MINIATURE LIVES OF THE SAINTS.

November 18.

ST. GREGORY THAUMATURGUS.

St. Gregory was born in Pontus of heathen parents. In Palestine, about the year 331, he studied philosophy under the great Origen, who led him from the pursuit of human wisdom to Christ, who is the Wisdom of God. Not long after he was made bishop of Neocesarea in his own country. His humility filled him with fear, and he retired from the world in order to learn more accurately the mysteries of the faith. As he lay awake one night, an old man entered his room, and pointed to a lady of superhuman beauty and radiant with heavenly light. This old man was St. John the Evangelist; and when the Lady told him to give Gregory the instruction he desired, St. John said that in this also he was ready to please the mother of the Lord. Thereupon he gave St. Gregory a creed which contained in all its fulness the doctrine of the Trinity. St. Gregory set it in writing, directed all his preaching by it, and handed it down to his successors. Strong in this faith he subdued demons, he foretold the future. At his word a rock moved from its place, a river changed its course, a lake was dried up. He converted his diocese, and strengthened those under persecution. He struck down a rising heresy, and when he was gone this creed preserved his flock from the Arian pest. St. Gregory died in the year 270.

When St. Gregory went to his diocese there were but seventeen Christians in it; when he died but seventeen heathens. He built a church for his people, the first Christian church of which we have any certain record. It survived the persecution of Diocletian, who ordered that all Christian churches should be razed to the ground. It stood unshaken in an earthquake which destroyed the city. It was the symbol of that unshaken faith which Gregory received from the Virgin Mother of God.

ST. ELIZABETH OF HUNGARY.

Elizabeth was daughter of a king of Hungary, and niece of St. Hedwig. She was betrothed in infancy to Louis, Landgrave of Thuringia, and brought up in his father's court. In her fourth year she began to spend her time in prayer, and gave all she had to the poor; and growing up she increased in piety and humility, undeterred by the reproaches and ridicule of her husband's family and courtiers. She never left her husband without necessity, and in his absence laid aside her royal robes and lived in retirement. She was the first in Germany to join the Third Order of St. Francis. Not content with receiving daily numbers of poor in her palace, and relieving all in distress, she built several hospitals, where she served the sick, dressing the most repulsive sores with her own hands. God rewarded her charity with many miracles. Once, on her way to a banquet, she gave her ducal mantle to a poor man, and an angel restored it to her. Another time, being simply dressed, she appeared before her father's ambassadors in a purple robe embroidered with gold and precious stones. On her husband's death she was cruelly driven from her palace, and forced to wander through the streets with her little children a prey to hunger and cold; but she welcomed all her sufferings and continued to be the mother of the poor, converting many by her holy life. She died in 1231, at the age of twenty-four.

Once at St. Elizabeth was descending by a very steep and rough path from her castle to the town, carrying in the folds of her mantle bread, meat, eggs and other provisions for the poor, she met her husband returning from the chase. Astonished to see her bending under the weight of her burden, he opened the mantle which she kept pressed against her, and found in it nothing but the most beautiful red and white roses he had ever seen, although it was not the season for flowers. He also saw over her head a luminous image, in the form of a crucifix. Bidding her pursue her way, he took one of the marvelous roses, and kept it all his life.

ST. EDMUND, KING, MARTYR.

In 855, Offa, King of East Anglia, anxious to finish his days in holy seclusion, gave up his throne in favor of Edmund, then a youth of fifteen. The young king showed a precocious wisdom in governing, making himself personally acquainted with all the state affairs of his kingdom. Though so watchful a ruler, he was zealous in devout practices, and retired for a whole year into solitude, that he might learn the Psalter by heart. After he had reigned peacefully and prosperously for fifteen years the Danes invaded England, plundering and destroying wherever they went, and especially vowing destruction to everything Christian. When they approached the convent of Colindale, St. Edmund, the abbot, and his nuns, fearless of all but their purity, horribly mutilated themselves by cutting off their noses and upper lips. When the barbarians broke in horror-struck at the spectacle, they contented themselves with putting the holy women to the sword. Edmund resolved to do all he could to save his own country, raised whatever forces he could, and routed part of the invading force near Thetford; but fresh hordes pouring in, he saw that resistance was vain, and as all terms offered by the Danes were inconsistent with his duty to God and man, he disbanded his troops and tried to conceal himself. He was, however, captured and brutally put to death, displaying the most heroic Christian endurance to the end.

