NEW ORLEANS, SUNDAY, APRIL 10, 1870. MISCELLANEOUS IRISH NEWS.

A public meeting has been held in Limerick, the Mayor presiding, for the purpose of carrying out a project for the erection of a monument to the memory of Sarsfield. The Mayor, in opening the proceedings, stated that the movement was commenced twelve years ago, when subscriptions to the amount of £500 were raised, and a promise of £200 was obtained. There was at present about £700 available. He trusted to the patriotism of the city not to leave the memory of an illustrious Irishman uncommemorated. Speeches in support of the movement were delivered by Mr. A. Hall, T. C. Dr. Parker and others. Arrangements were made for the appointment of ward committees, and an appeal for assistance to the Irish in America and Australia. Mr. Hall, in the course of his speech, suggested that the monument should consist of a triumphal arch at the Wesley Bridge, to be surmounted by a statue of Sarsfield. The Mayor, in reply, said that in the act of hurling the Saxon invader from the walls.

One of the gravest descriptions of injustice under which this country labors, is the manipulation of the jury. It has been not only a source of constant complaint, but it has contributed to inspire the people with that profound distrust of the law which forms so unhappy a feature of the national opinion. It pervades nearly every part of Ireland, east, west, north and south. The offices which confer the power of selecting jurors are a part of the inheritance left to members of the Protestant ascendancy party. They form a portion of the vested interests which neither the Church nor the State can touch. It is especially the case that it is notoriously impossible to convict an Orangeman for any grave offence. How could it be otherwise? His brethren are in the box. They share his brutal hatred and applaud the blood-thirsty exhibition of them. They would in the same circumstances do the same thing themselves. Is it a wonder, then, that for fifty years, during which homicides have been constantly committed by Orangemen in Ulster, not a single one of the slayers have been convicted? The farcical trial at Kavanagh the other day, for the assassination at Drumaloe, was simply an ordinary specimen of the way in which the law deals with Orangemen who may be brought before them.—Cork Examiner.

Cork Farmers' Club.—A meeting of the Cork Farmers' Club was held on Saturday, and was largely attended. Mr. Farrell, in referring to the certain passage of the Land Bill through the House of Lords after the large majority which had passed the second reading in the Commons, declared his conviction that it will not do one iota of good to the country. On the contrary, he said, it will be sure to make a numerous class of farmers long for native Parliament. He thought that the future elections the cry should be Repeal, Fixity of Tenure, Rents at fair valuation. He believed that the half acre clause to laborers would make more Fenians than all O'Donovan Rossa's preaching. Mr. Mahony thought the most amusing part of the debate was the conduct of O'Donoghue and Mr. G. H. Moore. The former had long since shown signs of having sown his political wild oats; but Mr. Moore's conversion was startling, considering the intense hostility to Government on the Amnesty question. If the two gentlemen had met one another at Boulogne, as they had once proposed, they would have left behind them a much higher reputation than they now enjoyed. Mr. Ronayne was of opinion Mr. Gladstone had never seen the bill at the time he made his statement, both were so different. The real father of the bill was Mr. Fortescue, who was too well known in connection with abortive land legislation. The meeting shortly after separated.

The Premier and Ireland.—Mr. Gladstone made use of the following admissions in his speech during Friday night's debate on the Land Bill:—For a hundred years Ireland has been engaged in almost a continual conflict with the governing powers of this island. She has engaged in that conflict with all the disadvantages of limited population, of inferior resources, of backward political development, and yet she has been uniformly successful. Strength and weakness have grappled together in a most incessant conflict, and on every occasion, in a succession of falls, strength has been laid prostrate on the ground, and weakness has waved the banner of victory. The career of Ireland has been one of a cry for justice for her cause, and it has been sustained in it by the favoring opinion of the civilized and Christian world.

On Sunday, 13th ult., a Lenten Pastoral from his Eminence, Cardinal Cullen, was read in the Cathedral, Marlborough street, by Rev. Walter Murphy. The pastoral enjoins compliance with the observances of fasting and prayer, during the present season, and expressed condemnation of the Fenian society. When the Rev. gentleman arrived at the portion of the pastoral relating to the latter subject, a considerable body of the congregation, including many in the immediate neighborhood of the pulpit, rose, made an obeisance to the altar, and left the church.

The Irish Bishops and the Land Bill.—The Roman correspondent of the Freeman writes:—The Irish Bishops had their usual weekly meeting at the Irish College yesterday. The Land Bill formed one of the subjects under consideration. It is understood that their lordships did not contemplate any formal pronouncement on the clauses of the bill, and none was made; but I have heard that they were satisfied with the main features of the bill, whilst at the same time they considered that important improvements might be effected in it.

At the Clonmel assizes Stephen Meagher, a farmer, was convicted of having sent a threatening letter to Mrs. Jane Pennefather, a lady residing near Bray. The prisoner was a tenant on Mrs. Pennefather's property, and bailiff to Mr. Exham, her agent. Last year Mrs. Pennefather raised the rents, and letters were sent her and Mr. Exham, threatening if the rents were not exacted the agent would suffer the fate of Braddell. A similar notice was addressed to the prisoner. The prosecution alleged that the three documents were written by the prisoner, and being found guilty, he was sentenced to five years' penal servitude.

The Dominican Church, Limerick.—This church is about undergoing extensive improvements. The church will be increased by side aisles, and the ceiling inside completely altered. When all the improvements are completed it will be one of the neatest churches in Limerick. The Rev. Mr. Carbery succeeded in collecting a considerable sum for the good work.

At a meeting of the Enniskillen Farmers' Council, the Board ignored a number of resolutions from Galway, disapproving of Mr. Gladstone's Land Bill, and tendering the Premier their best thanks.

