

EDITORIAL AND OTHER ITEMS.

There are a million of grape vines within the limits of Los Angeles, Cal. Mrs. Adela McKeon is an independent candidate for Congress from California.

According to Mr. Gladstone, the wealth of England increases $500,000,000 every year. In Illinois and Indiana the trains stop five minutes to enable passengers to obtain divorces.

The city of New York is now commonly spoken of by visitors from other places as Spikville. Throughout the voluminous characters sketched by Dickens, he has not attempted a Scotch one.

The late severe drouth is assigned as the reason for raising the price of milk in some Northern cities. Augusta, Ga., has shipped 75,000 watermelons this season, one-third of the number going to New York.

The grandson of an Irish Earl is about to start in Dublin a comic paper, to be called The Knight Errant. Horace Greeley has just sold one of his own shares of the New York Tribune stock, just to oblige a friend.

Great Britain has 6416 cotton, woolen and other clothing manufacturers, which employ 845,066 operatives. A man in Concord has a biscuit which was set on Lafayette's table in 1825. It is getting well seasoned by this time.

The first female compositor has just been admitted to the Government printing office at Washington, to work by the piece. Prussian recruits are all marked with indelible ink, so that they may be identified when they are brought home mangled.

A boarding-house in Boston advertises that "four Christian young men are wanted, who neither chew, smoke, spit nor swear." A New York policeman, while making an arrest recently, was assaulted by three women, one of whom bit off his right ear.

The late warm weather was so severely felt that a neighbor of ours in the Sixth District had to soak his pig to make him hold still. A census taker in Michigan found a beautiful young lady rejoicing in the name of Lana Anoura Borealis. Her life ought to be insured.

Those who wish to get a bird's-eye view of the merits of the "Alabama question," can do so by turning over 3780 pages of small print. A party of workmen engaged in digging a canal in Sherman, Mo., found a live turtle, eighteen inches across the back, ten feet below the surface.

The School Commissioners of Louisville, Ky., have decided to employ no more teachers who are under twenty years of age. A wise decision. Professor Blot, famous for his cooking lectures, is suffering terribly with dyspepsia, a disease which he promised to banish from the face of the earth.

The census returns show that the increase of population in Brooklyn, Jersey City and other cities about New York is proportionately much greater than in New York itself. A mathematical genius estimates that it would require a canal five miles long, fifty feet deep, and two hundred feet broad to hold the beer annually consumed in Europe.

Mrs. Steele, sister of Hon. Roscoe Conkling, has been appointed by Collector Murphy, of New York, an inspectress of customs, and is discharging the duties of her office. Worm lozenges sold in several Massachusetts towns have been analyzed, and found to contain strychnine in sufficient quantity to cause great injury, if not death.

A London butcher has been detected in selling donkey meat for beef, and his cockney customers are exceedingly indignant at being "treated as" they were cannibals. In a marriage lately reported at Pittsburg, the bride and groom were aged respectively fifteen and sixteen, both mamma's consenting. They are providing for the next census.

An exchange says that there were 30,000 glasses of lager beer, 20,000 bottles of soda, and 15,000 cigars consumed by those who attended the recent temperance convention at New Haven. A man in Iowa has been arrested for obtaining goods under false pretences. He got a girl to marry him on the pretence that he was wealthy. The "goods" don't like that way of doing.

Mrs. Vanderhorst, of South Carolina, mysteriously disappeared from the side of her friend, Mrs. Gen. Wayne, while on their way to Saratoga Springs, a week ago, and has not been heard from since. A box passed through the express at Hartford last week, containing a live rattlesnake, which slightly confused the employees of the office by playful thrusts of its tongue through the cracks of the box.

There is a man in Lee, N. H., who has managed to live for eighty-three years without having once consulted a physician. Rather selfish conduct. How are the doctors to live, if this example be generally followed?

At Half Moon, New York, the other day, Norman Shaw, aged thirteen, "got mad" at his mother, picked out a text for his funeral sermon, and hanged himself in the barn. The sermon was preached the next day, in accordance with the boy's wishes.

A new organization, called the "Irish National Brotherhood," has lately been put into operation. Its ramifications will be extended over all the States of the Union, with headquarters in St. Louis. It is intended to supersede Fenianism, uniting all the factions into one brotherhood.

A party of roughs in Connelleville, Pa., the other day, assaulted and robbed a man, on whom they found only the small sum of $2.50. Enraged at their ill-fortune, they took their victim to the lock-up, incarcerated him in it, and left him to be released by the authorities in the morning.

All four of the Republican candidates for Congress in South Carolina are negroes, as are also the candidate for Lieutenant Governor, the chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee, not to speak of one of the Supreme Court Judges and the Secretary of State being blacks.

