for the regular Republican nominees. If the president of the United States is to be William McKinley, see that a congressman is elected who will support him. Mr. McKinley is the head and front of the Republican organization of the United States. His support comes from the organization of the President in party in the various states. Pennsylvania, the greatest of the Republican states, should be stalwart in its support, and should not elect a single congressman who will support him."

Let us hope that the expectations of the leaders of the party in state and nation may be realized, and that the State League may be able, after the returns are in, to claim the honor of having swelled the ranks of the party upwards of THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND VOTES.

"The only danger that confronts the party is inaction and apathy. The State League has never heretofore failed to do its part. Its enthusiasm has been a welcome factor in this campaign. Let us hope the result will justify its labor."

"Remember from now until Nov. 6 the important question for you, your neighbors and friends is 'MCKINLEY AND CONFIDENCE, BRYAN AND UNCERTAINTY. Which?'"

PUT THE CROSS IN THE REPUBLICAN CIRCLE. The regular Republican nominees from McKinley down, should receive every Republican vote. Differences of opinion should be laid on election day to mark the circle at the head of the Republican column.

AID AND COMFORT SHOULD NOT BE GIVEN THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY BY VOTING FOR ANY PART OF THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET. SCRATCHING ANY PART OF THE REPUBLICAN TICKET.

Herole Treatment. "Well, I might like to go back to school as well as Johnnie Evans does if you'd trained me as his mother trained him."

"How was that?" "She lashed him every day so he'd be glad to go back."—Cleveland Herald Dealer.

In Self Defense. "What makes you assume such a loud and aggressive tone in proclaiming your own merits?" asked the very candid friend.

"I am forced to do it," was the great actor's answer. "I'm naturally one of the most modest men in the world, and I've got to keep praising myself for fear my sensitive nature will compel me to go to the manager and tell him I think I am getting too much money."—Washington Star.

THE HEAD OF MOSES.

WHY THE LEADER OF ISRAEL IS REPRESENTED WITH HORNS.

The Error Which Gave Root to the Curious Idea That is Perpetuated by Paintings, Coins and Statues. Michael Angelo's Masterpiece.

In one of the schools of the District is a copy of Michael Angelo's "Moses." That small statuette was a storm center for weeks, the pupils and teachers vying with each other in an attempt to find an answer to the question of one of the small pupils who gravely queried the why of the inept horns which ornamented the head of the rugged leader of the Israelites as he is represented in this masterpiece of Michael Angelo's, by the way, which started out to be a joke or some other fiction of the brain, but which the great sculptor finally shaped into the likeness of Pope Julius and christened "Moses."

For 40 years, just as long as Moses and his people wandered in the wilderness, this statuette stood in the workshop of its gifted creator before the world saw it, but it types today the universal conception of the great lawgiver, horns and all.

It has been known for centuries, though, that the translation of Habakkuk, which says, "And his brightness was as light; he had horns coming out of his head;" is incorrect and the mistake of the "intelligent compositor," who in his illuminated text got mixed up on his "s's" and "r's" and made the "horn" "sprout." The present Hebrew can be made into old English. The former means "rays," the latter means "horns," and there you are.

St. Jerome in rendering "his face shone" in the passage in Exodus gave it its primitive meaning and mistranslation and has sent down to us the ages "faciem esse cornutum," being "his face was horned." Thus it seems that a mistake stereotyped in stone remains to torment the youth who likes to know the why of things.

Just why artists and sculptors keep on perpetuating this idea is one of the inscrutable things of life. But more than anybody else perhaps artists cling to tradition, and since the great masters gave Moses horns it must be the proper thing to do, and that is probably why he wears horns in modern art as a medieval art.

In the Congressional library, on the south side of the big sundial clock, is a gigantic bronze Moses by Niehaus, and he has horns that look not unlike those wonderful bumps that Ben Butler's big head used to wear. In the Boston Library John Sargent, the great painter, for a centerpiece to a procession of the prophets painted Moses with full front view and horns like a Texas steer, and infolding him is a queer conventional kind of drapery that looks like eagle's wings.

In striking contrast to these horned conceptions which the ancients have imposed upon us and which we still accept is a copy of a splendid Moses by Ploekhorst representing the archangel Michael struggling with Satan for the dead body of Moses, which is upheld by three angels. The Moses has instead of horns upon his grandly conceived head rays of light which seem to mellow and soften the stern face of the dead lawgiver. Ploekhorst has painted real child angels, too, not fat little kids with legs and arms like prizefighters and bodies like beer cans. This is the best of the modern art, and the height of the buoy over all is 18 feet. From the water line to the top of the plane it measures 10 feet 6 inches, and the diameter of the body of the buoy is 7 feet, the total weight being 6,800 pounds. The body of the buoy forms the receiver for the compressed gas and is of sufficient size to give proper buoyancy for flotation and of adequate strength to safely hold a pressure of 150 to 180 pounds per square inch.

On top of the body is a wrought iron tower about six feet high, surmounting which is a lantern for protecting it, and the tower is provided with a platform on which to stand to light or adjust the flame.