The State of Ireland.—Judge Keogh, in addressing the Grand Jury at Meagh, congratulated them on the peaceable state of their county. He said there were only a few cases since the last assizes, and very few bills would go before them. There were about fifteen, chiefly for rioting and having arms in a proclaimed district, but none of them required any particular observations from him. The County Inspector had reported to him most favorably of the county also.

At Waterford on Saturday night a number of men were playing cards in a public house, when a man named Philip Aylward took up a knife, which another called Peter Clear had laid on the table after cutting tobacco, and stabbed him to the heart without a word of dispute. Clear expired immediately, and Aylward was taken into custody by Constable Cooney.

At the Tyrone assizes thirty-five persons were charged with riot, in August last, at Strabane, on the occasion of laying the foundation of an Orange Lodge. The Crown withdrew the charges against the Protestants. The Catholics pleaded guilty and were ordered to come up for judgment when called upon.

It is stated that the members for the University of Dublin and the bulk of the Conservative party will support Mr. Fawcett's motion on the first of April, calling on Government to introduce a measure opening the foundation of Trinity College.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Alexander Sommers-Drake, of Rathvale, Attorney, to the commission of the peace for the county Meath, on the recommendation of the Lord Lieutenant of the county.

Information reached Enniskillen on Saturday that a farmer named Reynolds, on his way from the fair, had been left for dead. He is not expected to recover.

The Festival of the Purification in St. Peter's, Rome.

This festival was celebrated in Rome in St. Peter's with great splendor and pomp. The morning of this Feast, so joyful and welcome to the Catholic heart, was ushered in with innumerable joy-bells from churches, monasteries, and convents as early as five o'clock. The very air was jubilant with the music of their soft and silvery tones. The sweet flood of sound passed down from the Capitol. It was taken up by the churches and convents in the Forum and on the Palatine, the site of the palaces of the Caesars. It passed along the Esquiline, the Quirinal, and Pincian Hills, swept down by the banks of the Tiber, and was continued along the lofty Janiculum and Aventine Hills. The ringing of these joy-bells in Rome on great festivals is indeed delightful. The pious sentiments and feelings of the Romans responded fully to the gladsome and festive sounds, for their devotion, as well as that of the Italians generally, as well as that of God in great and ardent prayer. St. Peter's was thronged with an immense congregation, a congregation as large as that on the day of the opening of the Council. The reserved seats were crowded by Roman ladies in court dress, who, although they do not generally leave their own parish churches to come here in large numbers on festivals, were here this morning to honor the Mother of God, their own Madonna, and to implore, under the blessing of the Holy Father, her prayers and protection. In addition to the Swiss Guards, the Zouaves were here as a mark of honor and respect to the festival day. They are a fine looking body of men; and their colonel, a very giant in stature and physical proportions, seemed, as he marched up and down along their line with a modest look, a worthy commander of such a body. They are mostly young men, the down of youth being still on many a cheek. How different their look from that of soldiers generally! The hard, dissipated appearance is not here; but the soft, fresh look of innocence and youth. Their piety and faith are truly edifying. You meet them kneeling in prayer in every church and at every shrine. When you hear the clink of the sword on the marble floor of some church, you may be sure it is that of some devoted Zouave kneeling or rising from prayer. They are the flower of Christian chivalry. Other soldiers fight and bleed for honors, rank, or fame, but these are prepared to die for religion, for God, and for heaven. No fear or panic will nerve the arms of these Christian soldiers on the battle-field, and their victory is sure. If they die, they die for the Church, for religion, and their reward, their victory, will be a crown of glory from Him in defence of whose Vicar they spared not their lives. In the Crusade no arms were more formidable to the Saracens, than those of the Knights Templars of Jerusalem, because, nerved by faith, they struck for religion, for God.

Conscience makes cowards of all men, even of soldiers. Men fear to die fighting in a bad cause; but he is doubly armed, doubly brave, whose cause is just. The Pope entered the church attended by the Bishops of Halifax and Cincinnati, and preceded by the cardinals and a large number of Eastern bishops, in gorgeous and many colored vestments, and in mitres of different shapes, and brilliant with precious stones. He was borne up the church in the papal chair, bestowing his blessing on each side on the kneeling multitudes. He seemed to be more pale and care-worn than at the Epiphany. And so was under the anxiety and solicitude caused by the Council, to gather with many other additional duties, would tell even on an iron constitution. The procession with lighted candles was very grand. The Pope, after blessing and distributing them to the cardinals, the ministers at the altar, the bishops, generals, officers, and the Noble Guard, was borne down the church in his chair, holding in his hand a large lighted candle in a silver candelstick with a silver veil pendant from it, and covering the hand. First came the German students of the Roman College in soutanes of red, each holding in his hand a lighted candle, then the canons in their picturesque dress of white capes, and soutanes of blue and purple, the monsignors in surplices, the bishops in white vestments and mitres, the cardinals in their crimson robes; and then the Pope, with that sweet, benignant look, the eloquent index of a soul of great interior holy peace, and at the same time so expressive of charity and love for men. The generals, officers, and Noble Guard, the breasts of many being covered with stars and sashes sparkling with diamonds, followed after. As the procession moved down the church from the high altar, round the tomb of the Apostles between the serried ranks of the Swiss Guards, and the lights from countless candles shone and sparkled on the sword and spear of the soldier, and the golden and silver vestments and mitres of the bishops, and the jewelled-belted swords and golden collars of the generals and the Noble Guard, the sight was indeed beautiful and grand.

The ever active and restless power of thought, if not employed about what is good, will naturally and unavoidably engender evil.