At Alleghany, a short time ago, an old Prussian named Baute, who is in his ninety-seventh year, was turned out of his home by an ungrateful son, who had refused to shelter him any longer. He was without food for two days when he was led before the Mayor and sent to the poor-house.

A couple recently married in Guilford, N. H., after two weeks' experience of the sweets of matrimony, have dissolved partnership without the intervention of a court. She said she wouldn't live with him, and he said he would give her one hundred dollars to quit. She took the greenbacks and went.

An observing dog attacked a pig which had entered a dry goods store in Maine the other day, bit off its tail, and then seized it by the ear, and led it shrieking back to its quarters in the rear. He then returned to the store, picked up the tail, carried it out to the pig, and then withdrew from the scene.

When Mr. Nathan, the murdered banker, engaged his summer residence in Stamford, Conn., he expressed a fear that the premises were not sufficiently guarded against burglars, and told the owner that if he wished to see a house perfectly secure against robbers he should examine No. 12 West Twenty-third street, New York.

Editors Morning Star and Catholic Messenger: I must say that you have hitherto been very kind, and apparently ever sanguine, in your notices of St. Theresa's parochial school. I hope now you will grant me a little indulgence, by inserting a few lines in your very able, useful and erudite columns.

I must say that you have frequently embarrassed me by the glowing descriptions which you have given of St. Theresa's new school. I feared lest I should not be able to fill all you predicted. To-day the school is finished, with a capacity to accommodate over six hundred pupils. It has been asserted time and again in your truth-telling journal, that the people of St. Theresa's parish were generous; but should any one have doubted the assertion, it is to-day fully attested.

Since the first of May they have erected a school building worth about $17,000. True, there are debts, but so small as never to embarrass. It would be unjust to say that the people of St. Theresa's parish have done all the work, for persons residing in other parts of the city, recognizing the claims of the aforesaid parish, have liberally contributed to the good work. And many are the invitations from different parts of the city to call and receive contributions—invitations which shall be attended to in due time.

The people, and especially the building committee, feel that they are under very heavy obligations to Thomas Mulligan, Esq., the superintendent, who would accept no remuneration for his services. William Kelly, Esq., the builder, also deserves great credit, for he has been the lowest bidder, and he has accomplished the work so as to defy criticism. In fact, every one connected with the building seemed to vie with each other in generosity and professional ability. Mr. Reynolds, a perfect stranger to all connected with the building, refused payment for the corner-stone of the best and greatest Italian marble. It is impossible to do justice to all who have contributed by their aid and liberal donations towards so noble and praiseworthy an undertaking. The people of St. Theresa's parish feel fully requited for the generosity they have previously extended to their neighbors, from the alacrity and good feeling manifested to them in return.

The school will be open on Monday, the 20th of November next, with the director of the Christian Brothers, and their children there is no necessity of saying anything for they are well known to the public at large as men of sound learning and humility. The female department will be indirectly under the supervision of the Sisters of Charity, whose well-known ability is equally proverbial. Children of all denominations will be received, and their conscientious convictions, or those of their parents, shall be scrupulously respected. It is expected that a Fair, to be held on the 20th of November next, will leave the school out of debt, its pastor free, and the people to rejoice over their good work.

THOS. J. KENNY. The Prussian army, of which about one-third are Catholics, has, according to regulation, twenty-four Catholic chaplains. The Government, conscious of the value of the religious element in war, and consulting the feelings of its Catholic soldiers, has readily recognized such a small number of military chaplains as insufficient, has decided on increasing the number in the present campaign. A great many priests, secular and regular, immediately responded to the appeal of the Government. The supererogatory chaplains are treated in every respect as the ordinary chaplains. The military authorities provide them with three horses, with two soldiers as servants, and give them a captain's pay—such a wise regard for the religious wants of soldiers about to face death on the field of battle, speaks well for the forethought and the religious character of the Prussian Government—Sisterhood in the military hospital. What care and consolation will they not afford to the sick and wounded soldiers!

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

New York, August 25.—The World's special says that an envoy from Madrid has arrived in France to re-open negotiations for offering the Spanish throne to Prince Thomas, of Genoa, son of the Duchess of Genoa, and brother-in-law of the Prince Royal of Italy, the Papal Governor of Parma, the plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is making the frontiers, and there are no symptoms now remaining of trouble, either in the Pontifical States or in Italy. General Faillly was dismissed because he left a hundred canons at Chalons, which would have been sent to the frontiers, and he was kept in the rear. The Emperor's plan and Marquis Rapallo, the step-father of the Prince, favors its resumption. The Prince is sixteen years old. The mission of General Prolo, of Rome, is entirely successful. The Italian army is