Just below the platform is suspended a bell weighing 185 pounds. This bell is sounded automatically every 20 or 30 seconds or, indeed, at regular intervals of any duration, all of which may be predetermined. The flow of the gas from the receiver to the lantern furnishes the means of operating the bell. This is a safe rule to stand for the regularity of nominations, and the State League stands not only for the maintenance of Republican principles, but also for the rule of the majority. Whenever a congressional candidate has been regularly nominated he should receive the support of all the members of the State League.

SHOULD BE VOTING. The loss of one congressman in Pennsylvania may turn the next house of representatives. The president of the United States, the chairman of the national executive committee and the chairman of the national congressional committee have each said that there is no wavering on the part of the Republicans of Pennsylvania.

"Let us hope that the expectations of the leaders of the party in state and nation may be realized, and that the State League may be able, after the returns are in, to claim the honor of having swelled the ranks of the party upwards of THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND VOTES."

WAR MEERAS AND THEIR SONS.

Patriotic Pennsylvanians Rallying For McKinley and Republicanism.

EXPERIENCES IN TWO WARS.

Bryantides of Today Are But Repeating Copperhead Attacks Which Characterized Their Party in the Days of Lincoln.

In view of the malicious assaults upon the McKinley administration and the United States soldiers in the Philippines by the Bryantides of today, a profound sensation was made by the recent publication of the story of the copperhead candidate for auditor general in Pennsylvania, for his copperhead newspaper assaults upon Lincoln in the dark days of the rebellion. Meek's attacks upon Lincoln were no more bitter nor vindictive than are the tirades of his Democratic associates in the present campaign against McKinley.

A feeling of intense hostility to the present leadership of the Democracy has been aroused among men who have served in the army and navy of the United States, both during the rebellion and in the recent war with Spain. Sons of veterans of the civil war in Pennsylvania, as nearly as thousands in Pennsylvania, are thoroughly aroused, and they propose to make their influence felt at the coming election. Many of them who have been voting with the Democracy will vote for President McKinley and the entire Republican ticket.

National headquarters of the Veterans' Patriotic League have been established in Philadelphia, and great work is being done in the way of organizing the old soldiers and the sons of veterans.

General Director Daniel Sickles, who has been a factor in this organization, has issued an appeal for support for President McKinley, which voices the sentiments of those with whom he is working.

"Let me urge every soldier and sailor," says General Sickles, "to lay aside party feeling and unite for national honor and for law and order, as you would for the prosperity of the nation now enjoys. Let us run no risk by disturbing the conditions which are rapidly giving us the control of the best markets in the world for the products of our mines, our manufactures and of our farms. The re-election of McKinley means employment for labor everywhere at good wages, land in gold, wheat, corn and cotton, for our gold, iron and steel, for all of our manufactured products."

"It means the preservation of our national honor, by the fulfillment of our obligations to the creditors of the nation, to the veteran soldiers and sailors, and the widows and orphans of the late war, to the public creditors who hold the securities of the government, to the holders of hundreds of millions of paper money, for which the credit of the nation is pledged."

The re-election of Comrade McKinley means security and safety to two thousand million dollars, deposited in the treasury of the United States, to mechanics and laborers, otherwise threatened by the loss of one-half of this vast sum, if Mr. Bryan is permitted to debase our currency by his silver standard.

"The re-election of Comrade McKinley means a preference to be given to worthy veteran soldiers and sailors; means a continuation of our liberal pension policy."

"The re-election of Comrade McKinley means tranquility and prosperity at home, peace in the Philippines, and the maintenance of our national honor, the vindication of our flag, and the augmented influence of our beloved country among the nations of the world."

"Let all of us vote for McKinley and Roosevelt—heroes of two wars—statesmen to whom the country may well confide its interests and its honor, patricians who risked their lives in the defense of our flag, illustrious citizens, both of them, who have given ample evidence in all their public employments and in private life, that they possess the qualities and the virtues which dignify the high stations for which they are nominated."

The interest in the goat industry is steadily growing. The value of this beast as a clearer up of brush lands is being demonstrated to the public. Men with brush farms should look this goat business up. A small flock of them will work wonders on a brush farm.

A person always runs a great moral risk when he gets hold of a pair of bronchos to break in or a horse which can trot inside of three minutes. There are some things which play a no business to encounter. When a person gets a horse, he might just as well quit preaching.

Virchow, the German scientist, said the way to live long is to "be born with a good constitution, take care of it when you are young, always have something to do and be resigned if you find you cannot accomplish all you wish." It is easier to live long with a poor constitution than to violate the other conditions and reach old age.

The taxidermist makes an honorable living at a skin game.—Philadelphia Record.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN. Manure should never touch the tree roots. Grapes should not be ripening on the vine.

All small apples and other defective, infirm or damaged by worms have their best market on the farm as food for animals. If packed with sound fruit, they reduce the price of all.

In planning out the planting of the orchard the land should be planted to the trees at such distances from each other as to secure the development of the natural characteristics of the kind.

To destroy aphides or plant lice dip the ends of the twigs into a strong tea made by steeping tobacco stems in hot water or syringe the foliage through with whale oil soaps.—St. Louis Republic.

So It Does. An old gentleman when passing a street corner remarked: "Are you not afraid you will catch cold on such a wet night, my little man?"

"Oh, no," replied the boy; "selling newspapers keeps up the circulation, sir."
