 Several New Changes Made in the Election Laws.
 The Democratic Convention To Convene at Hancock Tomorrow Afternoon—Other Twin City Happenings.

As the presidential or general election is coming on, and as there have been some important changes in the election law since the last election, it may be well at this time to call attention to two of the most important of these changes. In order to vote in Houghton county at the presidential election on November 3, next, one must of course be lawful age, and a citizen of the United States. He must also have resided six months in Michigan instead of three, as formerly, and must have lived twenty days, instead of ten, in the township in which he proposes to vote.

The democratic county convention will convene tomorrow afternoon at St. Patrick's Hall, Hancock. One of the party leaders interviewed as to the probable candidates for nomination to the different offices replied that the democratic party of Houghton county had arrived at that ideal situation of politics when the office was seeking the man and not vice versa.

David Haas, of Houghton, has been mentioned as a candidate for the democratic nomination for representative in district No. 2. He informs the News that he is not seeking the nomination, but should it be tendered him by the convention, he would accept and do his best to be elected.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Blandy will leave next week for Riverside, California, where they will make their home in the future. There are quite a number of former Houghton residents now living in Riverside. George and family will occupy the Blandy home during the winter.

bridges hanging in the air, as it were, across the roaring stream, an fantastic and unreal and entrancing as any "Arabian Nights" picture.
 It is only as it should be to find the people as fantastic as their high built town—so grisly and ghoulish, indeed, that it is hard to talk about them, so savage in their manners that they might drive the more timid traveler quickly away and back to civilization. When any one comes to drive across the great bridge from the appropriate point beneath, the sport of the leading citizens is to gather in crowds upon it and throw stones upon the rocky hillsides, starting an avalanche which makes the artist who has been foolish enough to go there drop his work and run for his life. Still, I suppose one must pay somehow for the privilege of visiting the most sensational place in Spain. Its wonderful position, its magnificent bridges, its beautiful little valleys, where the finest fruit in Spain is raised, its encircling crown of Sierra, make up to a certain extent for the discomfort of staying in its horrible boarding house among the savage brutes of its population.—Elizabeth Robins Fenimore in Century.

 Low Florida Land Turtles Are Lured Out of Their Holes.
 W. H. Gilbert, locksmith, astronomer, fisherman, scientist, hunter and capitalist, is a great fancier of gopher meat, and has thought of many ways of catching the game.
 Some time ago he learned that there was a family living in the northwestern part of the county which boasted of young men who could "sing" gophers out of their holes. He traveled many miles to ascertain if the report was really true.

The young men were reluctant at first to give an exhibition that might reveal their secret, but Mr. Gilbert had a number of persuasives along and finally they consented.
 The young man equipped themselves with a gunny sack and pointed stick about five feet long. A half mile from the house, in the wire grass of the rolling pine land, they found the hole of a gopher. They covered the entrance of the tunnel with a sack and planted the stick over about 20 feet away and one of them sang.