After St. Edmund was taken prisoner he was offered his life and his country and to religion. He, in reply, declared that religion was dearer to him than life, which was worthless when bought at such a price. Then Hingus, the Dane, not content with putting the noble king to death, subjected him to the most terrible tortures, vainly hoping to shake his fortitude. He was beaten with cudgels, then torn with scourges, and at last bound to a tree and shot at with arrows, until, while still living, he was transpierced in every part. All this the Saint bore with joy and patience, calling on the holy name of Jesus. It was only after he had endured every possible torture, that the Danes, weary of their cruelty, struck off his head.

ST. OSWIN, KING, MARTYR.

Twelve centuries ago Oswin ascended the throne of the fair north-country province of Deira. In person he was handsome, tall and winning. His rule was just, peaceful and happy, and he loved and was beloved by all his subjects. He found a bosom friend in the venerable Bishop, St. Aidan, and a mortal enemy in his jealous and covetous neighbor, King Oswy. Each in turn served Oswin with occasions of virtue. At one time we find him on his knees before St. Aidan, asking forgiveness for a hasty speech; at another disbanding his brave and loyal men, to save them from Oswy's superior force. Seeing at last that his own death could alone pacify Oswy and save his people, despite their tears and the willing offer of their lives, he chose a companion and bade them farewell. He was pursued, betrayed and slain on the 2nd of August, 651. His memory was ever held in love and veneration. His remains were lost sight of in the troubles of the times, until the Saint, appearing in glory, revealed their resting-place in the abbey of Tynemouth. Many cures were wrought and graces obtained at his shrine. Robert de Mowbray, a follower of William the Conqueror, completed the church of our Lady, into which the relics were with great pomp translated on the 20th of August, 1103. Oswin has always been honored as the patron Saint of Tynemouth.

St. Aidan used to travel about his diocese on foot, at the cost of much time, fatigue and even danger. The king, therefore gave him a valuable horse. Shortly afterwards the bishop, falling in with a beggar, gave the poor man the horse, rich trappings and all. This apparently uncalculated generosity vexed the king, and he remonstrated with St. Aidan, who therefore replied, "What, O king, is that fool of a mare dearer to you than a son of God?" The king soon came to himself, fell on his knees, and sought forgiveness with so much humility, that the bishop in turn exclaiming, said mournfully to a bystander, "I know well the king will not live, for never did I see a prince so humble. The nation is not worthy of him, and he will be taken from us."

ST. CECILIA, VIRGIN, MARTYR.

On the evening of her wedding day, "cantantibus organis," as the Church sings in her antiphon, with the music of the marriage hymn ringing in her ears, Cecilia, a rich, noble and beautiful Roman maiden, renewed the vow by which she had consecrated her virginity to God. "Pure be my heart and undefiled my flesh; for I have a spouse you know not of—an angel of my Lord." The heart of her young husband Valerian was moved by her words; he received baptism, and within a few days he and his brother Tiburtius, who had been brought by him to a knowledge of the faith, sealed their confession with their blood. Cecilia only remained. "Do you not know," was her answer to the threats of the prefect, "that I am the bride of my Lord Jesus Christ?" The death appointed for her was suffocation, and she remained a day and a night in a hot-air bath, heated seven times its wont. But as with the Three Children, so it was with her; "the flames had no power over her body, neither was a hair of her head singed." The licitor sent to despatch her struck with a trembling hand the three blows which the law allowed, and left her still alive. For two days and nights Cecilia lay with her head half severed on the pavement of her bath, fully sensible, and joyfully awaiting her crown on the third day.

The academic year is divided into two sessions of five months each. Board and tuition per academic year, including bed and bedding, washing, mending and doctor's fee, for each session, at current prices, $125.00. For further particulars apply to the President at the College, or to MR. F. POURSIKIN, n. 37 1/2 ly No. 140 Gravier street, New Orleans.