The way, as J. walked through it, seemed commonplace at first—commonplace, that is, for a southern town, where one accepts marvels of color and light as a thing of course. His impression was of a few glaring spots of donkeys and of a few low houses, as white one could hardly look at them, of glimpses into long, cool entries, where people were forever standing part of it is that until one comes to the bridge one does not know, except from the guidebook, that the gorge is there at all. A LITTLE MISTAKE.
 That doctors commit mistakes is not generally known, although cases from time to time find their way into the newspapers. Dr. Carpenter, who may be said to have introduced the scientific study of human physiology into England, burned himself to death while attempting to take a Turkish bath in his own room by enveloping himself in a blanket and sitting over a spirit lamp. However, when a man poisons himself it is his own peculiar business which is involved, but when he takes to poisoning others, not with any malicious intent, but simply in error, a natural apprehension may well pervade the public mind. Protection in the matter is extremely simple, as the following narrative will show:
 About 8 o'clock on a June evening a victoria drawn by a pair of high stepping bay horses drove up to a celebrated chemist's shop in Bond street, and an elegantly dressed lady of about 25 years of age descended from the carriage. She walked hurriedly through the shop into the dispensing department, and, throwing a piece of paper on the counter, said:
 "Please make up this prescription and send it at once. I would wait and take it myself, but I am just going out to dinner. It is very important."
 The assistant bowed, took up the prescription and then seemed to hesitate.
 "Well," said the lady, who seemed of a highly nervous, irritable disposition, "well, what is the matter?"
 "I am afraid, madam," returned the assistant, "that I cannot dispense this prescription."
 "Oh, nonsense!" replied the lady. "That is what they said at— in Mayfair, so I brought it out here. I suppose Dr. Blank knows what he prescribes."
 "Doubtless, madam; but although Dr. Blank is one of the most eminent of his profession, I dare not make up this prescription, as the strength at which the drug is here ordered is not allowed by the British pharmacopoeia."
 "Oh, nonsense!" repeated the lady, commencing to patter on the floor with her small foot. "This is monstrous. Here is my husband waiting for medicine of the utmost importance to his condition, and two chemists' assistants think they know better what is good for him than one of the leading men of the College of Physicians. Give me the prescription, and I will get it prepared elsewhere." The assistant was loath to part with the paper.
 "If you will allow me, madam," he said, "I will take a cab to Dr. Blank's, and if he confirms the prescription I will then prepare it."
 "No, I will not," returned the lady, who was now in a state of extreme irritation. "I will not in a state of extreme irritation. I have already lost half an hour, and I cannot have further delay." With that she snatched up the prescription and hurried out.
 The assistant was seriously perturbed. The mistake in the prescription was a grave one—so grave indeed that the administration of a single dose would probably prove fatal within two hours. It was possible that some young or inexperienced assistant at some small chemist's, overruled by the great name of the physician and by the lady's imperious manner and elegant attire and equipage, would be found to dispense it. Then trouble would ensue, which might be stopped now. Thinking thus, the assistant told his fellow worker in the dispensary that he would go to Dr. Blank's, and, hurrying into Bond street, jumped into the first passing hansom, and in five minutes was ringing the bell of the doctor's house in Harley street. The footman who opened the door said Dr. Blank was out.
 "Where was he?"
 "Really the footman did not know. 'Very important, was it?'"
 "Ah! Well, then, he (the footman) must inquire. This he leisurely proceeded to do. And the chemist's assistant, who was of an imaginative turn, amused himself by picturing meanwhile the death of the patient; the professional ruin of himself, the Mayfair chemist and the great physician; the grief and self reproach of the lady, who, despite her wayward, irritable and careless demeanor, was evidently fond of her husband. And he had already arrived at the coroner's jury's verdict of manslaughter when the footman returned with the intelligence that his master was dining in Maida Vale. The cab soon whirled the errand knight of the postle and mortar into the Edgeware road and drew up at one of the large houses which lie on the right hand side of Maida Vale immediately after passing the canal. Dinner the footman touched his hat and stood waiting for his passenger to alight. Finding at length there was no one visible, he besought a few blessings on the second door who had imposed upon him, re-mounted his box and was about to drive off when Rieb, who had been watching, vaulted back into the vehicle, and, putting his head out, asked, "Where the devil are you driving to?" Almost paralyzed with fear, the driver got down again, but could not be persuaded to take his fare, though he was offered a shilling for himself, exclaiming: "No, no! That won't do. I know you too well for all your shoes and so, Mr. Devil, for once you're outwitted."—Somerville.

 Topic.—Why I believe in the atonement.—Hab. ix, 11-28.
 The doctrine of the atonement is one of the most precious doctrines of the Bible. It is the belief that Christ died for us, that by His death on the cross, as an expiatory sacrifice, He paid the penalty of our sins, satisfied divine justice and reconciled us to God. It is an important doctrine and because of its importance we should know why we believe in it. Taking its importance into consideration, it is a matter of satisfaction that there are so many and such positive proofs that the Bible teaches this doctrine. Upon these proofs our belief in this truth is founded.

The atonement is prophesied and God fulfills prophecy. Only one instance of prophecy need be quoted—the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, which undoubtedly refers to Christ's atoning death. "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon Him and with His stripes we are healed" (verse 5). Language could not be more definite or plain. Christ's death for us is distinctly prophesied in this chapter. God fulfills prophecy, and this was fulfilled by the death of Christ on the cross of Calvary.

The Old Testament sacrifices were expiatory and pointed to Christ. The names of these sacrifices prove their character. They were called sin offerings, trespass offerings—that is, offerings made by sinners on account of sin. They are said to bear the sins of offenders and to secure God's forgiveness by the shedding of blood by giving life for life. These sacrifices were the type of the sacrifice of Christ, who once offered Himself up, and if they were expiatory it necessarily follows that the sacrifice of Christ would possess the same character.

The New Testament declares positively that Christ's death was expiatory. In Rom. iii, 25 Paul says Christ is set as "a propitiation (an expiatory sacrifice) through faith in His blood." In Gal. i, 4 he says that Christ "gave Himself for our sins." The writer of Hebrews says that were "sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." John says that Jesus Christ "is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the world." Peter speaks of Christ as He "who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree." No other theory will explain the death of Christ. God would not have given Christ to pay a debt to Satan, or to teach us by example to live a life of sacrifice, or to show His idea of the majesty of the law. Christ's death must have been necessary to atone for the sins of the world or He would never have died.

Measuring Medicine.
 Use a medicine glass with the amount of each spoonful and drop marked upon it. Teaspoonfuls and tablespoonfuls are always mentioned, but as these vary in size it is not safe to rely upon them. Drops, too, cannot be properly measured without a glass.
 Keep the medicine glass perfectly clean. It should be washed out after each dose, in readiness for the next time. It is desirable that if the patient is to have medicine with a strong smell, etc., to keep a glass specially for them, letting it soak in hot water for half an hour after use to remove all disagreeable odor. It is impossible to cleanse such a glass in a few moments.
 When the medicine is being poured out, hold the label uppermost, in order that it may not become stained with any drops escaping down the side of the bottle.