ST. CLEMENT OF ROME.

St. Clement is said to have been a convert of noble birth. The early Fathers identified him with the Clement whose name St. Paul declares to the Philippians was written in the Book of Life; and Tertullian assures us that Clement was consecrated bishop by St. Peter himself. Be that as it may, it is certain that he had seen the Apostles and conversed with them. With their divine words still ringing in his ears, he began to rule the Church of God; and thus he was among the first, as he was among the most illustrious, in the long line of those who have held the place and power of Peter. Clement entered on his high office in evil days. He lived at the same time and in the same city with Domitian, the persecutor of the Church; and besides external foes he had to contend with schism and rebellion from within. The Corinthian church was torn by intestine strife, and its members set the authority of their clergy at defiance. It was then that St. Clement interposed in the plenitude of his apostolic authority, and sent his famous epistle to the Christians. He urged the duties of charity, and above all of submission to the clergy. He did not speak in vain; peace and order were restored. St. Clement had done his work on earth, and shortly after sealed with his own blood the faith which he had learned from Peter and taught to the nations.

Would you learn how to venerate the teaching of the Church and of the Pope? Then look to the first days of the Church and to the disciples of the Apostles. Although the Corinthians had sinned by schism and rebellion, they were appeased when once the Pope had spoken, and they received Clement's letter almost as if it had been inspired. Not long after the middle of the second century, St. Dionysius tells us that in his time the epistle of Clement was still read publicly from time to time in the Corinthian Church, as they also read another letter recently received from one of St. Clement's successors; and long after we know that other churches showed a like reverence to St. Clement and his epistle.

ST. JOHN OF THE CROSS.

The father of St. John was discarded by his kindred for marrying a poor orphan, and the Saint, thus born and nurtured in poverty, chose it also for his portion. As a child he slept on the floor, and rose early that he might serve at mass before going to school, and people were moved to devotion by seeing his recollection before the altar. Unable to learn a trade, he became the servant of the poor in the hospital of Medina, while still pursuing his sacred studies. In 1563, being then twenty-one, he humbly offered himself as a lay brother to the Carmelite friars, who, however, knowing his talents, had him ordained priest. He would now have exchanged to the severe Carthusian Order, had not St. Theresa, with the instinct of a Saint, persuaded him to remain and help her in the reform of his own Order. Thus he became the first prior of the barefooted Carmelites. In his mystical works he describes the interior trials and consolations of a perfectly detached soul. His reform though approved by the general, was rejected by the elder friars, who condemned the Saint as a fugitive and apostate, and cast him into prison, whence he only escaped, after nine months' suffering, at the risk of his life. Twice again before his death, he was shamefully persecuted by his brethren, and publicly disgraced. But his complete abandonment by creatures only deepened his interior peace and devout longing for heaven.

When St. John was his last illness, he was given the choice of one of two convents, where he should repair for treatment. The one at Baza was convenient in every way, and the prior was his intimate friend. The other, at Ubeda, was distant and poor; and the prior, Fr. Diego, was his bitter enemy. He chose the latter. The fatigue of the journey increased the wounds in his leg which caused him intense pain; yet the prior locked him up for three months in a little cell, and forbade him all relief. Here he lingered till released by the Provincial a few days before his death, when the prior was himself converted by his invincible patience. Then the Saint prepared with joy to die, and crucifix in hand, with the words, "Glorify me to God!" he breathed forth his soul, A. D., 1591, being then forty-nine years old. St. Theresa says, "He was one of the purest souls in the Church of God."

THE ITALIAN CROPS.—The lovers of olives will be pleased to hear that the trees are quite overladen with this beautiful fruit. The vines, too, have exceeded their average production, and this year we may look forward to the beautiful new wine of Italy being offered to us at a nominal price. There is no doubt that the "Temperance Movement" requires no promotion in this country. Give an Italian half a bottle of cheap white wine, and he will make himself perfectly happy upon it for a whole evening, without the possibility of his overstepping the strictest bounds of propriety. I have lived in Italy a long time, and I have never yet seen a drunken native. The only case of intoxication I have ever come across was that of two Englishmen who accused me of procreation in this country.
